INDEX TO REAL ESTATE RECORD.

VOL. XXXIII. JANUARY——JUNE. 1884.

The following Index of the Conveyances and New Buildings for New York City and Kings County, as published in THE REAL ESTATE RECORD during the first six months of 1884, will be found of great utility and value by those of our readers who have preserved all the copies of this paper during that period. Great care has been observed to keep the Index up to the same perfect standard as in the past. The pages are given on which all transfers of realty can immediately be found and the streets and avenues are sub-divided so that very few references are required; for instance, transfers of property on Allen street appear in twelve numbers during the six months, which in the Index are sub-divided into six parts of the street, so that the least possible trouble need be incurred, a transfer being found by referring to but three or four pages, provided it is known between what streets the property is located. The Projected Buildings are indexed in a similar manner, enabling all to readily ascertain on what streets improvements have been made Those desirous of keeping a permanent file for reference should see that all the numbers are complete, and have them bound. A suitable binder can be had at the office of THE RECORD AND GUIDE, 191 Broadway, corner of Dey street, price one dollar.

THE RECORD AND GUIDE.

191 Broadway, N. Y.

TERMS:

ONE YEAR, in advance, SIX DOLLARS.

Communications should be addressed to

C. W. SWEET, 191 Broadway.

J. T. LINDSEY, Business Manager.

JANUARY 5, 1884.

During the past two months the subscription list of THE RECORD AND GUIDE has been very largely increased. We have not had so many additions to our regular readers since March, 1881. There is not, just now, any particular interest in real estate, but THE RECORD AND GUIDE caters for other specialties equally important. The business depression is causing so many failures that credits are being watched as never before; hence the importance to bankers and creditors of the information published in these columns. Then this paper is in demand in the "street" and in stock circles for its sane and candid judgments as to the values of railway securities. We have been able to tell the truth without prejudice, and those who followed our advice have saved their money. For proof of this we refer to our warnings for the last three years as to the danger of investing in Northern Pacific bonds and stock. Of course, the organization of a Real Estate Exchange will make THE RECORD AND GUIDE indispensable to all who own or deal in realty in New York or its neighborhood. This will be an active year in real estate, though the market for the coming spring may be a declining one, in sympathy with the general condition of the trade of the country.

If Mr. Villard has really lost all his fortune, people who have not been injured by his management of their money will be disposed to think well of him. He carried through a great enterprise and if he sacrificed his own as well as his friends' means his judgment may be impugned but not his honesty. But he will never amount to much in the "street" again. In that locality it is those who keep their money—not those who lose it—are treated with consideration.

The "Ticker" is still out of repair but its operator believes that January will not be so good a month for the bears as was December. He said so during all of last month but he added that while prices might be better the bulls must not expect any boom. While the general outlook was not good a reaction from the late depression was in order.

The Huntington-Colton letters are painful reading. They show that the representatives of great corporations, such as Gould, Scott and Huntington, have for years been packing committees of Congress in corporation interests and bribing Representatives and Senators. Such men are traitors to the Republic; they are our most dangerous public enemies, but it must be confessed that the most disheartening sign of the times is the apathy of press and public in face of these startling disclosures. They seem to be taken as a matter of course.

The Ramapo water scheme is said to be backed by ex-Mayor Cooper and Congressman Hewitt. It does not seem practicable, however, and the Sinking Fund Commissioners would not be justified in putting the city to the expense of taking water from Jersey, thirty miles away, when there is so much of it available in the North and East Rivers right at our doors. Fire Commissioner Purroy's scheme for utilizing the river and bay water in case of a great fire has the merit of being inexpensive. He would use the two splendid fire tugs of the Fire Department, which could pump sufficient water into movable tanks to supply all the available engines of the department. By all means let this simple and apparently efficient plan be tried. It will not, in any event, cost much.

Ninety millions of dollars was paid out during the past year by the insurance companies to cover losses by fires. The total expenditure for offices, brokerage and losses on policies amounted to about $150,000,000. This is a clear loss to the nation and costs each of the ten million families of the United States fifteen dollars per annum. It is a favorite idea with some European statesmen, Gladstone and Bismarck among others, that each nation should monopolize its own fire and life insurance business. It would thus save salaries, costly buildings and premiums, and could fix such rates as to make it unprofitable for owners of dwellings and stores to burn down their holdings. Fully one-half the fires are the result of incendiarism.

Real Estate and Building, Past and Present.

In accordance with our usual custom at this season of the year, we give herewith a series of tables showing the condition of the real estate market during the past as compared with previous years. The retrospect is, on the whole, satisfactory. Realty as these figures show has had no such setback as stocks and manufactured products. The following table gives the number of transfers, the amounts paid and the average price per conveyance since and including 1873.

Year.	No. of Cons.	Amount paid.	Av'ge price per con.
1874	6,191	114,197,609	18,445 75
1875	6,347	99,025,562	15,601 95
1876	6,384	86,738,805	13,601 85
1877	6,179	71,469,285	11,566 49
1878	6,029	64,119,187	10,635 12
1879	8,969	85,568,913	9,539 97
1880	9,588	111,666,636	11,646 45
1881	11,678	148,219,490	12,692 18
1882	9,975	170,764,163	17,119 21
1883	9,692	160,849,303	16,596 09

But the above does not include the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth wards, in other words, the annexed district beyond the Harlem. In 1882 compared with 1883 the Conveyances for the whole city were as follows:

	Conveyances.	Consideration.
1883	11,040	165,192,848

It will be seen from the figures that while the number of Conveyances was about the same, the money payments were less; the average price of each transaction fell off from $17,119.21 to $16,596.09.

The following table gives the details for each month of the past two years:

CONVEYANCES.

1882.	Conveys.	Amount.	Nom.	23d & 24th W.	Amount.	Nom
January	785	$13,970,643	190	102	$260,735	22

The large number of Conveyances for which there was only a nominal consideration will attract attention. It would seem to indicate that the total sum paid for real property was much larger than the figures given in the above table. But it must be borne in mind that in many cases the deeds recorded in the Register's office are misleading. Dishonest traders and speculators put in fictitious sums to sell out to ill-informed purchasers, or to secure loans at exorbitant valuations. In many cases where the sale is called nominal there is really no consideration, the property passing from hand to hand to conceal the name of the real borrower.

1883	$23,893,519

From the above figures it will be noticed that although last year, as a whole, compares very well with the previous year, yet the last six months of 1883 shows a decided falling off. The year we have just entered upon does not promise to make a good comparison with either 1882 or 1883. The following estimated classified table is also interesting:

The plans for alterations to old structures filed during 1883 represent an aggregate in cost of $4,540,885, against $4,267,181 for the previous year.

For the purpose of showing the rapid growth of the city, as represented yearly in the plans filed, the following figures for the last ten years are given. These relate only to the estimated cost of new buildings in the years named:

Year.	Estimated cost.	Year.	Estimated cost.

1878	15,219,680	1883	43,214,3 6
Total ten years			$262,404,450

A city paper argues that the actual cost of houses is much larger than the estimates, and therefore that the official figures are mis leading. Now, it is quite true that in great building enterprises, such as apartment houses, churches and the like, the architects' estimates are nearly always below the true figures; yet it is also true that some of the plans filed are never even commenced, and when builders construct their own edifices they often cost less than the official estimates at the Building Department.

But the above figures show that New York is growing ra idly. There may be a check for a year or two, but there will be no step backward. There will not be so many costly houses built this year, perhaps not next year, but there will be a great deal of building notwithstanding, more than in any other city in the Union.

After all, people who confined their dealings to real estate during the past year fared much better than those who put up margins on stocks, cotton, or grain. It is true some builders have lost money, and people who were forced to sell did not do as well as they could wish, but there was no such tremendous losses in realty as in stocks. A well-known builder went out of business in 1881. He foresaw that the high priced houses, with which his name was associated, would not sell as well as they had done in 1879 and 1880 so he drifted into Wall street and dabbled in stocks. He lost in the Western Union deal, he owns a thousand shares of Metropolitan, for which he paid a higher price than he ever may receive for it, and he purchased Ontario & Western at 32 for which there is now scarcely any market. Yet this builder is a cautious, careful operator. Had he continued building he might have lost some money, but nothing like the sums his stock operations have cost him, and his experience is that of thousands of others. The moral to be drawn from this example is that although the outlook in the building trade may not be very good, it is far better than the prospects in Wall street. A shoemaker should stick to his last.

Some Up-Town Buildings.

It is difficult to talk about Mr. Villard's house without going into reflections, which may be highly moral and instructive, but are irrelevant to architecture, the more that architecturally there is so little to be said about it. The scheme is of an unusual amplitude and liberality and is very liberally carried out. The giving up of a whole block to three houses in the fashionable quarter of the city, is unexampled except in the Vanderbilt houses, where the three houses appear architecturally as two. The arrangement of the Villard houses is much better—a deep court with a house at the back and one on each flank—much more expressive, since the architecture distinctly explains the relations of the buildings, and abstractly more artistic since a proportion cannot exist with less than three terms or a group with less than three members.

Another great advantage that the Villard houses have over the Vanderbilt houses is that they have roofs, and although without roofs they would be as merely boxes as the others, the tiled roofs, although only of moderate pitch, give each of the three buildings some form and connect the three into a composition. Except in this general grouping, however, there is no more composition than in the Vanderbilt houses. The openings on the outer walls, on the projected ends and on the return of the walls in the court are equally spaced and aligned over each other. In the wall at the back of the court there is some attempt at composition. Below there is a logga of five round arches, turned between columns now boxed, but presumably of polished granite, and the openings above are grouped in three pairs. The simplicity of the treatment elsewhere is probably meant as a foil to this, but the simplicity is so pervading and the more elaborate treatment so little elaborate, that the foil is the conspicuous part, and makes the whole aspect of the pile dumpish and monotonous. This aspect is not relieved by the decoration, which is very sparing and consists chiefly of sinking the round-arched windows in panels, and decorating the spandrels in a conventional and somewhat tiresome way. The treatment of detail, as well as the general scheme, is suggested by the Florentine palaces of the fifteenth century. But the building lacks the massiveness of its prototypes, and the relation between the stories which made them effective; and even the irrational application of "orders" would be an agreeable relief to its monotony. The horizontal divisions are emphasized, but this emphasis does not relieve the monotony of the facades which, assuming the existing division of openings, could only have been effected by a differentiation in the treatment of the different divisions. The joints of the basement are beveled, but that does not difference it sensibly from the wall above. A really bold and massive treatment of the basement, with an enrichment of the attic story, which is now only a series of square holes, would have effected this differentiation, even if the second and third stories were left as they are. The cornice is rich, but its enrichment is too small in scale to be effectual. The general effect of the houses thus is that they are big and tiresome and as unnoticeable as so big a pile can be. But then they are in no way offensive and can never come to look trivial or vulgar, and this, with the gratifying liberality of the plan and of its execution, must be scored as a mild success.

Directly opposite the Villard houses are the new residences or offices of the Cathedral, which are in the coarse and glaring white marble of which that great structure itself is built. The glare will disappear after a while, to be replaced by an unvenerable dirtiness. The architecture conforms to that of the Cathedral, and would not be noticeable except for the absurd way in which all grace of outline is destroyed by clapping on over the gables of the building a great black pan of a mansard roof. The little gable of a dormer may be relieved against a roof in this way without offense, but here there are gables half as wide as the building, which have no meaning whatever, except as the ends of roofs, and when a mansard roof is clapped on over them simply stick out and look foolish, as confessed pieces of made architecture, besides destroying all the grace of outline which would have been gained if the buildings had been roofed as its walls assert that it was meant to be roofed. Whether this absurdity is the architect's fault—which is difficult to believe—or that of his client's, it is to be hoped that there is enough perception of architectural proprieties among the clergy and laity of the archdiocese to insist upon the removal of these monstrosities, which vulgarize not only the buildings they cover, but the more important building to which they are appendages, and to replace them with respectable roofs.

In Fifth avenue, between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh streets, is a twenty-five-foot house with a visible roof, for which we are duly grateful. The roof is very simple, being simply a slope, not of an extragavant pitch, perhaps not more than 45 degrees back from the wall, but it is enough to take away the look of a screen from this wall and substitute the look of an enclosure. How comparatively respectable would even the brown stone front look if it were surmounted by such a roof and the sheet-metal cornice ripped away. Look at the old warehouses along the East River and compare them with their modern, flat-roofed neighbors to see what a difference this would make. Besides the roof of this Fifth avenue house, the wall is divided so as to give it some character. It is a basement and four stories, a bay window running through two stories and taking up nearly two-thirds, the narrower division having the front door and a small opening over it corresponding to the second story of the bay. In the third story is a large open arch, giving access to the roof of the bay, which thus becomes a balcony, and a narrow opening above the doorway. Then comes an emphatic string course, and a fourth story of three grouped openings, round-headed, above the bay, and one similar opening on the narrow side. This conversion of the front into a single feature is effective, in spite of the neglect of the detail, which has no force, being unmodelled, flat and shallow, and imparting these characteristics to the front, which is saved in spite of them by having an intelligible division into superior and subordinate parts, and especially by being crowned with a visible roof.

Our Prophetic Department.

INVESTOR—Now, Sir Oracle, I want you to give me a general view of the situation, such as was published in THE RECORD AND GUIDE during January of last year. Those who have files of the paper, by rereading them now, will see they would have saved money had they followed the advice contained in your conversations in the beginning of the year 1883. I recall the warnings you uttered about the Northern Pacific securities and all the "wilderness" roads, and your prediction that the acceptance of the gold unit of value by the commercial nations would cause a steady shrinkage in all prices, as well as severe distress in all the money markets of the world. This has truly been a year of shrinkage and disaster, not only in the United States but in Europe. A writer in the Sun of last Monday quotes almost the very words you used last January. Says "Rigolo:"

The year which closes to-day will remain a memorable one in the annals, not only of Wall street, but of all the Stock Exchanges of the world. The depression of business is quite as great in Paris, London, Amsterdam and Frankfort as it is in New York. The tumble in prices has not been as heavy in English and German securities, but the American securities held abroad fell as much there as they fell at home, while France had a long list of stocks wiped out, and another quite as long showing a fall of 25 to 50 per cent. New York managed, however, to avoid a crash like the one Paris had in the beginning of the year, and went through the process of liquidation and depreciation in a gradual and orderly manner, which would be a cause for pride to much older communities. It seems almost incredible that a shrinkage of over one thousand millions of dollars in investment values should have taken place, not only without a panic, but even without any considerable individual failure.

SIR ORACLE—It is usual for journals to review the history of the past and anticipate the history of the future year early in January. But really it is not a good time for a forecast. Our business year commences with the gathering of the crops, and the prudent operator delays forming a judgment until a session of Congress ends, or until all the crops are gathered in and their value estimated. The political and industrial data is then in shape for guiding the judgment. Any forecast made now might be rendered misleading by some action of the government, while a crop failure would negative any hopeful view that might be taken of the situation.

INVESTOR—Will this be a "bull" or a "bear" year? If I had one or two hundred thousand dollars would it be wise to invest them in securities at present prices?

SIR O.—While I think that first-class securities are selling abnormally low and while I believe there will be a better feeling soon—temporarily at least, and while still further I hold that the purchase of first-class securities would yield a permanent profit at present prices, I must confess that I do not look hopefully upon the future. The United States depends for its prosperity exclusively upon its agricultural productions. This is the key to our industrial system. Increased acreage, large crops and good prices give us good times; a stationary acreage, moderate crops and low prices bad times. The former was our happy condition from '78 to '81. The latter has prevailed from '81 to the close of '83. Since 1879 our population has increased 13½ per cent., our railroad mileage nearly 40 per cent., while the acreage under cultivation has only increased 9¼ per cent. Cotton production has increased but 4 per cent., and the production of grain in the same time has decreased 5 per cent. During this same period our manufacturing industry has increased enormously, but the exact figures will not be known until the census of 1890. In other words we have a larger non-agricultural population to support with a relatively lessened agricultural production, a smaller surplus to sell to the rest of the world and at lower rates. The nation is not getting richer, but relatively poorer. Hence the distress which will be continuous unless some unforeseen changes take place.

INVESTOR—Name a possible circumstance that might alter the situation.

SIR O.—A war in Europe would give us better prices for agricultural products and create a demand for our metals, firearms and other productions. And such war may occur next year, for European diplomacy leads to trains of dynamite. Then, if Congress should spend the national surplus and use our credit in building a navy or creating a merchant marine, in providing harbor defences and improving our waterways—in other words if Uncle Sam became a great employer, there would be an immediate revival in business. Again, should the commercial nations come to an agreement to rehabilitate silver and make it a money metal freely coined at a fixed ratio with gold there would be a revival of industry all over the world; but of these three possibilities the war is the only one probable, and that may be staved off. Put me down as a "bear" until some new general conditions changes the aspect of affairs.

INVESTOR—Please forecast what may occur should none of the three factors mentioned be brought into play.

SIR O.—There may be a rally in prices some time during January, but on the whole I look for a rather "blue" year up to the gathering of next summer's crop. Workmen are being discharged from all the great employing establishments, wages are being reduced, and this will result in a still greater stagnation in business. It is safe to estimate that there are some ten millions of working people in the United States; this includes men, women and children. Suppose the wages they have averaged is $15 a week. The hard times will throw many out of employment and reduce the wages of others. Suppose now the reduction in the wages paid should be $3 a person, that is $30,000,000 weekly, $120,000,000 a month and $1,440,000,000 a year, less money would be spent for the necessaries of life, This, in itself, is a terrific shortage, and at once affects the employing classes who produce for consumption. This will in time drive people from the large cities, and force them to go to work on the land. The hard times from 1873 to 1878, were a blessing in disguise, for during those six years the grain acreage increased 52 per cent. and the cotton acreage 33 per cent. Since 1878 the yearly increase of cultivated acreage has been only 2½ per cent.

INVESTOR—These be rather gloomy views, Sir Oracle. Would not the liberalizing of our tariff help matters by giving us a foreign market for our now unsalable domestic manufactured products?

SIR O.—I see the Herald and other newspapers are harping upon free trade as a panacea for the present national ills, but I notice we were prosperous enough from 1878 to 1881 with the present high tariff. I believe myself in a more liberal scale of duties, but it is clear that revenue reform or approximate free trade will do us little good for several years to come. Should the House pass a revenue reform bill it may be negatived by a Republican Senate, or vetoed by a Republican President. It is very evident that a really radical reform of the tariff will be impossible until the Democrats have control of the executive as well as the legislative departments of the government, and even if everything should be favorable this cannot occur until 1886. Our concern is with 1884, and not with what may occur two years later. No, I cannot say that I look upon the immediate future as at all hopefully.

INVESTOR—Turning from the question of general prices, what is your forecast as to specialties, such as the cereals and cotton?

SIR O.—The chances seem to me to be against holders of wheat. Our stock in this country is quite large, and although prices are very low there is no export demand. The fall of the year closed with the winter wheat looking very well, and it has a covering of snow which will protect it till the spring opens. Then all the world is now competing with us in sending small grain to the west of Europe. Russia, Hungary, Austria and Egypt is forwarding more yearly to the markets of the West, while India can be depended on hereafter for a relatively enormous supply. Wheat is kept up in this country in sympathy with corn, which is unexpectedly short, only some 400,000,000 bushels more than the year of the drought which killed the corn. I should not want to speculate on the "long" side of wheat, unless there was a foreign war. There is a shortage of cotton of over 900,000 bales as compared with last year, but the speculative operator is likely to make more on the "bear" than on the "bull" side. Those who use cotton clothing all over the world are not prosperous, and the markets are glutted. Should the French get into serious trouble with the Chinese there will be a fall in cotton goods, and raw cotton might temporarily, at least, be sold for 8 cents a pound. With the shrinkage of prices going on everywhere due to the operation of the gold unit of value you may put me down as a "bear" in everything. I say the wise man will convert all his possessions into money, which every day is growing in value.

Construction companies will not be so popular in the future as they have been in the past. They were a French invention, and the first use of them in this country was in the famous Credit Mobilier, which built the Union Pacific Road. Similar companies have been used in nearly every railroad constructed since that time. They have been so profitable that the stock was usually absorbed by insiders and its price rarely quoted. After the roads were completed the owners of the construction stock received handsome dividends in the bonds and stock of the new company. But the good reputation of any security is sure to be taken advantage of to exploit investors. First-mortgage bonds were so good a thing previous to 1873 that cautious investors did not fear to subscribe, as the bondholders up to that time got complete possession of the new road in the event of default, but the insiders in 1873 were so largely interested in the junior mortgages and stocks of the various new enterprises that the latter were kept alive at the expense of the first-mortgage bondholders. This was notably true of the Chesapeake & Ohio Road, the first-mortgage bonds of which corporation were scaled to help the other securities, which the bondholders naturally supposed would have been wiped out in case of default. And now the good reputation of construction stocks is gone forever, after the experiences of investors in Oregon Transcontinental and North River Construction. Both were in eager demand at one time, the one at 95 and the other at 130. During the last week these stocks have sold respectively at 30 and 20. In other words, they turned out worse than the wildest wildcats of all the so-called securities dealt in on the market. Railroads will continue to be built of course, but some other device than construction companies must be resorted to to swindle investors out of their money.

Register Reilly's attention is called to certain abuses which grew up under his predecessor's regime which should be promptly corrected. One of them was the practice of keeping back the publication of certain deeds in the interest of dishonest operators in real estate. As soon as a deed is sent into the Register's office for record it is public property and should be at once placed at the disposition of the profession and the press. But certain law firms and speculators, for objectionable purposes, have had the power to pidgeon-hole the deeds for weeks after they were entered for record. The daily press have not been aware of the fraud put upon them in this matter but they would make it hot for the Register who would wink at such practices were their attention called to it. Mr. Reilly is a popular man; he has been President of the Board of Aldermen and a member of the Board of Estimates and Apportionment. He has an excellent past and a promising future, neither of which he can afford to sacrifice in the interests of gangs of conscienceless speculators who seek to currupt his subordinates and shame him.

Concerning Men and Things.

It is said Mr. Abbey, while he will lose $60,000 by the opera, will make $400,000 by his Henry Irving, Mary Anderson and Grand Opera House enterprises.

George W. Van Siclen is coming to the front as one of the best posted real estate lawyers in New York. What he don't know about Conveyances, Mortgages, Land Associations, etc., is not worth knowing. He is a descendant of one of the old Dutch families which first settled upon this island.

The theatres are nearly all in a bad way. The Star Theatre, Wallack's, the Grand Opera House and Madison Square are the only ones which pay expenses. When times are depressed caterers for the amusement of the public are the first to suffer. The theatrical business has been rather overdone in this city of late years, yet the out-of-town companies have done worse than those which appeared in the metropolis.

The Sun office is furnishing candidates for all sorts of official positions. One of its editoral writers, Mr. Bartlett, is now a Supreme Court Judge. Mr. Hendricks, one of its reporters, came near being elected Mayor of Brooklyn, and now Amos Cummings is spoken of by the Times as an Aqueduct Commissioner in place of Mr. Lane. This candidate has a very peculiar reputation. He is a first-class humorist, was a friend of Tweed's and was retired from the position of managing editor of the Sun by Mr. Dana, because—well—because water is not Mr. Cummings, strong point.

Miss A. Hooper, the daughter of the famous Paris correspondent, Mrs. Lucy H. Hooper, is on a visit to her own country, which she has not seen since she was a child. She is a bright, handsome brunette, a good amateur actress and reader in French and English, and an unusually intelligent as well as charming young lady. She reports business in France as being very bad. The Republic, she thinks, will last some time longer, not because the people like it but from the fact that there is no one imposing personality among the imperialist or royalist leaders to rally the nation in opposition to the anarchial factions who are now mismanaging the French nation.

General Horace Porter is considered to be one of the most humorous after-dinner speakers in the country. Unlike Chauncey M. Depew, his rival, he rarely says anything sensible or solid. His forte is amusing exaggeration, delivered in a grave and unconscious manner. His after-dinner efforts, however, never equalled the wild extravagance of his statements touching the value of North River Construction stock. He gave repeated assurances that it would finally be worth $200 a share to the fortunate holders; yet this same stock sold recently for $20. This has proved rather a serious joke for those who did not understand the peculiar character of General Porter's humor. He is, it seems, one of the men the poet speaks of, who can "smile and smile" and be—a railroad president.

The successful defiance of the Sunday laws by the committee who had charge of the Bartholdi Loan Exhibition practically settles the question of the secularization of the Sabbath so far as picture galleries and libraries are concerned. The first to interfere with our Sunday laws were the opera impresarios, whose concerts were often nothing but operas in disguise. The Bishop exhibition of American pictures is now open every Sunday and it is understood the water-color exhibition will follow the new precedent. In Boston the free library is open to all comers on the Sabbath, and whether the fact is to be regretted or not the tendency in all large cities is to make the seventh day one of recreation rather than of exclusive religious observance. The churches themselves have helped this tendency by intermitting afternoon services and the attention they have paid to furnishing choice music to church goers. It is art, musical and pictorial, which has become the rival of the religious instinct as formulated in Sabbath observances.

The Suburban Rapid Transit Company and Its Future.

The following interesting conversation recently took place between the writer and a director of the Suburban Rapid Transit Company. There was no thought of an interview on either side when the conversation commenced, but the talk was of so important a character that the writer thought that the readers of THE RECORD AND GUIDE should know its substance. The verbal accuracy of the following conversation is not vouched for, but the substance of what was said is, it may be stated, fairly and fully given.

WRITER—Why the delay in beginning the Rapid Transit Road in the annexed district?

DIRECTOR—There has been no delay except such as was inevitable in the prosecution of a really important undertaking. The key to the situation was a bridge over the Harlem River at Second avenue. This is now under way, and the piers will be in place by next October. This is the most serious part of the construction. Indeed we have already been delayed a month on account of the defects of the river bottom, which necessitated dredging in order to commence the foundation of one of the piers. The bridge will not be completed until the spring of 1885.

W.—Who will own this bridge and what corporations will have the right to use it?

D.—It belongs to our company, and arrangements will be made permitting the New Haven Road to use it. I suppose that under the general railway law any company which has tracks laid to the Harlem River adjacent can have the use of the bridge, under an equitable consideration to be fixed by arbitrators.

W.—But what other impediments were in the way besides the lack of a bridge?

D.—Well, to be quite frank, the Manhattan-Metropolitan imbroglio has retarded our work. Had that been settled a year ago we would have been under full headway, for the slightest consideration will show that the Suburban Rapid Transit Road must have direct affiliations with the elevated system of this city to be of any value to its stockholders or the public. Take, for instance, this matter of the bridge. The Manhattan Company controlled the southern side of the Harlem River and we had to get its consent before giving out the contracts. Mr. Jay Gould was seen finally, and he consented. He told us to go ahead.

W.—What, in your judgment, will be the issue of this Manhattan-Metropolitan fight?

D.—I know the people on both sides, and have had a good deal to do with law, lawyers and courts during the past five years. I have, moreover, followed the case before Judge Van Brunt with the greatest care, and I believe the Manhattan Company will score a complete and overwhelming victory. Jay Gould's head is very level. If there was any conspiracy Kneeland and his friends have failed to prove it. I would not be surprised were Judge Van Brunt to dismiss the case before the defence was heard. Whatever moral grievance Mr. Kneeland and his friends may have they legally have not a leg to stand upon. As a matter of equity the Metropolitan cannot claim to come in upon equal terms with the east side elevated. It is the latter which is doing the enormous business. The Second avenue road of the Metropolitan nets a heavy loss, while the Sixth avenue part of the system—being much longer than the Third avenue road—pays only a small profit. There is no equity in the demand of Kneeland that it should be treated as well in the final distribution of profits as the east side road. Indeed, as I understand it, the Metropolitan people only demand eight per cent. guaranteed, but the Manhattan party—headed by Gould—offer only four per cent. Should the Metropolitan be beaten by showing they have no case, before Judge Van Brunt, a basis may be offered for settlement, and the Metropolitan may get six per cent. But Mr. Gould is a very hard man at a bargain, and he said from the first that this matter must be fought out and settled by the courts.

W.—But is not the prospective value of the Metropolitan system quite as great as that of the east side elevated?

D.—Why, sir, the business on the Third avenue line is growing enormously. The trains are in each other's way. Indeed, it can no longer be called rapid transit, as it takes forty-five minutes to go from South Ferry to the Harlem River. The people of Harlem and the annexed district want something much quicker than this, which in time may be supplied by the Second avenue elevated road. When the bridge over the Harlem River is built, and the New Haven and other roads are connected directly with the Second avenue system, I suppose that the latter will then become remunerative—largely so, for it will no doubt have through trains, or at least trains that stop at intervals of one or two miles, and which will convey passengers from the Harlem River to South Ferry in twenty to twenty-five minutes. Now you can understand why we have been delayed in the construction of the bridge. The Manhattan people probably did not want the full capacities of the Second avenue road to be developed until the law suits were ended. If the quarrel should finally be referred to arbitrators, or argued before the Court of Appeals, it was what the Metropolitan had earned, and not what it might earn under changed conditions, which would be the basis of settlement. The New York Elevated, bear in mind, does the largest business, considering its length, of any railroad in the world.

W.—You have had a good deal of local opposition to fight. What was the difficulty with John B. Haskin & Company? Where was the point of their criticism?

D.—They wanted a line up the Third avenue on the other side of the bridge. That is, as you know, an eighty-foot street, and had we adopted that line, the company would have been ruined. We took legal advice and were assured that every owner along the line of Third avenue would have a just claim for damages. Hence in laying out a route for the Suburban Rapid Transit we have purchased the right of way or secured it, and through regions as yet unsettled, where there is no chance for claims of damage. The wisdom of our course has since been justified by the verdict which has been rendered against the Manhattan Company by Judge Ingraham and the jury, which assessed damages for losses claimed by a physician on Fifty-third street and Sixth avenue.

W.—And you really think that wherever injury to property can be proved that the elevated roads are liable to damages?

D.—Yes; that is my judgment.

W.—But as the elevated system has been of vast advantage to the city, as it has increased the value of property on the East and West side, do I understand that while they are liable for the damage done they get no advantage from the property whose value they have increased?

D.—That is the way in which we understand the law. It is hard upon the "L" road, but in drawing our plans for the Suburban Rapid Transit we have kept this in mind. Hence we have paid no heed to the protests of those who insisted we should run the risk of these heavy legal claims for damages.

W.—When do you expect to commence work in earnest on the actual construction of your lines?

D.—Just as soon as the legal complications between the Metropolitan and Manhattan systems are settled. We will connect with the former system at One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street, with the New York & Western, as well as the Harlem Road, and with the Second avenue elevated.

W.—You spoke a short time since of other roads using the Second avenue bridge.

D.—There are, as you must know, a number of projects for new railways connecting distant points with New York. There is the New York, Danbury & Boston, in which Major Bergholz is interested; the East River & Connecticut (here the director mentioned five other companies, the names of which the writer does not recall). Representatives of these organizations wanted us to make special terms with them. They must all use our tracks to get access to New York city, but we have declined all entangling alliances, and have referred applicants to the general railway law, which forces us to connect with any company, after a fair basis of settlement is reached by arbitration. Undoubtedly this will be a source of profit to our road when constructed, for New York is extending its relations with many other parts of the country not now reached by railways.

W.—What is your judgment about rapid transit in Brooklyn. Will that system, when built, connect directly with the New York system via the Brooklyn Bridge?

D.—There will be trouble in view if this enormous business is added to that already crowding the east side elevated. I do not think there will be any immediate connection of the two systems, but Brooklyn will, of course, have its elevated roads.

W.—How about the proposed cable roads in New York city?

D.—I do not know much about them, but if they will supply facilities for transportation on the west side up-town, along the piers of the two rivers, and on transverse roads running east and west, they will be a great public benefit. We want some kind of rapid communication on at least twenty streets, running from the East to the North River, and between the Battery and Harlem. When that is accomplished New York will be the most convenient city in the world to live in, to visit, or in which to do business.

W.—Upon what theory is the Astor family purchasing property north of the Harlem and midway between the Hudson River and Hell Gate channel?

D.—The Astors believe that the line of the finest improvements will continue along Broadway to the Harlem River and across the latter through the central zone of the annexed district. In this, I think, they are mistaken. It is the cheap lands beyond the Harlem which will first be taken up. The purchasers and occupants, who will first settle in the 23d and 24th Wards, will be people of small means, who will want cheap and not high-priced property.

W.—I think I understand. Your Rapid Transit Company will think more of numbers that of the wealth of the new settlers along the line of your roads. A carriage community living in detached houses would not be as profitable to you as poorer neighborhoods more densely settled. My own impression is that population will first thicken near the stations of the Suburban Rapid Transit Line. It will repeat the experiences of the elevated road systems in New York. The lands easiest of access will be first built upon. Unless the Astor property has good railway facilities it will not advance in value so rapidly as more eligibly located estates.

Home Decorative Notes.

—A subject that is always interestingly discussed in the household is that of home furnishing; we hear the advice given, to be original and not be satisfied with the mere imitation of what our friends do, that is all very well in its way, but originality should not be attempted until one has gained confidence from experience and with earnest study learned first to copy well.

—The satin straw baskets in colors of pink, blue, cherry and brilliant yellow are very tasteful for holding flowers, the roses or flowers used should present a striking contrast, for instance, the cherry baskets are filled with pale pink roses and ferns, the pink with red violets are exquisite for the yellow baskets.

—One of the fancies of the day is to have innumerable scrap bags and work bags scattered through the house, they are made in every style and material, a very pretty one may be formed by taking a pink satin fan and fastening it together at the sides with a satin bow, narrow ribbon should be run through the sticks and caught together by loops of ribbon—a tambourine with silk pocket attached is also a pretty design.

—Numerous and passing strange are the designs for inkstands and pencil or pen racks in olive wood, rabbits, sofas, bicycles, music stands, grand pianos, etc., two umbrellas crossed and placed in the form of an easel and having three tiny umbrellas arranged for pencil case, pen holder and ink eraser is quite a novel design.

—Lovers of art will find a rare assortment of choice paintings exhibited by L. A. Lanthier, of No. 6 Astor place, several admirable examples of G. Michel, Jules Dupre and the muddled harmonies of Monticelli deserve special notice. There are also displayed many attractive works of art in bronzes, old tapestries, chime clocks, and antique furniture.

—A more satisfactory effect will be obtained if drawings or engravings are separated by brackets supporting statuettes, vases, etc.

—The china department of R. M. Brundige is replete with single pieces or sets of Minton, Copeland or Dresden ware, decorated in new and novel designs, dainty castors in the Doulton ware, mounted in silver, exquisite tiny cups in Dresden ware for black coffee, and the Victorian or hailstone ware, called from its close resemblance on the surface to hailstones, attracted especial attention.

—A very rich smoking set in brass has the design of a ram's head with polished black horns; a tiny brass bell, which hangs from the ram's neck, forms a match safe; the pedestal, with open lid, an ash receiver; touching the ram's brazen tongue the top of the head opens and discloses a receptacle for tobacco or cigars.

—The American Specialty Co., under the Fifth Avenue Hotel, offer numerous and beautiful designs in leather goods, card cases of alligator skin, the antique and Japanese leather with designs of bugs, flies, butterflies, etc. Kid cases in the form of a folded glove are unique. The leatherette mouchoir cases and glove boxes, with various decorations, are quite attractive.

—A plush table-cover, with fans applied, which are made of colored silks, embroidered with various fancy stitches and finished at the top with a ruffling of white lace, produces a happy result.

—Beauty of surrounding has taken a strong hold of all classes, and the skill and good taste of the decorator and furnisher has attained wonderful excellence, at the rooms of Degraaf & Taylor, of 47 West Fourteenth street, are displayed beautiful plush upholstered drawing room chairs with ornamentation in relief embroidery; richly carved colonial tables with legs terminating in claws and the Shakespeare tables with twist legs and mountings of brass.

—Trailing plants give a cheerful appearance to a room, particularly when cultivated to climb over picture frames, pedestals, statuary, etc.; the prettily decorated china vases with flat backs can be hung over or beneath a picture frame and into this put the plant; the balloon vine is a beautiful climbing plant and the Madeira vine thrives splendidly, creeping wherever trained, and forms a thick lattice work if allowed to run over windows.

—An attractive design for a pale stone gray felt table cover is an embroidered border wrought of scarlet pinks intermingled with the delicate green leaves of trailing smilax for the corners.

—The old-fashioned Canton crepe shawls (more particularly the red or blue) that have been for some time relegated to the cedar chest may now be brought forth and used to drape easels, and for other hangings; the result is surprisingly effective.

—The antique Daghestan rugs are by far the most desirable and elegant, they adhere closely to the conventional geometrical patterns and have a vast range of color—no two can be found alike, there may be a predominance of some one color, but upon close examination the tints harmonize with each other in the most exquisite manner, causing the surface to appear almost metallic in lustre and soft as velvet.

—As it is always desirable to distribute light about a room and diminish all shadow, the hanging candelabrum may be brought into service. A very charming design consists of three very finely polished horns, tipped with gold and furnished with receivers; it is suspended from an ornamental arm which projects from a horn bracket, and the whole is attached to the side wall.

—Since whatever is antique is new and fashionable, old pieces of furniture, stored away for years in garrets are brought to light, and, with a few touches of modern color and materials, something very attractive is the result. The old-fashioned rockers so dear to our grandmothers, with the addition of plush cushions and a bow of ribbon fastened here and there, are very inviting and betoken comfort and ease. Many tempting pieces of modern furniture, copied from antique designs, are offered by Doremus & Corbett, of No. 148 West Twenty-third street.

The Ludlow Geneology.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

I was interested in your sketch of the life and ancestry of E. H. Ludlow in the last week's issue of your paper; but there were some interesting facts omitted in that narrative. Had your writer consulted Burke and other authorities he would have found that the Ludlows can trace their lineage to Edward I. of England. They descended from Margaret, daughter of Philip III. of France, who was the second wife of Edward. Among the descendants of this couple was an Earl of Norfolk, Lord Segrave, Lord Mowbray, a Lord Delawarr and a Lord Windsor, whose daughter, Edith, married George Ludlow. The latter's son was the grandfather of Edmund Ludlow, the regicide, and by his second wife he was the great-grandfather of Gabriel Ludlow, who settled in New York in 1694, and who was the direct ancestor of Edward H. Ludlow, the president of the Real Estate Exchange. The American branch of the Ludlows were a prolific race, for, according to Mrs. Lamb, in her "History of New York," ten, twelve and even thirteen children in a family were not uncommon. According to the same authority they intermarried with the best known families in the early annals of the city, as, for instance, the Goelets, Livingstones, Morrises, Bogarts, Gouverneurs, Duncans, Harrisons, Lewises and others equally noted.

Then mention should be made of the famous Ludlow mansion, No. 9 State street, which ran through to Pearl street. It was built towards the end of the last century, by Carey Ludlow, and was occupied by John Morton, his rich son-in-law, for over a quarter of a century. It was an immense house, with twenty-six apartments, and was the scene of many notable entertainments. Among others, of a great ball given to Lafayette in 1824.

I notice among the subscribers to the Real Estate Exchange the names of many families who won honorable renown in the early history of New York. Among others, the Crugers, Hamiltons, Roosevelts, Aspinwalls and Astors. Would it not be well to have these names reappear in connection with the government of our city? Our foreign, more especially our Irish, naturalized citizens have had their innings in ruling the metropolis for a very long period. Why should not the influence of the new Real Estate Exchange be used to bring the representatives of our historic families again into prominence, as Mayor and heads of important city departments?

ANTIQUARIAN.

An Extraordinary Increase in Values.

The commotion raised in Richmond County by the proposition to sell the Seaman's Retreat property, in the village of Edgewater, to the United States government, for use as a marine hospital, has been made manifest through reports in the daily press. But the subject has hardly yet received the attention that it deserves. Of course it is preposterous to talk of permanently locating a hospital, into which contagious complaints must frequently find their way, in a district already densely populated, and only to be reached over routes of travel thronged with passengers at all hours of the day. This is the first suggestion that comes from the proposed transaction; but when the subject is investigated there appears to be a suspicion of moral contagion attaching to the undertaking which should be as effective as the flag of a pest house in warning all trespassers from the infected premises. The shortsightedness of the scheme might be overlooked. We are in the habit of taking little thought upon the morrow in the vicinity of New York, and, at one point or another, are in constant hot water through the failure of some man in a past generation to realize that there was to be a hereafter. This is especially true along the water front. But in this scheme there is a suspicion of political jobbery and speculation which would make the plan, were it consummated, altogether unpardonable.

The Marine Society, in its personnel said to be a very respectable and responsible organization, came into the possession of this property, consisting of about thirty acres, lying along and in the immediate vicinity of the water front in Edgewater, only a few months ago, at a cost, in money and individual notes, of considerably less than $100,000. It was obtained from the State. It is now proposed to sell ten acres of this land, reserving the water front, for which $30,000 have been offered and more than twenty acres of the remainder, to the general government for the sum of $250,000. Now, what the people of Richmond County would like to find out is the name of the United States Senator, member of Congress or other official of high rank, who has lent himself to this extraordinary scheme for bulling Staten Island property. They like to see the value of their water front property appreciate, but are a little bewildered at the extraordinary rise in values which seems to have occurred within a few months. They think, possibly, it may be due to the testimony of Mr. Franklin B. Gowan before the Rapid Transit Commission. But when they recall the fact that the estimate of Mr. Gowan was based on the value of Staten Island water-front property as a place for the transshipment of coal, and not for the location of hospitals, they are still a little confused in their efforts at accounting for the increase.

The entire property held by the Marine Society, if intersected by streets and divided into building lots, is believed to be worth more than $250,000; but the most sanguine appraiser would not regard the sale of the designated ten acres to the general government, at the price proposed, as anything else than a swindle on the public. In the view of these facts and the further fact that no hospital is wanted on the ground occupied by the Seaman's Retreat, this seems to be an enterprise from which all gentlemen who wish the reputation of wearing clean hands would be likely to withdraw.

The formation of a bi-metallic union in this city, associated with such names as U. S. Grant, Franklin Edson, A. A. Low, A. S. Hatch, D. O. Mills, Henry Clews, Hamilton Fish, Robert Collier, L. M. Bates, James B. Colgate, John S. Newbury, and others equally notable, has naturally attracted some attention in England. Commenting upon the call published by THE RECORD AND GUIDE to which the above names were appended, the London Bullionist remarks: "Bi-metallism continues to live in the minds of far-seeing and thinking men in England, Germany and Holland. We invite the attention of those persons who imagine bi-metallism is dead to the following prospectus which has lately been circulated in New York, and which has obtained considerable support and notice from the press of that city. It will be seen that in New York, as in the case here, the movement is supported by most of the leading financiers and merchants and also by many others."

What the Governor Says.

Governor Cleveland's message is a very common-place document. It is the production of a man who has no suggestiveness or initiative. Not a word has he to say about the reform of the local government of this city, nor does he seem to realize the necessity for any change in our laws affecting real estate. In the following paragraph he harps upon an old and well-worn string:

The tendency of our prosperity, he says, is in the direction of the accumulation of immense fortunes, largely invested in personal property, and yet its aggregate valuation, as fixed for the purpose of taxation, is constantly decreased, while that of real estate is increased. For the year 1882 the valuation of personal property subject to taxation was determined at $351,021,189 and real estate at $2,432,661,379. In 1883 the assessed valuation of personal property was fixed at $315,039,085 and real estate $2,557,218,240. The present law permits, in the case of personal property, the indebtedness of its possessor to be deducted from its value, and allows no such deduction in favor of real estate, though it be represented by a mortgage which is a specific lien upon such real estate. Personal property, in need more than any other of the protection of the government, when discovered, escapes taxation to the extent of its owner's indebtedness, though such indebtedness is based upon the ordinary credit in the transaction of business or is fictitious, and manufactured for the temporary purpose of evading taxation. But real property, the existence of which cannot be concealed, is, in contemplation of the law, taxed according to its full valuation, though the incumbrance upon it easily divests the owner of his title, though the interest and perhaps part of the principal must, as well as the tax, annually be met, and though if sold the amount due upon this lien must always be deducted from any sum agreed upon as the price of the land.

It is noticeable, by the way, that Lieut.-Gov. Hill in his address to the Senate urges that no action be taken to reform our city charter, yet as our readers know this is a vital matter to New Yorkers.

The Real Estate Exchange.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

I have no fear but what the directors of the Real Estate Exchange will manage it prudently. The business of their lives has been to take care of estates and make them productive; hence the site will be well chosen, the tenants responsible, and there will be no waste. So much is reasonably certain. But it is hard to change the habits of a lifetime. We require a new departure in real estate dealings; the old methods are obsolete. First of all the laws must be changed, so as to get rid of the legal verbage in the deeds and the impediments to the rapid transfer of real property. This is a vital matter, and the Exchange must make itself felt at Albany this very winter. It could easily influence the daily press to give this matter the attention it deserves. The Exchange cannot succeed unless the laws are so changed that trading in real property is as easy and safe as buying and selling bonds and stocks. All our laws affecting real property need overhauling so that the public burdens shall be more evenly distributed. Why not make use of the members of the Exchange as a separate organization to help reform our land laws? There are at least a hundred of them whose names have weight with the public.

OWNER.

The Highest Point South of the Park.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

In your issue of December 22, you published an article in which reference was made to some houses now being built on West Fifty-seventh street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues; in this article it was stated, in referring to the healthfulness of the location and the drainage, that this block is the "highest ground in the city south of the Central Park and is over 30 feet higher than at Fifth avenue."

Now will you kindly inform me whether this is so or not, it is, of course, easy to see that the ground is considerably higher than the adjoining block, but I feel convinced that from 12 to 15 feet would more than cover the difference, and that it is impossible that this block at its highest can be any 30 feet higher than at Fifth avenue. Please enlighten me on this subject.

BUILDER.

From actual measurement we learn that the block referred to is 29.6 higher at its highest point than at Fifth avenue.

Is He a Member?

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

At the first meeting of the subscribers to the Real Estate Exchange one of the most active and noisy of the minority was Mr. Lawson N. Fuller. He interrupted the speakers, made motions and repeatedly tried to catch the chairman's eye. On looking over the list of members as published in THE RECORD AND GUIDE, I could not find Mr. Fuller's name. If not a member what business had he in the meeting? I have since understood that a good deal of the confusion was caused by outsiders, who were not members.

X. Y.

The list as published in THE RECORD AND GUIDE was accurate. Mr. Fuller neither was nor is a member of the Exchange in his own name, and it is quite true that he tried to take part in the deliberations of the Exchange at its first meeting. Mr. Fuller is, however, a very public-spirited citizen, who, in his own opinion, is fully competent to manage any enterprise better than the gentlemen who have risked their money in it. Such men as he are not over-burdened with modest sensitiveness, but they help to make things lively, especially public meetings.

Real Estate Department.

There was not of course much doing in the real estate market during the past week, nor will there be much activity until toward the close of the month, when rents will be the uppermost topic. Later on the auctions will commence.

Only six sales took place at the Exchange Salesroom during the past week, and the attendance was small.

The following shows the Conveyances and Mortgages recorded during the past week, as compared with the corresponding week last year:

Attention is called to the advertisement of W. H. Kelly, No. 75 University place, who offers for sale a splendid plot of ground, with residence, on the Boulevard, to settle an estate. There is 133.6 feet front on the Boulevard and 164.10 on Seventy-fifth street. The house is 40x40 with stable attached. The whole is offered for $100,000, and is cheap, as the prospective value is very great. The house, which would rent for $2,000 per annum, could not be built to-day for $20,000. It is near the elevated station at Seventy-second street, and all impediments to the construction of the Ninth avenue horse car road have now been removed.

Riker & Son, 993 Sixth avenue, have for sale some very choice lots on Fifty-seventh street between the new church and the houses now being constructed by the Jardine Brothers. This is one of the finest locations in New York for the construction of elegant first-class dwellings. The lots can be had cheap or on easy terms.

On Tuesday, January 8, Richard V. Harnett will sell in partition three parcels of investment property on Tenth avenue and Eighteenth street. They include stores and dwellings. On the same day Mr. Harnett will sell under foreclosure the house 85 Mulberry street.

Gossip of the Week.

There have been but few changes in the membership of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (limited). Seats are offered all the way from $175 to $500 premium, the best bid we know of is $100 premium, which will be given at this office. A few sales have taken place at $150 and $175 premium. Any person who wants to buy or sell would do well to make application at THE RECORD AND GUIDE office, in every case giving the lowest price for which they will sell or the highest which they will pay.

Messrs. Dye & Castree have sold for A. R. Whitney the property Nos. 195 and 197 Franklin street, to Messrs. Holmes & Coutts for $38,000, and for W. Barnett, No. 93 Hudson street (leasehold), to B. F. Van Valkenburgh, for $4,000.

L. J. & I. Phillips have sold for George J. Lake the lot on the east side of Fifth avenue, about 50 feet north of Seventy-fourth street, size 25x140, for $50,000 cash.

The four-story stone front dwelling, 56 East Fifty-seventh street, lot 22x100, has been sold by Kirkland & Co. to Mr. Beach, for $70,000. Broker, W. P. Seymour.

Six lots, three on One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street and three on One Hundred and Thirtieth street, commencing 300 feet west of Sixth avenue, with handsome villa thereon, have been sold by L. Belloni, for $37,500.

Jacob V. D. Wyckoff has sold for John H. Deane, to Abraham Levy, the three-story high stoop octagon brown stone front dwelling, 20x60x100, No. 1889 Madison avenue, 60.11 north of One Hundred and Twenty-second street, for $23,000. The same broker has also sold No. 320 Tenth avenue, between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets, three-story brick house and store, 25x75x100, for $12,000.

J. V. D. Wyckoff has sold the three-story high stoop cabinet finish brown stone houses, Nos. 206 and 208 West One Hundred and Twenty-eighth street, 16.8x50x99.11 each, for Charles O. Le Count to Jennie B. and C. C. Wiggins, for $13,000 each.

J. Romaine Brown has sold for Geo. W. Hardy the five-story brick and brown stone house, No. 345 West Twenty-first street, 25x86x100, to J. C. Laurence, for $32,000.

John Weber has sold ten lots, five on One Hundred and Twenty-second and five on One Hundred and Twenty-third street, commencing 300 feet east of Eighth avenue, and running through from street to street.

F. R. Walker has sold the three-story high stoop brown stone front dwelling No. 66 East One Hundred and Fourth street, 18.9x50x100, for $10,250, to Jacob Korn; broker, William Lalor.

Eli Bach has sold two lots on the south side of Eighty-ninth street, 150 east of Fourth avenue, together 51x100, for $18,000, to Phillip Lutz.

Mr. Patrick Fox claims the commission on the sale reported last week of 119 lots to Mr. Richard Arnold. It seems Messrs. L. J. & I. Phillips think the commission is due them. The matter may yet be litigated. When the Real Estate Exchange is in operation disputes like this will be settled without appeals to the courts.

The purchaser of the Stevens Mansion on Fifth avenue, the sale of which was reported recently, was Mrs. William C. Whitney, as announced by us some weeks ago.

An offer of $17,500 has been refused for the house and lot on the northeast corner of Third avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street, which was sold at the Exchange on December 28 for $17,000.

The four-story high-stoop brown stone front dwelling, No. 29 East Seventy-third street, lot 15x80, has been sold for $37,500. Broker, W. P. Seymour.

Louis Brandt has sold the three-story and basement brown stone private dwelling on the southwest corner of Avenue B and Eighty-fifth street, 17.5x50x87, for William Rutter to Charles Stahl, of Stahl & Jaeger, lithographers.

Brooklyn.

Pending the completion of the annual report of the Building Department of Brooklyn we give some valuable statistics supplied by Mr. Henry Campbell, the plan clerk:

The total number of new buildings projected is 2,688, of which 1,394 are frame and 1,293 brick, and one of iron. The total cost was $12,096,681. The wards in which the greatest activity has prevailed are as follows: 18th Ward, 424 buildings, 400 of which are frame; 25th Ward, 352; 22d Ward, 312, all of a good class, 240 being brick; 21st Ward, 298 buildings; 23d Ward, 266, all brick or brown stone; 19th Ward, 134 buildings; 17th Ward, 127, and 8th Ward, 163 buildings. The number of buildings completed during eleven months were 2,555, costing $11,960,327, distributed in part thus: 18th Ward, 413 frame, cost, $1,167,175; 23d Ward, 303 brick, cost, $1,956,200; 25th Ward, 311 brick and frame, cost, $848,225, and 22d Ward, 251, costing $1,541,546. There were 216 brick buildings erected in this Ward. The 5th Ward was at the foot of the list with only 4 buildings, costing $24,000. The total of buildings altered for the year was 801, costing $748,539, and the heaviest work was done in April, when 109 alterations were made, costing $88,005. The greatest expenditure for alterations, however, was in the month of May, when work to the value of $94,707 was completed.

W. F. Corwith has sold for Charles Pierce the lot, 25x100, on the east side of Manhattan avenue, 365.10 feet north of Van Cott avenue, to Charles Heuffner for $1,250.

Out Among the Builders.

Paul F. Schoen has the plans under way for a large railroad depot, to be erected on the east side of Tenth avenue, covering the entire block from One Hundred and Twenty-eighth to One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street. The structure will be two stories and basement in height, the material being of brick and iron, and the dimensions 200x200. It will contain the machinery for the cable road to be constructed by the Third Avenue Railroad Company, on Tenth avenue, from One Hundred and Twenty-eighth to One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street, and which will also connect with the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street cross-town cars. An administration building, 57x48 feet in size, will be erected in the building proper, running from the bottom to the top story. There will also be a large elevator to raise the cars to the two upper stories, which will be used for their storage. The basement will contain the machinery, which will be worked by four large boilers, with a chimney 150 feet high. The cost to the Third Avenue Railroad Company will be about $175,000.

Alfred Zucker is the architect for the seven-story, basement and subcellar store building to be erected on the southeast corner of Greene and Bleecker streets, for Isidor Cohnfeld, as reported in our last.

F. Carles Merry has the plans for a two-story and attic stone and frame cottage, 52x40, to be erected at Pelham Manor, Westchester Co., for B. F. Corlies, of Corlies, Macy & Co., of this city, at a cost of about $9,000.

Isidor Cohnfeld, who owns the property on the northwest corner of Greene and Bleecker streets, contemplates the destruction of the buildings thereon, and erecting on the site a six or seven-story substantial office and store building for investment. This is in addition to the large store to be erected for his own business on the opposite corner.

We hear that Edward Conlon will improve eight lots just purchased by him on Forty-ninth and Fiftieth streets, 450 feet east Tenth avenue, by the erection of eight five-story tenements.

A. B. Ogden has the plans under way for a five-story brick and brown stone tenement, 38.4x85.6, to be erected on the south side of Fifty-fifth street, about 150 feet east of Second avenue, for James Williams, at a cost of $25,000.

Elbert D. Howes has the plans in hand for two five-story and cellar brick and brown stone tenements, with stores, 25x85 each, to be erected on the north side of One Hundred and Sixth street, between Second and Third avenues, for George Smith, at a cost of about $16,000 each.

The building which Mr. H. K. Thurber some time ago informed a reporter of THE RECORD AND GUIDE would shortly be erected for the New York Mercantile Exchange on the northwest corner of Harrison and Hudson streets, will not be commenced until May, 1885, owing to a liquor dealer holding property on the site objecting to vacate unless receiving a bonus of $10,000, which the Exchange declines to give.

Illegitimate Real Estate Dealings.

Editor of THE RECORD AND GUIDE:

I was much interested in the letter you published last week from a reputable lawyer, showing up the dishonest methods employed to sell poor property at high prices. But why did you not give the names? Such people should be exposed so that the trade would know and shun them. We require a law making it a misdemeanor to put a false consideration in a deed which is filed officially.

A Card.

NEW YORK, December 12th, 1883.

We desire to call the attention of our patrons and the trade generally to the fact that we have opened a branch yard at the foot of Amity street, Brooklyn, near South Ferry, where Messrs. Spencer & Martin for many years were located, from which yard we will be enabled to supply all who need masons' materials in Brooklyn and vicinity.

In thus enlarging our facilities we intend to keep pace with the growing building interests of the metropolis and neighboring cities, and thus hope to retain the patronage of all our old customers, as well as to merit large additions from our Brooklyn friends.

As to our Brooklyn yard we would say that our Mr. Canda resides in that city, and was for more than fifteen years engaged in the same business as member of the well-known firm of Morton & Canda.

We have secured the services of Mr. Daniel Martin, so long and favorably known to the trade there.

Soliciting a continuance of your patronage, and promising fidelity to your interests, we beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

CANDA & KANE, Masons' Building Materials.

It is interesting to note, in view of the recent organization of our own Real Estate Exchange, that the St. Louis Court of Appeals lately, in the suit of Elliot against Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis, decided, after a careful review of all the authorities, that the seat of a member in a stock-board or merchants' exchange is property liable for debts. This is the rule in New York and in San Francisco, but in Chicago the courts have held the other way. The St. Louis judge in his opinion takes occasion to praise the excellent work on Stock Brokers, by Mr. John R. Dos Passos, of the New York Bar, justly saying that his treatise on that subject and on stock exchanges is a valuable and much needed contribution to the learning on the subject.

Notes and Items.

The Board of Aldermen passed a resolution on Monday authorizing and directing the Commissioner of Public Works to supply the County Court House with Rice's Patent Ventilating Apparatus at a price not exceeding $27,000, provided he deems the same to be effectual. The Board also approved of the site for a station-house on property belonging to the city on the north side of 67th street, 120 feet west of 3d avenue, 50x100.5.

Special Notices.

The iron works of Messrs. Blake & Duffy have turned out some fine work since that firm was established in 1882. Among the structures for which they supplied architectural iron work are the Forty-second street ferry house, North River; St. Cecilia's Church, Lexington avenue and One Hundred and Sixth street; the West Shore and Ontario & Western Roads terminal passenger station at Weehawken; the freight-car erecting and repair shops at East Buffalo, and the planing mill and blacksmith shop of the West Shore Railroad at Frankfort, N. Y. As will be seen from the card of the above firm, they supply bridges, riveted girders, iron roofs and all kinds of architectural work for buildings. Estimates can be obtained from them on application at their offices at Nos. 513 to 519 West Twenty-fifth street.

Theodore De Lemos, whose circular appears elsewhere, has been selected as the architect for completing the Eden Musee Americain, on Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, between Fifth and Sixth avenues. This gentleman was chief-assistant to the late Henry Fernbach, architect, and has now entered the profession on his own account, his office being at No. 1267 Broadway.

Stokes & Parrish have been awarded the contract for the elevator to be placed in the new residence of Mr. H. H. Cook, on the corner of Fifth avenue and Seventy-eighth street.

Attention is directed to the card on the fourth page of Orrin D. Person, who has furnished tiles for the roofs of the capitol at Albany, the houses of ex-President Henry Villard, and the church on the corner of Eighty-sixth street and Fourth avenue; and he will also supply tiles for Mr. Hoyt's house on Fifth avenue, and Mr. Tiffany's house on the corner of Madison avenue and Seventy-second street. These are the Akron Vitrified Tiles, the only vitrified tiles manufactured, and suitable for all climates. Mr. Person solicits estimates on all kinds of fine roofing material and will give the best references. His place of business is at No. 169 Tenth avenue, city.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—The market for Common Hards has undergone little or no change from the situation as noted last week. Another holiday has broken up matters somewhat, but aside from that the disposition to operate was quite limited, and few buyers could be found feeling interest enough to even inquire the value. Heavy rains, followed by sharp cold weather, appear to have checked consumption generally, and this was in turn reflected upon the movements of dealers, and up to Thursday only one cargo was known to have been sold. This transaction, so far as it amounted to anything as a guide indicated about former rates, though it would be hardly proper to call the position more than nominally steady in the absence of a good solid test. We find the general run of quotations named at $6@6 50 for Jerseys, $6 75@7 for Up Rivers, and $7 25@7 75 for Haverstraws, with Peekskills valued at $3 50@4 per M. The arrivals have been comparatively moderate, as with no one to purchase it was useless to make any attempt at sending stock forward and in addition to this most of the barges were at this end of the route loaded, making a pretty full accumulation to meet any demand of an ordinary character should it arise.

FOREIGN WOODS.—In looking over the record of the year, we find that during the early portion of the season and indeed covering a very large proportion of the entire year, the condition of business was active and generally satisfactory. The two leading grades, mahogany and cedar, moved steadily toward and into the respective outlets for which they were peculiarly adapted and arrivals appeared to be so timed and adjusted as to prevent anything more than temporary and unimportant accumulations in first hands. Other descriptions of stock also secured the average proportionate amount of favor and brought good prices, though, as usual, the business was confined largely to regular trade channels and did not afford many features worthy of extended comment, except that grades adopted to house trimmings, cabinet work, etc., always sold quickest and at best rates. For some ten or eleven months, matters continued in the above favorable condition, but only a short time before the close of the year a disturbing element developed and sellers rather lost their advantage all around. Consequent upon light receipts, there had been quite a sharp advance in cedar and especially the Cuban growth; but as subsequently cargo after cargo commenced to arrive until the supply became remarkably liberal and was really inconvenient, with a prospect that more would follow, a reaction on values took place and buyers became more careful with a tendency to keep all orders down to a basis of actual consumptive wants. Mahogany also received a set back under the influence of a large failure of an Eastern dealer, understood to have liberal stocks on hand in addition to contracts at primary points. Another more or less depressing influence was to be found in the full importation and accumulating stock of medium to small sizes, with a shrinkage in the demand for those grades and reduced cost as a natural sequence. At the close, the market is more or less unsettled with considerable doubt existing as to the prospect for the incoming season.

*All exports of Cedar, Walnut, Cabinet and Oak have been placed under the regular exports of lumber, etc., as the bulk, if not all, are without doubt of domestic growth.

LATH.—Immediately following our last report there was a drop to $2.50 per M., and this has been the highest figure since. We could find no one willing to admit anything lower, but none denied the dull condition of trade and the entire absence of interest among buyers. The supply here is in such hands as to prevent any direct effort to realize, but should the amount increase it would have a depressing influence and the indications are that even on the present offering moderately reduced bids would not be neglected. Like all other material at the moment, consumption appears to be rather small.

LIME.—There has been no change from the old stereotyped report on this market. Demand not active and finds supply enough to meet it, with prices standing in the former groove and steady in tone.

LUMBER.—Deliveries from yard have been somewhat larger during the interval since our last, but to a considerable extent were on back orders and there is really not much new business to advise. Buyers in fact are still in more or less doubt as to how far they can safely venture, and prefer for the time being to confine investment to immediate and positive necessities. Coastwise arrivals have come to hand moderately and irregularly, but when showing anything like fair attractions secured attention at steady rates. Shipping grades of lumber have of late gone out with much freedom and the reduction in stock thus made gives holders a firmer and more confident feeling. Most accounts from the woods continue to indicate a steady full cutting, and, as sufficient snow has fallen to accommodate the workmen, the chances for a full log crop do not diminish. It is, however, a little early as yet to calculate upon the cut and by the time the running commences the supply may show up smaller.

Eastern Spruce has a dull market. If supplies come to hand they receive attention when offered, and, if quality is useful, command about former rates; but there is nothing in the way of a natural demand and the outlet could not be expanded unless terms were made much more attractive. Many of the yards have reduced their accumulations and assortments somewhat but are in no hurry to replenish, and there is also a noticeable slow and indifferent offering of special schedules. Several of the mills would likely offer comparatively easy terms to get contracts in hand but fail to secure much business. Quotations remain at $13.00@16 00 for random, up to $17 00 for specials.

White Pine on home account has continued pretty dull, all classes of consumers appearing to stand off for the moment, and on supplies suited to the outlet noted the tone rules easy. A few dealers, however, have secured some shipping orders from home sources and quite a large hole has been made in the export grades during the past five or six weeks. Holders of desirable shipping parcels are now looking for slightly higher figures and offering with greater moderation. The loggers are making a good crop. We quote $18.50@22.00 for West India shipping boards, $28 00@30.00 for South American do.; $17 0 @18.00 for box boards, and $18.50@19.00 for extra do.

Yellow Pine not active, but opens the year with some symptoms of a more favorable character. The pretty free arrivals of last month have all disappeared, some little local demand prevails with now and then a special tendered, and agents secure enough business in the way of f. o. b. cargoes at the South for export to make basis for cheerful expressions. It is certainly not fair to call the market decidedly better, or even better, but it is at least no worst, and buyers discover no features to induce them to stand off when they want goods for early use. We quote as follows: Randoms, $20@22 per M; Specials, $21@23 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $24@25; Dry do., do., $25@26; Step Plank, $30@35 do; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $14@16 for rough, and $19@21 for dressed. Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports $13@15 for rough, and $18@20 for dressed.

Hardwoods on home account are slow and uncertain, even the finer grades dragging a trifle, but fair amounts have recently gone out for export. Prices remain about as before. We quote at wholesale rates by car-load about as follows: Walnut, $65@110 per M; ash, $35@ 40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, $40@75 do.; whitewood ½ and ⅝ inch, $25@30 do. do., and do. inch, $28@38; hickory, $45@55 do.

Shingles dull on home account, but a few parcels are taken on export orders and command about former rates. We quote Cypress at $3.00 per M for 5x20 and $10.00 do. for 6x24 regularly assorted shipping; Pine shipping stock, $2.50 for 18 inch, and Eastern saw grades at $2.50@4.50 for 16 inch, as to quality and to quantity. Machine dressed cedar shingles quoted as follows: for 30 inch $15@30 for A, and $20@ 8.50 for No. 1; for 24 inch, $10.50@15 for A and $15@20.50 for No. 1; for 20 inch $7@9.50 for A and $9@12.50 for No. 1.

Recent freight engagements show: From St. John, N. B., to Europe, deals at 60s.@65s. per standard; from New York to West Indies, $6@15 per M steam, and $4 50@5.75 sail; to Central and South America, $7.50@16 do.; to New York from Provinces, $3.00@3.50; from Maine, $2.00@2.25, and from the South, $5.75@6.00@9.00 per M.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

THE WEST.

The Northwestern Lumberman as follows:

CHICAGO.

AT THE YARDS —Business is in about the same condition as that of last week. The outward movement is at a minimum. There is no expectation of any increase until after New Year's. Many are closing up the year's business and taking account of stock. The weather lately has been very much all sorts, and unfavorable to doing anything in town or country. Christmas has broken up the week, and altogether affairs are as near a standstill as they could be and move at all The side tracks in the yards were never more bare of cars. A few yards report considerable shipping; one claiming to send out 25 car loads some days One house reports a December business of 3,000,000 feet; another of 2,500,000. It will thus be seen that lumber still "do move," in spite of the average dulness.

The dealers that make a specialty of carrying a supply of selects and uppers are feeling confident about prices. They think that no matter what betides the business and finances of the country, the stock of choice lumber is not so large anywhere in the country as to endanger prices. It is claimed that nowhere outside of this market is there a large supply, except at Albany, where the stocks are quite ample. The supply of good lumber on the Mississippi is meagre, it is claimed, so that already the stocks here are being looked to for the future. The stocks in Wisconsin have been depleted of the better grades. Choice lumber is scarce at Saginaw and in fact we have been unable to find a man who can tell where a large supply can be found outside of this city and Albany. Inquiries are constantly being received for particular grades of selects and uppers, in amounts that would clean out all there is in separate yards. Inch and a quarter B select is particularly scarce and a few good orders would use up the stock of the entire trade. Admiting that the consumption of good lumber may fall off the coming year on account of hard times, yet the meagre supply of stock of this class will prevent a weakness of prices. While common stock might get a black eye, choice lumber would go through the year with serene optics.

The loggers can throw up their hats in glee when they rest from their labor long enough to contemplate the weather that we are having. The conditions on the whole could hardly be more favorable. The swamps are generally frozen, and there is snow enough for good hauling. The skidded logs are being rapidly banked. Full crews are at work, and the indications now are that all the logs needed will be obtained. Every day brings to light the fact that the talk of the operators about reducing their cut so materially was merely buncomb. On some of the streams there will be fewer logs put in than last season, but the stock of logs carried over is nearly everywhere large. With a favorable winter we shall be somewhat surprised if next season the log supply is not ample for the capacity of the mills.

METALS.—The markets are generally quiet this week and without new features, and the trade are talking over the results of the past year. A detailed review of all the various descriptions of metals would occupy a great deal more room than we can afford to give, and indeed would be out of place in many cases as a building material. In a general way therefore it is simply necessary to record a slow distribution of pretty much every description of stock in the rough or crude condition, with a production and importation tending to constantly exceed the outlet, and as an almost natural sequence a steady shrinkage on values. Indeed, cost has in many instances touched a lower point than in years without acting as a stimulus to trade, buyers feeling safe in the magnitude of the supplies before them, and the certainty that many holders would be compelled to realize. Even the attempts to work up a speculative stimulus through exchanges formed for that purpose have proven more or less abortive, as especially so among buyers of actual goods. Slow as the demand was, however, it exhausted a very large amount of stock, some of the Trade think the total as great as for the preceding year, and this unquestionably prevented a disastrous accumulation. Of manufactured iron, and more particularly architectural shapes and sizes, the sale has been full especially on local account, and contracts in course of execution or about to be commenced are still in hand to a fair extent, but the Trade complain somewhat of competition, and the necessity for figuring on a close and narrow margin. Tin Plates have generally ruled low in first and second hands, but it is faintly intimated that consumers have not in all cases received the benefits of the comparatively light cost. Within a few weeks the efforts have been directed to a curtailment of production, and a lighter impor ation as the first step toward bringing the markets into better form.

NAILS.—The market shows some irregularity on all influences and still fails to afford much satisfaction to the selling interest. When buyers want a supply they do not hesitate about opening negotiations but necessities arise too seldom and in too modest form to greatly benefit the situation, especially as accumulations in first hands are full. Valuations more or less nominal, but the tendency thought to be toward greater steadiness as the reduced production of the country by the closing of Western mills checks accumulation of stocks. We quote at $2.60@2.70 per keg for 10d. to 6d, according to size of invoice.

PAINTS AND OILS —There is almost nothing doing at the moment except in the way of a small jobbing trade, and it is a more or less nominal market for all kinds of paints, colors, etc. Holders, however, do not weaken in faith to an extent leading to forced efforts to realize, and about former prices continue to be asked. Linseed Oil meeting with moderatively active sale at about 56@57 for domestic and 58@60 for foreign Spirits Turpentine dull and rather easy still at 34@36, according to quantity, delivery, etc.

PITCH AND TAR.—A moderate inquiry is readily met and at about former rates, but sellers making no gain. We quote pitch $2.25@2.30 per bbl., and tar $2.50@3.00 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.

THE RECORD AND GUIDE.

191 Broadway, N. Y.

TERMS:

ONE YEAR, in advance, SIX DOLLARS.

C. W. SWEET, 191 Broadway.

J. T. LINDSEY, Business Manager.

JANUARY 12, 1884.

Subscribers will be served to-day with a fourteen page supplement containing an Index of all the Conveyances and New Buildings given in this publication during the past six months. This will be specially valuable to those who have bound files, for, instead of hunting through the twenty-six numbers, a reference to the Index will show the page on which will be found all the sales and building improvements within the past half-year. The increase of advertising favors limits our reading matter to-day, and crowds out much that is interesting in the way of news and comment. We furnish forty pages in addition to the fourteen of Index, making fifty four pages in all. The increase of business, as well as the growth of THE RECORD AND GUIDE, is shown by the fact that our first Index occupied only four small pages Bound covers for files can be procured at this office for one dollar each.

We have said all along that January would be a better month for the bulls than was December, and so it is proving. Still the advance made during the past week has not a wholesome look. The market has been openly manipulated by Jay Gould and W. H. Vanderbilt. This is only a variation of the p gging process of last spring. There is no new factor at work to advance prices. At the same time stock are undeniably low, and for those who have money to invest are a purchase. But we will see lower prices before the spring is over.

There ought to be no delay in forwarding the bill of the Land Transfer Reform Association to Albany. It is a very formidable document, and will be subjected to a severe scrutiny from a legislation of lawyers. The bill provides that the commissioners to carry out the law should be named by the Chamber of Commerce; but clearly this should be the work of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited). To these commissioners, by the way, should be intrusted full authority for carrying out this reform. Mr. Olmstead's bill subordinates them to the officials who, if they have their way, will never complete the reform. The new Real Estate Exchange will be derelict in its duty if it does not follow this matter up closely at Albany.

The bills introduced by Senator Robb in the State Senate and Assemblyman Rosevelt in the lower chamber, depriving the Aldermen of all power to interfere with the appointment of heads of departments by the Mayor, are at least indications of good intentions on the part of some of our legislators. Let our citizens now bestir themselves and bring a pressure to bear that will get this vital reform carried through. There is no hope for good government so long as the Aldermen have the confirming power. Their interference makes it impossible to hold anyone responsible for inefficient or corrupt conduct of the various city departments. Of course, the bills introduced will be amended, but the experience of Brooklyn should be worth something in giving us a good working charter. Should the Mayor to be chosen next November have real authority it would lead to an exciting struggle, but we have no doubt but that the chief magistrate chosen would be worthy the city. Our Mayors, of all parties, have generally been intelligent and well-intentioned officials; it is the Aldermen who are always bad.

Reporting is a lost art in the New York newspapers. Judge Barrett, author of the "American Wife," lately produced at Wallack's, delivered an address before the Nineteenth Century Club last week on the "American Drama," and he was followed by Chauncey M. Depew, A. B. Cauzaran and other notable personages. The discussion was brilliant, and every word uttered would be eagerly read, not only by members of the dramatic profession, but by every theatre-goer. The subject matter was of the highest interest to the readers of newspapers. But beyond a few lines given to Judge Barrett the matter was ignored by our badly-edited journals. There is a singular lack of intelligence in the way the news is furnished by the daily press. Instead of cheapening the price of their issues it would pay our daily papers to report the important matters which are now entirely overlooked. The World, when Manton Marble was its editor, found it profitable to give full reports of the meetings of the Boston Radical Club. It found a large audience also for John Fisk's lectures on philosophy. Huxley's "Protoplasm" necessitated a large edition of that journal. But the newspapers of to-day seem afraid to touch any theme not suggested by the politics of the day or the proceedings of the law and police courts.

Should a convention of the representatives of North and South American countries be held at Washington towards the close of this year, as suggested by Senator Sherman, it might have important consequences anent the silver question. While Asia uses silver money exclusively, North and South America produces almost all that is used in the commerce of the world. An agreement by the convention to coin silver at a fixed ratio with gold would raise the price of that metal, especially if Canada would agree to enter into the arrangement. The use of silver would help us in whatever trade relations we might make with Mexico, Central and South America, for in all these countries silver is the sole unit of value. Our manufactures would find better outlets in those countries and in Asia than in Europe. This is a matter worth thinking about.

The Mutual Building.

This towering structure seems to be virtually completed as to its outside by the erection of the cast-iron parapet story. At any rate, whatever may be added to it will only alter its aspect in a distant view, since the parapet story itself is scarcely visible from the other side of any one of the three streets on which the building fronts. Architecturally, therefore, Mr. Clinton's work can be discussed as well now as hereafter.

No matter how good his building might have been, it was foredoomed to be ineffectual by the shortsightedness of his clients in determining to erect so lofty a building on such a site. Everybody sees, now that it is done, what a folly it is, but that was easily seen beforehand, and was so seen. The main cornice must be not far from 100 feet from the ground, and Nassau street, on which is the principal front of the building, cannot be more than forty feet wide. When it was laid out, it was expected to be bordered with buildings two stories and a-half or three stories high, and it is stinted even for buildings of that class, and here, on one side of it is an eight-story structure. The widening of the street was urgently needed even while five stories was the limit of the buildings. The Mutual Company have at once rendered the widening far more necessary and far more difficult by setting this towering palace in this alley. If they had bought two lots in the rear of their plot and set the building back by that distance, leaving it of the same dimensions, they would have gained the cost of the improvement in the superior convenience of their building, besides rendering the architecture visible. Practically the result of this folly will not be realized unless the owner of the property opposite takes it into his head to build another eight-story structure, as he has a perfect right to do, and takes for the back of his building the light which the Mutual people now get over the roofs from the west. But architecturally the folly is vividly evident, and there is probably nothing so absurd as the relation of the new building to its surroundings to be seen in any other city in the world. Certainly such a sight cannot be seen in any city in which these things are regulated by law instead of being left to what is fondly imagined to be the good sense and consideration of individual builders.

The new building, then, is not effective, and would not be effective, no matter how well it was designed. What can an architect do with a front of which the cornice can only be seen in a front view by backing away as far as you can get and throwing your head back to look at the cornice which even then is at an angle of eighty degrees from the point of view. It is impossible to judge of a composition in this violently foreshortened condition or to form any reasonable estimate what it would look like if you could see it. The unfortunate designer has tried to give us something to look at by withdrawing the centre of the principal front as much as he dared, making up for his temerity by projecting a two-story porch, as it appears, beyond the building line. But with all that he could do the possible recess is so slight that, although it makes one's neck ache rather less to look at the centre than to look at the wings, the projection is not effectual, and the main advantage resulting from it is a better detachment of the porch. This is almost the only feature in the building that can be tolerably seen and it is an effective feature. It would, we think, be better, as indeed would the whole building, if the basement and first story had been built of the light sandstone of which the other stories are composed. The granite can scarcely be needed for strength, since the granite piers stand upon brick piers of their own area, and the contrast between the cold gray of the granite and the warm gray of the sandstone is not pleasing. The first story of the porch is a pair of massive granite piers laid in blocks, alternately faced with prisms and polished, enclosing a pair of polished granite columns; in the second the place of the piers is taken by sandstone piers, covered with rich Renaissance ornament, and having for capitals human heads, of various types, a questionable architectural decoration very well executed.

The corners of the building can also be seen and seen all at once. They are rounded and recessed between pilasters—a mode of treatment which tends to weaken rather than to reinfore them—but the openings are deep, the detail is good, the ornament, as everywhere else in the building, is elegant, though chosen from a very limited repertory, and is well adjusted in scale, and under the cornice is an elliptic window corresponding to the half-story above the transom of the arches in the main walls ; and altogether the effect of these features is good also.

As to the rest, it does not much matter so long as there is nothing outrageous, and there is not. The composition vertically begins with a story and a half of granite pier with large openings divided by iron transoms at the floor line and iron mullions, and then two stories of square headed openings in sandstone with sandstone mullions. In the Nassau street front the projections at the ends are each of two bays, with two windows in each bay, the bays formed by pilasters running through the two stories, and carrying a heavy entablature. In the recessed centre the place of these two stories is taken by a large arch on each side of the porch with a mezzanine floor at the level of the transom. Above this the same division into bays continues, and is marked by pilasters running through the four stories —or three and a half—of which this division consists, the upper story here again having its floor at the springing of the arches turned between the pilasters. Each side is of five bays, similar in treatment to the front, but plainer, and stopping the pilasters at the spring of the arch, a rational treatment which might equally well have been applied to the front, where they run through to the cornice. The cornice is richly modillioned and well proportioned to the building. The cast-iron story does not count in the near view, except enough to make one wish that the owners, after spending all this money, had carried out the work in stone like gentlemen. In the distant view over the roofs of other buildings, or from the sides, it counts enough seriously to injure the look of the succession of wide arches under the cornices, which would otherwise be very effective.

The new building has more of a Parisian look than almost any other building in New York. Part of this it owes to its material, a light sandstone not far from the tone of the Paris street fronts, but more to the moderation and careful adjustments of the detail in design and its precision in workmanship. It is good enough to make us wish we could see it better, whereas most new buildings are too visible for their own good; and after condoling with Mr. Clinton on his problem, one is inclined rather to congratulate him on the manner in which he has dealt with it.

Judging from the number of passengers carried by the elevated and surface roads during the past year, the population of this city must be increasing at a very rapid rate. The number of fares paid on the surface roads in 1883 was 116,065,223, and on the elevated roads 92,124,443, a total of 208,189,666. This shows an increase over 1882 of 17,350,452. The number of passengers carried in 1880 was 154,734,498, or 128 per head of the population, which then stood at 1,206,590. Should the proportion be the same in 1883, the population at present would be about 1,626,481, being an average increase per annum since the census of 1880 of about 106,630 persons, which will probably not fall short of the mark. The death rate is often a good criterion whereby to judge of the increase in population, but last year the number of deaths were only 33,982, a decrease compared with 1882 of 5,295. The past has been an unusually healthy year, to judge from the vital statistics, and they are therefore not as good a basis as is usually the case for determining the actual population. The travel on the various elevated and surface roads no doubt tells the true story of the great increase in the number of inhabitants, and while the population may not be 1,626,481, there can be little doubt that it exceeds the very moderate estimate of the Board of Health—namely, 1,350,000.

The amendments proposed to our land laws by Dwight H. Olmstead, on behalf of the Bar Association, are commented upon in an article which we reproduce from the Daily Register, which represents the legal interest. The lawyers are divided as to the advisability of any action in the matter. Fair-minded, liberal members of the profession acknowledge that some reforms are demanded to relieve real estate of unjust burdens and put a stop to wasteful and needless litigation. Other lawyers, again, fear that if reforms are not effected a title company will step in and cut off all their emoluments from real estate, as has been done in Baltimore and Philadelphia. The more shortsighted and selfish of the members of the profession are, of course, bitterly opposed to any reform, because they think it would interfere with the income they now derive from the litigation in real estate, due to the artificial uncertainties made by the law in the matter of titles. Mr. Olmstead's bill, referred to by the Register, is intended to satisfy the best class of lawyers. All the leaders of the bar are being consulted as to its provisions. It is clear, however, that real estate owners and dealers, as the persons most interested, should not only carefully scan the provisions in Mr. Olmstead's bill, but should watch the measure at every stage in its passage through the Legislature. This is a fine opening for the Real Estate Exchange to make its influence felt in the right direction. The Exchange itself will never fulfill its mission until real estate is as easy and cheap of transfer as personal property. Deeds and guaranteed titles should be as available as bonds or stocks for a bank loan. When this is done a mighty revolution will have been affected in the whole conduct of business. The legal profession will not give up the power it now has of taxing real estate for the benefit of its members without a struggle. This is a vital matter to the promoters of the new Exchange, for were realty mobilized by being made ready of sale it would add immensely to the number of transactions and relieve business by making real estate available as an asset in times of distress.

Our Prophetic Department.

INVESTOR—So you are a pronounced bear, Sir Oracle, on stock values. You think the market is going to the "dimnition bow-wows?"

SIR ORACLE—Now, don't misunderstand me, please. I have said that the business of the country is in a bad condition—that the laboring classes are being thrown out of employment and that wages are being cut down. I showed, or tried to show, that the man who has money would be better off in the near future than the one who has goods. I think general trade will be unprofitable for some time to come. One ominously bad sign is the falling off in the patronage of our hotels. Our city hostleries for years have been overcrowded. They not only charged big prices, but obtained them. Now one hotel has led the way in cutting down prices, and all complain of vacant rooms and poor patronage. This shows that not only are the mercantile public not traveling, but that they are determined to save in their hotel bills. But it does not follow from this state of affairs that the stock market is to remain much longer under a cloud.

INVESTOR—What; if the business of the country is bad—if there is a general shrinkage in prices—if the working people are in difficulty, can it be that the stock market is not also affected?

SIR O.—It must be very clear that stock figures are nearer the bottom now than they were two years ago. A list of twenty of the most active and substantial stocks on the list show a shrinkage of over $440,000,000 in market value, with scarcely any decline in the dividend paying power of the securities. Indeed several of them, such as Western Union and Missouri Pacific, have increased their dividends since the shrinkage commenced. Now stocks may go lower, we may indeed see a partial panic some time this spring, but I cannot believe that railway properties which pay six, seven and eight per cent., and which sell under or near par, are good subjects for bear attacks. If New York Central cannot earn more than six per cent. I regard it as cheap at 115, and Lake Shore is worth par even if it could not pay more than five per cent. Wall street, I think, has almost fully discounted the damage likely to occur to first-class railway securities by the paralleling of rival lines.

INVESTOR—Yet, you still say that general business is likely to remain depressed for some time to come. If this is so will not Wall street sympathize with the rest of the country—in other words, do not all prices go up and down together?

SIR O.—Not at all ; the movement upward or downward is never simultaneous. The causes which affect prices are like stones thrown into a lake—the movement is communicated from one point to another, and time is required for the disturbance at the centre to be felt at the circumference. Now, the stock market always happens to be at the centre of new movements in business. The first throbbing of the new life in business was felt in the stock market, in 1870, and the fever of speculation raged in Wall street for a year and a half before it reached other departments of the business world. Land and labor were the last to feel the upward surges of this movement. Now, I believe, the circle is complete, and, barring disaster of some kind, I think that stock values will harden from this time forth. I mean, of course, in a general way. Yet it is not improbable that the process of liquidation may some time this spring bring us to the lowest range of prices yet reached.

INVESTOR—How about governments? Will they maintain their extraordinarily high valuation compared with their interest-bearing capacity?

SIR O.—It is very clear to my mind that either governments are too high or good railway bonds and shares are too low. It is absurd to suppose that a three per cent. government bond should be selling above par and and an eight per cent. stock like Lake Shore in the nineties. There are plenty of almost absolutely certain securities which would pay six per cent., and these must grow in favor. No, I am no longer a bear on stock values, although I think that trade will continue bad; that the price of house property may fall off, and that rents may be somewhat lower this spring than they have been.

INVESTOR—But I thought you held to the view that the gold unit of value was bringing down prices all over the world.

SIR O.—And so it is; but there are exceptions. It has not reduced the value of governments in any country, or of good bonds, debentures or shares, for these represent properties in which the interest is reasonably certain; and that interest or dividends being payable in gold, the owner gets the advantage of the appreciation of the yellow metal. Debt obligations of any kind which can be converted into gold will steadily appreciate when all other prices are shrinking.

INVESTOR—The outlook, then, is reasonably good for holders of securities?

SIR O.—The money lending, money owing and creditor classes, when the assets are good, will all profit by the appreciation of gold, which is now showing itself in the depreciation of everything which it measures. I do not think that anyone who has money to invest will loose in the purchase of securities at present prices and then keep out of debt.

A Gold and Silver Currency.

Certain misleading Eastern papers, when it was announced that Mr. Buckner, of Missouri, was made chairman of the Bank and Banking Committee of the House of Representatives, made haste to denounce him as an inflationist and an unsafe person to deal with so important a subject as banking. But Mr. Buckner, it seems, believes in hard money, objects to the legal tender quality of the greenback, and is desirous that if any change is made it should be in the direction of using more gold and silver in the general business of the country.

The writer of this article was the chief executive officer of the Bullion Club, and as such prepared a memorial to Congress three years ago asking for the withdrawal of all greenbacks and national bank notes under the denomination of twenty dollars, the object being to permit a greater use of gold and silver small coins in the trade of the country. Rufus Hatch, John McGinnis, Brayton Ives, and other leading members of the club were earnestly in favor of this proposition, which did not look to any contraction of the currency, for the notes withdrawn were to be reissued in larger denominations. But it was regarded by the club as an anomoly that a nation producing half the gold and silver of the world should use paper almost exclusively in its retail traffic, while France, Great Britain, Germany, and other nations, which produced no bullion, encouraged its production and coinage by using it exclusively in all minor trade transactions.

An effort was made to get the support of the New York press to this proposal of the Bullion Club, but not a word would they say in its favor. The memorial was presented to the Senate by Senator Roscoe Conkling, and in the House by S. S. Cox. It was referred to the Banking Committee of the latter, which reported adversely, and there the matter dropped.

Mr. Buckner is now about to introduce a bill embodying the views of the New York Bullion Club. He proposes to withdraw all greenbacks under the denomination of ten dollars. As the lowest national bank note is five dollars, should Mr. Buckner's bill be carried, there would be an opening for $56,000,000 of gold and silver coin of a less denomination than ten dollars. The only excuse for the one and two dollar bills has been their usefulness in paying for packages and newspaper subscriptions by mail, but the new postal notes are adapted better for this purpose, as fractional sums can be sent when called for.

At present the great bulk of our gold coinage—nine-tenths, in fact—is in twenty-dollar gold pieces, and is intended for the use of bankers who expect some time to ship them abroad when the balance of trade is against us. Our non-use of gold in general trade, of course, makes that metal less valuable with us than it is in other countries. In other words, it is put to one more use amongst the nations of Europe than in the United States. Were gold and silver used exclusively for minor dealings, and bank bills and greenbacks employed only for large transactions, our bullion coinage would be utilized and another check be put to any drain of the precious metals to other countries.

The banks are now being forced to withdraw their paper issues. Why not take advantage of this chance to use gold and silver exclusively? The gold note and the silver certificate are the most perfect currency ever invented. They represent their face value in gold and silver, dollar for dollar. We would draw specie from all parts of the world were we to adopt this policy. In France, with a population of twenty millions less than our own, there is five times more gold and silver in circulation; yet France is a non-producer of bullion, while half the output of the world comes from mines within the limit of the United States.

Mayor Edson's message is creditable to him. He calls attention to a gross abuse in the Tax Office in the unequal valuation of real estate. He is quite right in objecting to spring elections and in demanding such reforms in the city charter, as well as lodge authority and responsibility in the hands of the Mayor.

Mayor Low's message shows that Brooklyn has the same problems to solve that so vex New York. With a very few changes the document, apart from the figures, might have been signed by Franklin Edson instead of Seth Low. What, by the way, has become of the discussion touching the desirability of uniting the two cities under one administration? The bridge has been called "the umbilical cord" which unites the mother and daughter cities. Both would gain if they had one common head and a local legislature, whose sway would extend to each side of the East River. On the subject of rapid transit Mayor Low correctly states the problem when he says that the system of elevated roads will not be complete until a passenger in any part of Brooklyn can ride continuously to any part of New York and vice versa. When in this way the two cities become one the difficulties which now beset annexation will seem puerile.

The New Aqueduct and the Annexed District.

Ex-Judge A. B. Tappen, who is a resident of Fordham, was asked his opinion about the new aqueduct and the recent appointment of Mr. Baldwin as one of the Commissioners.

"I think," said the Judge, "that Commissioners should be appointed who have not too much private business to attend to. The Mayor, Comptroller and Commissioner of Public Works have such official cares that they cannot give proper attention to the details necessarily involved in the construction of this great aqueduct. Hence, I think that the other Commissioners ought to be persons who could devote their whole time to it. Mr. Baldwin may be so situated. I hope he is."

"Do you favor the recent change of the route?" asked the writer.

"Yes; I think it was judicious, although the line is longer; but, then, the land to be condemned is not so costly."

"What do you think of the Ramapo scheme?"

"Well, if we keep on wasting water as at present, in a few years even the new aqueduct will not supply us with a sufficient quantity for the needs of our growing population. For my own part, I think we have water enough without a new aqueduct. We use one hundred million gallons daily; that is, ninety gallons for every man, woman and child in the city. About one-half of this water is wasted. A meter system, which would force every family and factory to pay for what they use, would reduce the consumption over one-third. I slept in a house last night in which there were nine faucets on one floor. Many of these in different parts of the city are kept open day and night, and what would make a river of water is drained away daily. I know the cry is we cannot have too much water, and so we must go to the expense of building another aqueduct, which, when finished, will deliver three gallons to every one now supplied. I think the Commissioners should recommend measures to the Legislature to put a stop to the waste of water."

"How about the Suburban Rapid Transit Road in the annexed district? When will it commence operations?"

"The company have been at work three years, but I know nothing of its actions except from common rumor. A bridge is to be constructed across the Harlem River at Second avenue, but it is believed it is to be for the benefit of the New Haven Road. The people in the central portions of the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth wards cannot understand why the Suburban Rapid Transit route does not include Third avenue, on the other side of the Harlem River. An elevated road there would be immediately profitable."

"Mr. Samuel L. Filley, the president of the Suburban Rapid Transit Company," replied the writer, "tells me that a line up Third avenue in the Twenty-third Ward would ruin the company, as an elevated road would injure property on an eighty-foot street, and so involve claims for damages. Hence his anxiety to get away from thoroughfares already built upon, so there can be no injury to property."

"Judge Angell tells me that the Third avenue owners all agreed to make no claims for damages if an elevated road was built on the line of their street. This consent was given in the interest of a rival rapid transit scheme."

"Why was it not successful, then?" asked the writer.

"Because there was no possibility of getting a bridge across Third avenue, and hence the money could not be raised."

"How about parks in the annexed district?" queried the interviewer.

"Well," replied Judge Tappen, "the Commissioners have prepared a report which is to be sent to the Legislature in a few days. Their recommendations will probably be adopted, provided the acquiring title to the proposed purchases does not cost too much. The new parks will be of little or no value to anyone for several years to come, but provision ought to be made for the next generation. See how badly New York city is off for breathing spaces. In any properly built city there ought to be a good sized park within twenty minutes' walk of every house. The parks in the annexed district should be inclosed, but very little money need be spent upon them."

Millbrook Drains.

Notice is given that the bill of the costs, charges and expenses incurred by reason of the proceedings in the above-entitled matter will be presented for taxation to one of the Justices of the Supreme Court, at the City Hall, on the 14th day of January, 1884; and that the said bill of costs, charges and expenses has been deposited in the office of the Department of Public Works, there to remain for and during the space of ten days.

Home Decorative Notes.

—Correct taste can only be cultivated by incessant study, it is only knowledge that enables us to form a perfect judgment with respect to beauty and fitness, patience is required, and we may try numberless different schemes without touching upon one which is apparently successful, there are also many prejudices to overcome, but with constant perseverance we can occasionally look back through life and find that many have been dropped by the way.

—The opalescent glass with gold or silver plating forms a very showy and beautiful wall decoration, and for the panels around a fire-place it is extremely effective, as the silver plating at the back reflects the light, thereby making all the opalescent tints visible.

—The hanging crescent basket is a most graceful holder for either fresh cut flowers or growing grasses.

—Shell shaped baskets of silver or gilt and filled with flowers of one color are much used for table centre pieces.

—Fashion has certainly given a wonderful fillip to art needlework during the past few years; every now and then strange and curious designs and styles greet the eyes. Quite an original piece of work has recently been executed by Haas & Wirland, of 1295 Broadway, the article is a piano stool in representation of a mushroom, the seat of the stool is made of white velvet, with a very delicate and odd bit of embroidery in gold cord placed upon one side, the stem is of olive green plush and rests upon a base formed of olive plush, from which springs two or three mushrooms of tender growth.

—The looking glass is not in itself a beautiful object, it is even unpleasant in large masses, a very great improvement therefore may be obtained by painting on the glass and frame at one side a branch of blackberries with leaves, flower and fruit; apple blossoms are also very delicate and graceful.

—The exquisite bonbonnieres are works of art and supreme elegance; branches of the cherry tree in flower and fruit, apples, peaches and plums with silken bags attached, are wonderfully attractive. The satin jugs of red, blue and yellow; Sedan chairs of pink satin, with attendants gorgeously apparelled, gauntlets and helmets of steel, in fact every possible design is brought into requisition to entice the bonbon lovers.

—A combined paper weight and inkstand is a bronze mat upon which is seated the cunning Jocko, holding within his paws his favorite fruit, the walnut, which opens with a spring and discloses a receptacle for ink.

—A small piece of camphor placed in canton flannel bags, in which silver is put away, will prevent the articles from losing their brilliancy.

—Two Japanese fans of bright colors, opened wide and fastened together in the centre by a knot of ribbon, serves quite effectually to brighten side walls or give color to dark corners.

—A very beautiful and extremely delicate design for a royal blue plush table scarf is the clematis flower, a very realistic effect is produced by forming the flowers with arrasene, cutting each end and fastening it in the centre by small yellow stitches in yellow filoselle, or, if you prefer a tiny gold bead, the latter is quite effective.

—A very striking and picturesque floral decoration is a large panel made of red and yellow tulips, bordered with ivy leaves.

—Strange, extremely odd and startling designs are constantly being originated for the heads of canes and umbrellas. The skull head, carved in white ivory, which, by simply touching a spring, causes the eyes to roll, mouth to open and tongue to protrude, is novel, indeed. A pretty design for an umbrella handle has a bird's claw in gold, clasping an ivory ball. The Kate Greenaway figures, delicately carved, are also much used for ornamentation. A large assortment of these goods are shown by Linke, of 1188 Broadway. This firm also offers a fine variety of stationery and a large collection of artistic articles in ivory; paper-knives, massive in size and in shapes of poignards, sabres, daggers, etc., with the wood colors and delicate amber tints.

—White eider down flannel, embroidered with bunches of forget-me-nots and tied about the stems with a bow of blue satin ribbon, is exceedingly delicate and pretty for a baby's afghan.

—Sham towels are made of fine linen or damask and embroidered across each end in outline work, groups of flowers or figures, finished with drawn work and tied fringe.

—The plain effects of a bedroom mantel may be improved by hanging in the centre a round or square bevelled mirror, with a frame of oak or plush, and on each side, a trifle above, place small shelves for vases, bric-a-brac, etc.

—The small round or square brass-legged tables are fashionable upon which to serve afternoon tea.

—Oyster plates are quite out of date, as the bivalve is now served upon the shell and imbedded in ice and celery, with a piece of lemon in the mass.

—The taste in furniture changes, as in bonnets and gowns, for the simple reason that taste and fashion have grown to be synonymous. At the rooms of H. B. Herts & Son, of 747 Broadway, many elegant and tasteful designs in upholstery are offered; a variety of curtains, draperies and table covers, richly ornamented parlor tables, with odd shelves for bric-a-brac, mahogany hall seats, upholstered in choice designs of illuminated leather, and exquisite sets of dining room chairs and tables of oak and mahogany.

—In selecting a carpet or paper for a room choose a medium tint, as dark carpets and walls absorb the light and give the room a gloomy appearance.

—The display of silverware on the modern dinner table is not so great as during the past few years, all high pieces are banished to the silver chest, as the latest freak is a flat dinner table; the display now consists of Dresden and Royal Worcester vases, choice chandelabra of china and beautiful specimens of glass.

The Commercial Blunder of a Century.

The rapid increase in the number of vehicles in the streets at the lower end of the city is a matter of common observation. Blockades, even in fair weather and without the intervention of the snow, are of daily occurrence; and horse cars standing like a continuous train almost a half mile long, on some of the west side streets, form such familiar spectacles that they are hardly observed. The blockade, also, of the sidewalks by goods in every conceivable form of package is only another sign of streets becoming altogether unequal to the enormous traffic which they must accommodate.

The cause of this constantly increasing difficulty is of course easily explained. Business can expand only in a single direction, and against any movement in this direction all heavy business shows a decided tendency to resistance. But this, unfortunately, is not our only nor greatest evil. While the area of traffic remains restricted, and the streets fail to expand to make way for the countless and rapidly increasing total of vehicles by which they are thronged, our methods of handling merchandise within the city do not improve. During the past fifty years we have made no substantial advance. We adhere, as closely as possible, to the original custom of locating warehouses, wholesale or retail, here, there and everywhere, without regard to fitness or convenience, and of carting goods from pier to warehouse, and from warehouse back again to pier, whenever they are to be started anew over some line of transportation. Surely if Washington Irving was a true delineator of ancestral customs the original settlers on Manhattan Island must have invented these elaborate methods, and we have been careful to maintain them as a very precious inheritance.

As the case stands at present, the grant of eminent domain over the water front was about the worst misfortune that has befallen New York during its entire municipal history. This water front is nobody's property. The city itself, crippled by the honest demands of municipal government, superadded to the dishonest exactions of political rings, has never felt able to take the responsibility of any comprehensive plan of water front improvement, and the riparian owners have possessed neither the power nor the confidence to act in their own behalf. A bundle of legal complications, and the worst dock and warehouse system in the world, are, therefore, the only products of the act which delegated the power of controlling our water front to hands by whom it has been ignorantly and unskillfully wielded. Innumerable schemes for remedy have been suggested. It is not very many years ago since a syndicate proposed to take the water front property from the city, and, acquiring also all private rights, create a symmetrical dock system through which we could have been relieved from our present embarrassments. But this plan, like all other suggestions, came to nothing; and the muddle of conflicting claims and interests grows constantly more and more difficult of adjustment.

There is too much reason to fear that it is now too late to secure the improvements that New York needs as a means of maintaining her supremacy as a shipping point over Brooklyn and other sections of the harbor. Not one package of merchandise, unless demanded for the local trade, should ever be seen upon the streets of the city. Yet a half square mile of drygoods, more or less, intended for distribution to all parts of the Continent, are collected in one section of the city, the section where a short water supply creates a chronic condition of fire panic. This seems very stupid; but drygoods are only one description of merchandise among the variety that goes to make up the total of our export and import trade. Were it not that Brooklyn, and the railroad corporations that find their terminal points in Jersey City, have come forward and taken a large proportion of the heavy merchandise off our hands, monopolizing completely the handling of many articles of commerce, we might look to see men rolling great hogsheads or barrels of sugar, flour, bacon, etc., up to warehouses located, perhaps, along Broadway, only to be rolled down again when the merchant or consignee who has the goods in charge finds a customer in some distant city or port.

Will it be possible now to secure a system of warehousing so intimately connected with the piers that the cartage of merchandise only in process of transportation through the city can be rendered unnecessary? Complaint is made by shippers that the sectional docks on the East River occupy a great deal of valuable space, which should be devoted to the uses of commerce. This is undoubtedly true; but the space which they cover represents only a small part of the valuable surface wasted along the water front. A possible half mile of storage warehouses are found to the southward of those docks; but elsewhere, all the way to the Battery, drinking saloons, restaurants, cigar stores and other small establishments monopolize the space, while the upper floors of the buildings are used for offices, or even barber shops and workshops, as foreign to the business of transportation and storage as though the location were a thousand miles inland from any navigable stream. If you extend your observations along the Hudson River you witness an almost precisely corresponding spectacle. The water front everywhere would impress the stranger with the idea that the city of New York is an immense bazaar or market for small tradesmen, but doing little at wholesale. Added to the waste of space which is witnessed on every hand, the Belt Line Railroad, pronounced a nuisance by all shippers, helps to make a passenger thoroughfare of streets which should be given up exclusively to freight transportation. The failure of the Dock Department to improve the water front between Grand and Thirty-fourth streets adds, also, to the clutter and confusion of that section of the city.

The remedy for all these evils is now more easily suggested than applied. Warehouses, resting on a foundation of piers, could be constructed over our river streets, thus preserving them as a means of communication along our river front, while reclaiming the space now wasted by an improvement not in any respect ornamental. This is the suggestion of a prominent officer of the Maritime Exchange, familiar with dock systems at home and abroad, and it seems to be about the only means remaining for the treatment of thoroughfares which are proving to be an obstruction rather than a benefit to the city. But the cost of the improvement would be very great, too great to allow it to be undertaken by the city; and the best means of securing the object would probably be found in the adoption of a general plan which private enterprise could be trusted to bring to perfection in the course of time. The city could purchase the franchise of the Belt Line Railroad, and allow the tracks to be used for the transportation of merchandise.

But one thought, a result of a careful study of our water front situation, occurs here, and it makes the adoption of any comprehensive plan of improvement in New York seem for the present improbable. The water front available for the service of New York commerce seems almost illimitable, and over very long lines, at this time unoccupied, the title may be had for the asking. On the Long Island shore it extends all the way around to Coney Island, and it is being so rapidly improved in that direction that the day does not seem far distant when the improvements will have reached their objective point. Application for water rights reaching as far south as Fort Hamilton are even now being made, and when the people of Brooklyn apply for water rights they generally mean business. But even Long Island is not the only nor the best field of operations. We have seen recently on the north side of the entrance to the Kill Von Kull a supplementary port spring into being for the handling of one single product, petroleum. There, twenty-five to thirty great ocean-going ships may be seen at all times awaiting or receiving cargoes. But this is only the beginning of a movement. Just across the channel from this new Port Petroleum lies Staten Island, a segment of the metropolitan circle which, with the adjacent shore of New Jersey, offers within less than an hour's ride from the Battery, more than twice the extent of water front now improved throughout the entire Port of New York. This water front, too, is more cheaply connected with the great railroad system of the country than the portion of the harbor that lies to the eastward of the Hudson River and the Narrows, and it is, therefore, more susceptible of being turned to the account of economy and despatch in handling merchandise. Eventually, the Narrows must be tunneled, and this work will help to place Brooklyn on a par with Staten Island in point of accessibility; but at present she shares the disadvantages of New York. In both cities the large capital required to improve the water front is a serious handicap at the start, and the inefficient means of handling merchandise is the cause of additional expense and a great deal of delay.

What it would be worth while for New York to undertake, as a means of clearing her streets and adding to the comforts of metropolitan life, is another question. Nature has evidently decreed that, outside of our shipping offices, she shall not have a monopoly of the commerce of the port, but while the great body of her shippers, taught by experience that their profits depend only on cheap wharfage and warehousing, without regard to location, may have become indifferent, the popular feeling would favor an effort at improving our water front in the interest of the city at large.

More Rapid Transit.

The Rapid Transit Commissioners are in Chicago, inspecting the cable system there, but will be at work again in New York next week. Before they left, Mr. John J. Macklin appeared before them to advocate additional elevated road facilities up town. The route suggested would skirt the west shore of the Harlem River until it intersects what would be the line of One Hundred and Sixty-seventh street if extended, and, running westward, pass over the Croton Aqueduct and under Edgecomb road to Tenth avenue in a curved line to One Hundred and Sixty-ninth street and Eleventh avenue, from there going north to One Hundred and Eighty-first street, and, turning westward, pass along One Hundred and Eighty-first street to Kingsbridge road. From that point the line will run along Kingsbridge road to Kingsbridge. A branch road beginning at One Hundred and Eighty-first street and Eleventh avenue and running to and over the proposed suspension bridge over the Harlem River at One Hundred and Eighty-first street, was also suggested as part of the general plan. But while they are about it the commissioners would do well to propose a scheme for the whole city, embracing the water front, the cross streets down town, as well as additional facilities up town. A passenger should be able to ride to any part of the city on one ticket.

Contractors, Take Care of Your Dynamite.

Mr. Patrick Farley was the contractor for blasting some rocks up town, and had a lot of dynamite cartridges lying on the sidewalk ready to be put in the holes that his workmen were preparing for them, when suddenly, from some unknown cause, the cartridges exploded and broke a lot of windows in the neighborhood. Mr. Richard Rollins bought up the claims of five of the injured owners and sued Mr. Farley and got judgment for $291 in the Marine Court. This judgment was affirmed by the General Term of that court, and then the Court of Common Pleas agreed with Mr. J. P. Reed, Jr., who was Mr. Rollins' lawyer, and again affirmed that judgment. Mr. Farley claimed that the cartridges exploded without any cause, so far as the evidence showed, and that he, having proven that it was impossible, under the circumstances under which they were lying on the walk, that they should explode, had freed himself from any charge of negligence. But Judge Van Brunt, who wrote the opinion of the Court, said that it was negligence for Mr. Farley's workmen to have left so dangerous a compound on the sidewalk uncared for and liable to be disturbed by any passer by; that he had no right to leave it unguarded on a public sidewalk; and that while it was claimed that this article was not interfered with, and that it could not possibly explode, the evidence showed that it did explode. Since this decision Judge Van Brunt has very properly been elected to the Supreme Court bench.

The Brooklyn Bridge, though a scientific success, is a financial failure. For maintenance and the interest on its bonds it costs about $100,000 a month. Its total receipts from all sources from May 25th to the last day of November, was $138,773. Its average income would be less than $23,000 per month, if the present rates are maintained, but undoubtedly the footways will be made free by the Legislature and the railway fare reduced to three and perhaps two cents. It is safe to say that under those circumstances the income would not be more than $10,000 per month. For the accommodation of foot passengers and vehicles the bridge is practically useless. It is simply a railway bridge, which does not begin to pay the cost of construction.

Concerning Men and Things.

D. O. Mills is reported to have been badly hurt by the shrinkage of railway securities and the unprofitableness of certain new railway enterprises in which he is interested. He is said to be a large loser by the West Shore enterprise; then he was a bull on Erie at forty, and it is suspected he lost something in the Northern Pacifics. Up to two years ago Mr. Mills was one of the most successful operators in the country. He made a large fortune in California in railway enterprises; when he came East his every operation was profitable. His Lake Shore investments netted him immense sums of money. With all his losses Mr. Mills has a very large fortune left —five millions at least. So it is probable he will have no occasion to become a charge on the Commissioners of Charities and Corrections.

The Metropolitan Opera House has been tested as a ball room, but opinions are divided as to its superiority over the Academy of Music. It affords more space for the dancers, which is an unquestioned advantage, and the supper and retiring rooms are much superior to similar accommodations in the rival house. But the seating room to witness the display is very scant, and people are forced to take boxes, which makes the expense greater than the average ball-goer can afford. Then the halls are drafty and too cold for ladies in light dresses. As a spectacle, the interior is not as brilliant as is the Academy on a ball night. The light colors of the decorations afford no background for the ladies' toilets. The military balls, with their uniforms, show to much better effect than where all the gentlemen are in ordinary evening dress. A fancy-dress ball would, doubtless, be very effective at the new Opera House, as the moving and many colored figures would afford the needed contrast to the light hues which prevail in the decorations. Still, the Opera House will probably continue to be in demand, in view of the larger number which can be accommodated.

The financial distress is finding out the weak persons connected with our banking system. One of the bank officers, found to be in trouble last week, commenced his somewhat heedless course by giving his name and countenance to some very unsound mining schemes three years ago. His signature figured on several prospectuses with people who had very little reputation, and whose enterprises have since come to grief. There is a general impression that before the trouble is over a good deal of rottenness will show itself where least expected in connection with the banking houses of the city.

The gentlemen who brought suit against Prince & Whiteley to recover money lost in the famous Bradshaw Mine deal, wanted to produce Mr. James R. Keene as a witness. The judge, however, would not enforce the subpœna against that gentleman, on the ground, according to a newspaper report, that Mr. Keene might himself be incriminated. This Bradshaw enterprise was one of the most barefaced and villainous swindles ever put on the investing public. There are hundreds of miserable swindlers in State prisons who are not half as guilty as the concocters of this rascally fraud. It is clear that Messrs. Prince & Whiteley were themselves deceived. It is marvellous, however, that they did not help the fleeced investors to bring the real criminals to justice. Mr. Keene's reticence in this matter is quite remarkable, his friends and intimates were badly bitten, and he ought to have been the first to expose the scoundrels who were back of this Bradshaw deal. It is preposterous to suppose that in telling the truth Mr. Keene would incriminate any but the guilty parties.

Charles Delmonico.

There is no doubt but that this gentleman was insane for some months before he disappeared. A writer in the Sun gives an interesting account of his habits, from which we make the following extract:

One day he found a friend reading Herbert Spencer's volume on Education. He took it away, read it through several times, and was full of it for months afterward. The reading of this book induced him even to try the other works of Spencer as well as those of H. T. Buckle. He knew some of the brightest songs of Beranger and Musset by heart. Painters, writers, actors, musicians were always welcome at his house. Some of the newspaper men were his chums for years, and he took even a pecuniary interest in several literary ventures, notably the Arcadian.

By and by, however, as the business of the firm and his interest in it increased, he began to lose the taste both for literature and for art. The removal of the firm's up-town establishment from Fourteenth to Twenty-sixth street seems to have ended his intellectual aspirations. He gave up both books and pictures. Business and stock speculation were all he seemed to care for. The daily newspapers and once a week THE REAL ESTATE RECORD AND GUIDE satisfied him thoroughly. Finding him one day absorbed in THE RECORD, a friend asked him whether that was his Buckle and Spencer now. "Yes," was the answer, "and I'll tell you why. Because if I find here that you or anybody else took out a chattel mortgage I put a stop to his account at the office, and d—— quick, too."

Of course during all this time Mr. Delmonico was perfectly sane, but lately he speculated largely in stocks, discharged his most faithful employes and was as morose as he had formerly been kindly. His was a pitiful ending to a useful life.

Holders of property between Eighth and Ninth avenues, north of the Central Park, are circulating petitions to the Board of Aldermen to change the name of New to Manhattan avenue. It seems there are several "New" avenues up-town, as well as a New street down-town. It has also been suggested that the property-holders in this same neighborhood should organize to discourage the building of common flats and poor houses between the Park and One Hundred and Twenty-third street. When the Morningside Park is completed the property immediately adjacent, both above and below, ought to be very desirable for residences, and will command a high figure, if, in the meantime, there are no tenement houses, stables or nuisances erected thereupon.

The Southern Pacific and Its Future.

"I have returned to New York to stay," said William M. Lent to the writer. "I have bought a house on Fifth avenue, and my family will soon join me from San Francisco."

"What is the matter with San Francisco, Mr. Lent; is it not thriving?"

"Never in any former period has it increased in population and wealth so largely. The mining fever seems to have subsided, for a while, at least, but the three great factors which are adding so much to the wealth and importance of the City of the Golden Gate are grain, grapes and fruit. The wharves of the city are thronged with drays conveying grain and other agricultural products to fill the vessels loading at the docks. The city is stretching westward to the Pacific Ocean, which, with the aid of the cable-cars, is now within a half an hour's ride of the business part of San Francisco. By the way," continued Mr. Lent, "you ought to have that cable system in New York. It is in every way superior to the horse-cars. It it the most comfortable mode of transit and much swifter than horse-power."

"Then, why are you leaving San Francisco?"

"Well, New York is the great centre. It is the headquarters for all the enterprise of the country. There is not much for an idle man like myself to do in San Francisco. My old associates in mining matters are scattered. The Palace Hotel looks gloomy to was it was in the old times, and even the once crowded billiard room has lost its attraction. So I have rented my house there to Mr. Flood, and propose to end my days with my family in the metropolis. There is one point that struck me in my recent trip across the Continent, which may probably interest the readers of The Record and Guide. I came to New York by way of the Southern Pacific route; that is, through Southern California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, and then by the Missouri Pacific and Wabash systems to New York. There is only half a day's difference as compared in time with the Central and Union Pacific routes, but the journey is a far more comfortable one. I was amazed at the enormous business of the Southern Pacific. Every train seemed crowded, the freight cars were endless, and every depot was a scene of great activity. I was particularly impressed by the substantial improvements taking place in Texas. All the roads seem to be doing an unusually large business. I think people make a mistake paying so much attention to the northern regions when such a splendid country is open for settlement like that along the line of the Southern Pacific Road and its connections South and East. It produces everything that can be grown in a northern climate, and in addition cotton, fruit and grapes. Its advantages for cattle grazing and sheep breeding are ever so much superior, as there are no long winters in which it is necessary to shelter stock."

"I recall," said the writer, "an interview with you in The Record and Guide in 1882, in which you predicted that Union Pacific and Central Pacific stock was destined to fall off very greatly in value. Indeed, you thought these roads might yet be abandoned by their owners and turned over to the government for the debts due the latter."

"Yes," was the reply. "I recollect that interview was published very widely, especially in the Californian papers, and I was criticised therefor, but if I had gone short of the stock at that time, and remained short, I would have made a great deal of money. At the date of that interview Union Pacific was selling at 117, and Central Pacific in the nineties. See where they are now."

"Do you still hold the same view?"

"Substantially," was the reply. "The Union Pacific has since been paralleled to Salt Lake City by the Denver & Rio Grande, and a new company has, I hear, been organized which will build east, from Oakland to a pass in the Sierra Nevada, where it will run through the Bodie region and the best mineral section of Nevada, and join a road building west from Salt Lake, thus paralleling the Central Pacific and running through a far finer section of country. As the stock and bonded debt will be much smaller than that of the Central and Union Pacific roads, the latter will suffer very greatly. By the way, I may say here that I think, on public grounds, the United States government should allow the Southern Pacific the 15,000,000 acres of land in dispute. It is the interest of the railroads to sell to actual settlers. They want to populate the country and develop its business, so as to help the bonds and stocks of their roads. If the government retains the land it will get into the hands of speculators, who will not improve it, but will make artificial deserts of the region through which the railroad passes. There has been a good deal of unmerited abuse heaped upon Messrs. Stanford, Croker, Huntington and the other owners of the Southern Pacific system, but I say they are public-spirited citizens, who will be held in high esteem when they have passed away, for the good work they have done. They have constructed great systems of railways through regions that needed development; they have discouraged speculation in land, but have always favored actual settlers. They have spent large sums in developing the great grape industries of California, and to Mr. Stanford must be accorded the particular credit of organizing a street-cable service for San Francisco, which puts that city ahead of New York in the matter of inter-mural travel.

The Ulster & Delaware Railroad Co. wanted some of Mr. Frederick W. Gross' land for railroad purposes, and made him an offer, which he did not take; so commissioners were appointed, and then the railroad claimed that as they had made Mr. Gross a better offer beforehand than he ultimately received from the commissioners, he must pay the costs, but the Supreme Court, after hearing Mr. Wm. Lounsberry in behalf of Mr. Gross, decided that as the constitution provides that private property cannot be taken without just compensation, the expense of taking it can never be charged against the person whose property is taken. For example it might happen that the land taken would not be worth more than the expenses of the commissioners; and if the owner of the property had to pay these, he would get nothing at all for his land, and whenever he is made to pay such expenses he fails to receive just compensation to that extent.

The Real Estate Exchange.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited) the following resolutions were proposed:

Resolved, That a committee be appointed, composed of stockholders of The Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited), which shall be known as the "Special Committee on State and Local Legislation."

Resolved, That to this Committee shall be confided the work of effecting such reforms in our laws as will relieve owners of realty and taxpayers of unjust burdens imposed upon them.

Resolved, That this Committee be requested to keep the following objects in view:

I. Such amendments to our city charter as will give us a responsible and economical government.

II. Such changes in our laws as will facilitate and cheapen the transfer of real estate, so that the owners of realty shall have the same advantages now possessed by owners of personal property.

III. Such amendments to the laws as will increase the construction of safe and durable buildings and at the same time protect the health of the community by wise and sanitary regulations.

The object, which it was hoped would be effected by the above resolutions, would be to utilize the large and influential membership of the Exchange in procuring needed changes in the laws looking towards better local government, and a reform in our land laws. It is hoped that after a definite plan has been agreed upon that negotiations should be opened with all the leading clubs of the metropolis as well as the various real estate and reform organizations to help all measures looking to responsible government and reform in the laws affecting real estate. It is understood that a sufficient number of signatures has been secured to authorize the purchase of the site in Liberty street, which will be completed during the coming week, when a call for 30 per cent. of the subscription will be made to meet the first installment which will be due February 10th.

Is There Water in the Cellar?

Mrs. Greenman bought a house from Mr. Watkins, and the evidence showed that the latter told her that there had never been any water in the cellar before the time when she bought it; that the water there then was in consequence of a freshet in the river. Mrs. G. proposed to go around and enquire among the neighbors about it, but Mr. W. persuaded her not to, telling her there was no use of that, that he had known the place as long as the neighbors, and that he would not lie to her; and she took his word for this. There was also evidence that water had been in the cellar before. So the Court set aside the deed on the ground of fraud, and let her free from her purchase, and the General Term of the Supreme Court, Third Department, has lately affirmed that judgment in her favor, Mr. A. P. Smith appearing as her counsel. We imagine that such suits might often be brought successfully.

A New Gas.

It appears that the processes whereby light and heat can be obtained have not yet been exhausted. A new gas, made of petroleum, has now been discovered. Mr. W. Jennings Demorest, who greatly interests himself in new inventions, stated to a reporter of The Record and Guide that it can be supplied at half the price of ordinary gas—say for about one dollar per thousand feet—though the cost of production was of course much smaller. It gives a pure gas, free from smoke, and will not condense in the coldest atmosphere. It can be placed in every house, and does not require any main pipes or tearing up of the streets, as it is supplied from a gasometer, in which it is compressed. It does not waste and gives a good clear light, quite equal, if not superior, to coal gas. The gasometer can be placed in every house in the same spot where the meter now is. The new gas is also effective in producing heat. The machine for making it is quite simple and inexpensive. A thousand feet can be turned out in fifteen minutes or less by an easy process. The apparatus costs about $100, and enables people to make their own gas. It has been supplied to many houses, where it is working successfully.

Obituary.

John H. Harnett, the well-known real estate broker and auctioneer brother of Richard V. Harnett, died yesterday at 9.45 A.M. He had been sick for some time of peritonitis, which developed into pneumonia, which resulted fatally. Mr. Harnett was 55 years old when he died. He left a wife, who was the daughter of Constantine Rossweg, of 5 Maiden lane, but no children. Mr. Harnett was an active business man in his day, and was once a candidate for Judge of the Marine Court on the Democratic ticket. He was in the real estate business as an auctioneer for about a year. He will be buried on Sunday from his late residence on Sixtieth street.

When the lawyers wake up to the fact that it is to their interest to lessen the trouble and expense on transferring titles to land, real estate owners may have some hope of soon obtaining relief. At the seventh annual meeting of the New York State Bar Association, which was held at Albany last Tuesday, 8th inst., among other interesting transactions there was adopted the following resolution, offered by Mr. John B. Pine of New York:

Resolved, That the committee on law reform be requested to advocate, without delay, before the present Legislature, the passage of an act amending the acts in reference to the registration of titles and encumbrances of land, in accordance with the action of the association at its last meeting.

Real Estate Department.

The market is dull, of course, it always is early in January. A few weeks will tell a different story. The renting season will soon commence, and many persons are now trying to make up their minds what they will do for the coming year. It is believed that high priced houses and the common run of tenements will not do as well this year as last. There will be un unusual demand, however, for houses renting from $800 to $3,000 per annum.

But few sales were held at the Exchange Salesroom during the week, though the attendance was fair. The most important was that of the lots Nos. 12 and 14 West Eighteenth street, to W. W. Britton, for the Randolph Company. This property will be improved as announced elsewhere. Twenty odd acres in the Twenty-third Ward were bought in by the plaintiff in the action. During the coming week several valuable properties will be sold under foreclosure, as will be seen in our column of advertised legal sales.

The following shows the Conveyances and Mortgages recorded during the past week, as compared with the corresponding week last year:

On Wednesday, January 16th, Richard V. Harnett will sell the investment property, No. 167 Eldridge street. The buildings are on a full lot and bring in a good rental.

Attention is called to the advertisement of W. H. Kelly, who offers for sale, to close an estate, one of the choicest pieces of property on the West Side. It is within five minutes' walk of the Sixth and Ninth Avenue Elevated Railroad station, at Seventy-second street and Ninth avenue. The property in this neighborhood is being rapidly built upon, and within a very few years there will be many magnificent residences in this location. Mr. Kelly's plot of ground is such a one as might be used by anyone of means where a house could be built, having the advantage of being surrounded by beautiful lawns and large shade trees. It is a very rare opportunity to buy one of the very few locations of the kind so convenient to the business portion of this city. The price asked is $100,000, and experts say the price is cheap for such property.

Important Special Notices.

The use of hollow burnt clay bricks and porous terra cotta bricks and blocks for the fire-proofing of buildings has so much increased during the past six years that their excellence as fire-proof materials is now fully established. The most important buildings in New York and other cities have had the hollow burnt clay flat arch brick laid in their floors, and the hollow burnt clay and porous terra cotta brick in their partitions and roofs, all of which have given entire satisfaction. The Navarro flats and nearly all the other large apartment dwellings are built of this material. The factory of the Raritan Hollow and Porous Brick Company is situated within 200 feet of the clay banks, and is directly at the point of shipment on the Raritan River, two miles above Perth Amboy. They have recently enlarged their works, and are using the most improved steam machinery, and have adequate drying and kiln capacity. During the past year they have manufactured and shipped over 1,000,000 square feet of material, enough to cover twenty-three acres. These bricks are fire, water and sound proof, and are indispensable for flat arches, partitions, roofing, hanging ceilings, etc.; the terra cotta in plates is a perfect protection for wooden beams, girders and columns. The clay used is mined by the company from an inexhaustible supply, and can be furnished to customers in any shape or size to order. The advertisement elsewhere explains fully the wonderful merits of this most useful of all the bricks in the market.

The designs in grates, fenders, and fire-place adornments have of late years become very artistic. A visit to W. H. Jackson & Co., 31 East Seventeenth street, is worth making, to see what wonderful progress has been made in these household adornments. This firm has been in business since 1827, and have made fine castings a specialty; they not only manufacture the best goods in the market, but are large importers of tiles, as well as other articles needed by artistic builders. Their work is carefully made for homes where durability is an object, and they rely upon the design, finish and price to recommend it.

The Tidal Wave water closet of the Henry Huber Co., of No. 85 Beekman street, is well worthy the attention of builders of new houses. This closet is self emptying and automatic. It is composed of white earthenware, and it dispenses with plug, soil floats, putty cement joints and complicated supply valves. The advertisement elsewhere gives particulars of this very useful water closet.

The warm air registers and ventilators of the Tuttle & Bailey Manufacturing Co., of No. 83 Beekman street, should be seen by all who are constructing houses. The wares of this company and their prices for registers, ventilators, screens and borders can best be understood by sending for a price list to the office of the company.

Those in need of second-hand building material, or who wish buildings removed on short notice, would do well to call on Thomas E. Tripler at his yards on Avenue B, from Seventeenth to Eighteenth street. Mr. Tripler has been in the business since 1855, succeeding S. H. Bessey, who started in 1835.

Builders in want of lumber and timber would do well to make the acquaintance of Mr. Thomas J. Crombie, at his yards on the East River, foot of Ninety-second and Ninety-third streets. The telephone will reach him from any part of the city. Mr. Crombie, it will be remembered, is one of the commissioners to locate parks in the annexed district.

E. Sweeney & Sons, office 229 Broadway, not only deal in, but are quarriers and manufacturers of, North River blue stone, as well as all stones suitable for curbing, guttering, crosswalks, sidewalks, sills and trimmings for buildings. They claim for their stone durability, beauty of color and cheapness.

A. T. Buckhout, foot of East Twenty-eighth street, claims to have the best assortment of seasoned, dressed lumber in the market. Mr. Buckhout has been thirty years in business, and his dressed pine, spruce, lumber and other woods will be found suitable for all building purposes.

All who want Georgia and Florida yellow pine would do well to call on Decker & Rapp, at their yards, foot Bethune street, North River, or at their office, 114 Wall street. This firm sells wholesale as well as retail. They had some very heavy contracts last year, including the Astor Building on Broadway and a number of bridges on the West Shore Railroad.

Architects and owners who need the services of competent masons and builders would do well to make the acquaintance of Peter Tostevin's Sons, of No. 204 East Fifteenth street. This is an old-established house.

The steam marble works of H. C. & G. S. Bailie, at 304 to 312 East Twenty-second street, should not be overlooked by those who need such work.

John J. Clancy, of 1783 Broadway, makes a specialty of renting and collecting. People living near Fifty-eighth street would do well to keep Mr. Clancy in mind. He is a member of the new Real Estate Exchange, and has first-class references.

Masons' building materials that are durable and cheap can be purchased of Canda & Kane, at their yards, foot of West Fifty first and Fifty second streets, and foot of East Fourteenth street; also at foot of Amity street, Brooklyn. This firm does an extensive business, and can be communicated with by the Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Watson & Pittinger make a specialty of yellow pine flooring and step plank, at their yards on the creek by Carroll Street Bridge, South Brooklyn.

What are claimed to be the only perfect sanitary wash-tubs now in existence can be found at No. 312 Pearl street, at the warehouse of the Stewart Ceramic Co. These tubs are of white crockery, are warranted for thirty years, and, unlike wood, will not decay nor absorb unclean water. There are no seams to open, and they are just perfection for a cleanly household. The same firm have white crockery sinks, very superior to those in ordinary use.

Wood mouldings of all kinds, closet panel-work and ceilings, are done by Plowden Stevens, at the foot of West Forty-eighth street. This establishment has furnished some of the best buildings in the city, including the Berkshire Flats.

The Home Insurance Company of New York publishes its sixty-first semi-annual statement in our columns, and an excellent one it is. Its cash assets amount to $7,493,751.11, all of which are held in reserve, available for payment for losses by fire. Its net surplus is $1,667,240.07. This is undoubtedly one of the best managed fire insurance companies in the United States, if not in the world.

Some of the best carpets, oil-cloths and mattings, suitable for house, office and ship furnishing, will be found at T. W. Bailey & Co.'s, 271 Canal street.

The Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, 51 Chambers street, an admirably managed institution, has declared a dividend of four per cent. on all sums up to $3,000.

Cross, Austin & Co., of Kent avenue and Cross street, Brooklyn, deal in lumber, mouldings, brackets, and hardwoods of all kinds.

W. R. Ostrander & Co., of 19 Ann street, call attention to their new oral annunciator in an advertisement published elsewhere.

H. Mandeville & Son are justly proud of the fine interior they have just completed in the apartments of E. J. Blake, Esq., at the Hawthorne, on Fifty-ninth street. The rooms have been elaborately furnished from designs by Bassett Jones, the architect. Some of this same firm's work is also to be found in the Cordova and Barcelona, and is greatly admired. They can be found at their extensive establishment, Nos. 243 to 249 West Forty-seventh street, city.

Hull's Patent Diving Flue Wrought Iron Furnace is offered to the public as the most powerful, economical and durable heater. It is recommended by a large number of firms, to whom it has been supplied, and has received high commendation from the Commissioners of Emigration.

When Register Reilly removed Mr. Jesse W. Andariese from his position as map clerk in the Register's office he removed a clerk who was really valuable to every one having business with the office. Aside from the difficulty of finding even some of the indexed maps, there are some hundreds of maps in the libers for which no official index ever was made, and which a stranger to the office never could find excepting through a map clerk who has the data at hand to assist him. It will take any new clerk nearly the entire term of the new Register to gain anything like an intelligent familiarity with the maps, and a clerk is certainly of no value in the position who cannot put his hand at once upon any map in the office. This Mr. Andariese not only could do but was always willing to do. There is probably not a person who ever required Mr. Andariese's services who would not gladly endorse his reappointment, and he certainly should be reappointed.

The Danger of War.

The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the question of the sale of the various navy yards, has reported that none of those near large cities should be parted with, and that at least five should be retained, which the committee think are indispensable to the country. The following remarks from the report are so timely, and restate points so often made in these columns, that we give them with the hope of impressing our readers with the necessity of harbor defenses for this great city:

War is the heritage of man; and for the people of the United States history will have been written in vain should they delude themselves with the idle hope of perpetual peace; and when war does come in these modern days it is swift and terrible. Exposed and unprepared as we are, the damage that could be inflicted upon us ere the note of warning had well sounded would be beyond calculation. But, unmindful of the great lessons of war, we wait for the emergency of the hour to force us into measures which should have been already matured. Of all methods this has been found to be the most wasteful. The Virginius affair cost the country $5,000,000 without any adequate return. It is a popular belief that our traditional policy of peace is easily maintained by reason of our isolation and our freedom from the entanglements which so frequently disturb the relations of European powers. But this is a delusion. We have, in common with all maritime countries, interests which we are in duty bound to support. The present disturbed condition of affairs on the Asiatic station, the construction of the Panama Canal, the interpolation of the Monroe doctrine into our political creed, our growing commerce in the Pacific and the naval strength developed by the rising powers of South America are each and every one subjects prolific of questions of serious import to the people of the United States. Their government may at any day be called upon to take its stand and carry into practical effect the broad and enlightened principles which have characterized its foreign policy. To do this and to exercise that moral influence which belongs to us of right as one of the wealthiest and most liberal members of the great family of nations, a certain reserve of force is absolutely essential.

The examination of titles has hitherto formed the chief item in the expense attending the transfer of real property. This has been mainly owing to the fact that conveyances and liens are generally registered under the names of the parties, the record thus relating to the persons who have held an interest in the land and not to the land itself. The inconvenience of this system has been particularly felt in the large cities, especially in the city of New York. It is now intended to reduce the expense of conveyancing by making the business of title searching in New York city more simple. This end it is proposed to attain by making the record one relating to the land itself so that one can learn by reference to the public registers at any given time the exact condition of the title to any lot in the city at that time. A bill with this end in view has been prepared by the Land Transfer Reform Association for submission to the Legislature at the present session. The object of the bill is commendable, and the Legislature would do well to give it its sanction. The expenses connected with conveyancing as at present conducted should be reduced to as great an extent as possible, forming as they do for the most part needless restraints on the alienation of property.—Bradstreets.

Building Material Market.

REVIEW OF ALL THE LEADING ARTICLES FOR THE YEAR 1883.

In the columns following will be found our annual review of the market for building material, etc., at this port. Sufficient detail is given under the headings of the various articles enumerated, and in this connection we simply call attention to one or two general features. All the leading articles, such as Stone, Brick, Cement, Lime and Plaster have had a more liberal distribution for local consumption and in some instances found quite as full sale to out-of-town points as last year, but the impetus of 1882 so stimulated the productive capacity that supplies have in nearly all cases been ample, occasionally excessive, with cost ranging lower and the year closing with few evidences of recovering strength, while in some cases there is more than an ordinary accumulation of unsold stock on hand. Manufacturers, however, though working on reduced margins, have, by obtaining some modification in the cost of production, lower transportation charges, etc., managed to secure slight profit, and up to the close of the year no evidences of distress were developed. It is, however, very evident that the future is considered doubtful and a feeling of extreme caution is manifesting itself all around. It is natural that business should be light with the turn of the year, but the demand for supplies collapsed in a sudden and unusual manner, and the absence of interest among buyers regarding the future excites suspicion at least. It appears to be, however, more a question of desire on the part of owners to continue the improvement of real estate than the cost of material, as the latter are generally low, though an expected effort to reduce the cost of labor may be a factor to create uneasiness.

We give considerable space to statistical information under many of the leading articles, and having still further perfected our means of information and compilation, feel justified in claiming as near perfection as it is possible to reach. Even some of the ambiguous statements of the Custom House clerks, as furnished for the information (?) of the general public, have been overcome and brought into lucid form, through the experience we have obtained in previous years. The Building Material Exchange does not appear to have perfected any system of statistics.

The following shows in condensed form the export movement of the leading articles of Building Materials during the years named:

	Value.

MARKET REPORTS.

In view of the large space devoted to our yearly review and the unimportant changes in the markets since Friday last, we omit the usual weekly detailed report. Bricks have sold only moderately, owing, in the main, to poor weather for consumption, but with no additional pressure of supplies, holders obtained advantage and the tone is possibly a shade firmer, about 25c. better being claimed on some cargoes than could have been obtained last week. The general range for Hards is at $6.50@7.75, with a few of the best Haverstraws held at $8 per M. Cement, Plaster and Lime rule steady, but show no unusual animation. Lumber quiet in a wholesale way under light and unimportant offerings. Nails steady. Lath little better than nominal, with most receivers unwilling to commit themselves to a quotation. It was "supposed" that $2 25 per M. would be the asking rate, but probably not above $2 to be obtained.

BRICKS.—The general market for Common Hards has been unusually free from fluctuation during the year just closed, and, in fact, there is but a limited and comparatively uneventful record to make. The greatest irregularity was during the first three or four months of the year, but with a general downward tendency, until $7.00 became the top rate, and henceforward there was, for many weeks, only such natural fractional changes as might occur through momentary lapses either of supply or demand. Indeed, the vast bulk of the business was accomplished with the above named price as an extreme, for a sharp advance of $1 00@1.50 per M forced during the latter part of September at once reduced demand, and buyers did not take hold with renewed freedom until cost on general run of stock had been reduced again. When dealers commenced stocking up for winter and were closer and more careful in their selections, rates widened out somewhat through premiums paid for selections, as really fine goods were not plenty. From the above it will be noted that the price on the product of 1883 has averaged materially below the previous year, and made scarcely any recovery, the rates January 1st inst. standing $1.50@2 50 below those current January 1st, 1883, with quite a little amount of stock accumulated afloat unsold and apparently no demand for it, values in reality occupying only a nominal position. The truth is, that while consumption began somewhat later than usual and closed earlier, it was a remarkably exhaustive one while it lasted, the gigantic character of a large number of structures under way, the desire to get them under cover before frost and the vast army of workmen employed making a daily consumption of brick beyond anything ever before known in the history of building operations in this city. Producers, however, were prepared for and equal to the occasion, as they commenced operations earlier than in 1882, with an increased capacity, and as no unusually bad weather interfered, the output was continued full and uninterrupted until October 1st, when by previous agreement the manufacturers along the entire Hudson, with but few exceptions, shut down entirely. Their work had been heavy, however, and the output somewhat in excess of the previous year, but rapid moulding and burning was, in too many instances, accomplished at a sacrifice of quality, and the fall and winter receipts revealed some very inferior stock from ordinarily first-class yards. The speculative element has not entered into the market. A Broadway bucket shop made some alleged sales of "futures," but none of the regular trade took any part in the farce, nor has there been any attempt at coercion on the part of either receivers or manufacturers. In fact, makers, agents, dealers and consumers have all appeared to think the price "about right," and matters ran so smoothly as to make the market a little monotonous at times. The combination of manufacturers stopped production October 1st, as above noted, but this appears to have been a judicious measure in view of the subsequent light consumption, good supply left on hand and tame condition in which the market closed. The Trade unquestionably enters upon the new year with some misgivings, but an indisposition to express any positive opinion.

Pales have found a pretty good market all the season, when quality was good, and after the spring break desirable lots brought $4.00 and a fraction better without much difficulty, the demand sometimes exceeding the supply. Common and inferior lots had to be crowded to sale, but at $3.00 3.25 and $3 50 found an outlet. The building law is supposed to prevent the use of Pale brick in this city and Brooklyn, and no doubt does so to a certain extent, but at a price there appears to be a market ready, and no uncomfortable accumulations take place.

Fronts have simply undergone no change at all on the price of the North River products. A number of orders were booked for the favorite Croton Point makes before the yards commenced working, and demand has since kept up or ahead of the supply, with manufacturers carrying only a few over to commence the new season with. As rates were fair, however, it was not thought judicious to force the advantage. The Philadelphia and Trenton Fronts sold very well at somewhat lower rates, and Baltimores, as usual, found only an occasional call for some special or extra work.

We have undertaken more than ordinary trouble and expense this year in obtaining the information for our usual compilation of production and stock of brick, and have in reality held the report over one week in order to perfect the figures. The results reached, however, we feel quite confident, are very nearly correct and a much closer estimate than any yet made. The increase in the output is not unexpected, but the stock on hand will exceed some previous estimates. It may be well to add, therefore, that the accumulation is unevenly located and, where some points show a very meagre amount, at other points it is excessive.

CEMENT.—Manufacturers and agents very generally agree that the business in domestic or Rosendale Cement has been larger than for the preceding season, but aside from that the reports are less cheerful or promising in tone. Without going into minute details it is sufficient to say that the plentiful supply and low cost of imported goods has to some extent interfered with the sale of the home product, but the prime factor was to be found in the absence of any concerted attempt to adjust the output to the wants of the market and constant competition of a somewhat determined character among manufacturers. Prices were at times really difficult to quote closely, owing to the unsettled tone prevailing, but have touched as low as $1.00 delivered here, with a large amount of business done at about $1 05@1.10 per bbl., the final rates ranging from the latter figure up to $1.15, though some of the fancy brands were held higher. The distribution has covered about the usual outlets on interior and coastwise orders, and there has been some taken for export, but it was very rare that the exhaustive capacity of the market became so great as to overlap the supply, and most calls were filled promptly, with an over-stock of no uncommon occurrence Indeed, the season closed with a good full accumulation in both first and second hands, and failing to show the usual final upward turn or strengthening on values, except for one or two special brands always commanding a premium. As might be expected under the conditions of business as above noted, the margin to the producer has not been extensive, but this has found some compensation in the larger number of sales, and some of the Trade even express themselves as satisfied. The feeling in regard to the future is somewhat doubtful, except that cement must hold its relative proportion, whatever the consumption of other building material may be. In Foreign Cements the trade for 1883 has not been altogether satisfactory. In fact, we have one time less complaint from all sources, but of late made reduced and uncertain [illegible] some the very narrow margins and value on most any improvement of a substantial and lasting character as compared with 1882. It may be remembered that even before the close of last season arrivals had so overlapped the outlet as to have quite liberal accumulations unsold, not only here but at many points in the country, with holders in several instances quite willing, and some rather anxious to realize. Buyers, therefore, commenced the year with the turn in their favor, and this, of itself, tended to create some indifference about developing their wants, a feeling which appeared to grow more decided rather than less as the season progressed, and it proved really a difficult matter to place goods in any respectable quantity. Furthermore, it soon became evident that hopes and expectations of a diminution in the volume of importation were doomed to disappointment, and before spring had fairly opened, a clear case of oversupply was a foregone conclusion. Whether manufacturers abroad were responsible for this supply by forcing forward their wares, or whether they again allowed themselves to be beguiled by the roseate tales of merchants here, with magnified imaginations of their powers to handle and distribute cement, we know not. Both stories have been given. There is no doubt, however, that the cement came forward a great deal more rapidly than it was wanted, some of it, after trial, was not wanted at all, and, with an existing necessity in many instances for making quick sales, the inevitable downward turn on values followed, with an unsettled feverish sort of tone prevailing all summer and well into the fall. About the lowest point for anything of a quotable character was $2.25 per bbl, and from this the range widened up to $2.40, according to quality, on parcels from pier, with the usual additions for sales from store. Naturally, under the prevailing feeling of depression, all kinds have suffered in price, and some of the very finest stock had to be sold at a comparatively low figure, if placed at all. But right here is where the experience of the older agents stood them in well, for, with a clear judgment to see the shadow of coming events, they were constantly on the alert to negotiate with any desirable demand, and, adjusting their valuations to the necessities of the period, succeeded in not only retaining about all regular customers, but kept their stock so well sold up that numerous parcels were placed before arrival. In fact, it was very seldom that any of the standard and well established brands, such as may be found in our regular quotations made an accumulation awaiting custom. In the meantime some importers were getting stock they did not know exactly how to handle. It had been heralded by carefully prepared circulars, giving brilliant tests and a liberal array of testimonials, and came here nicely branded and all ready to catch the trade that was once more expected, to forget the past and take anything under the name of foreign "Portland." Buyers, however, did not appear to hanker after the goods with that irresistible avidity so necessary to bring success to the seller, and when receivers after having tried storing only to find themselves undersold on the next importations, finally took the bull by the horns and offered concessions, the shrinkage set in that reached results as above noted. Along toward fall, however, and since there seems to have been a closer and more healthful adjustment of supply and demand, with a hardening on values and certainly a little more cheerful feeling. Indeed, take it all in all, the groundwork for hope is unquestionably better than last year The stock on hand, to be sure is pretty full, and much of it will be sold low, for, while no important or unexpected failures have occurred, there has already been some sifting out of importers, with more thought likely to follow, and it really looks as though business would gradually drift back to established and reputable brands, with only just enough competition to create an equitable adjustment of values satisfactory alike to buyers and sellers. Supplies in store will be the most difficult to get rid of, but fresh arrivals secure direct attention, and already we hear of sales by the agents of one of the leading brands for next month's delivery. Manufacturers and those who seek to become their agents should see by this time that "anything" is not "good enough" for this market, and when quality runs below a fair average standard it is a costly experiment to find out exactly what it will bring. Of the fancy foreign cements, such as Keene's, etc., there has been about the average sale with, however, a small shading on cost, in sympathy with other grades. Our record below shows, as usual, the export of cements from this port, but after repeated trials we were unable to obtain any data through which the foreign and domestic grades could be separated before making the compilation.

DOORS, SASH AND BLINDS, ETC.—The distribution of supplies has probably been quite as full as in 1882, yet the actual new business is, as a rule, admitted to be somewhat smaller. This is accounted for by the fact that in one or two instances manufacturers commenced the season with some pretty full contracts on hand, covering sales actually made last [illegible] after having met these engagements, etc.; the demand of lessened proportions [illegible] girders and columns. [illegible] and this has continued with greater or less variation up to the close. It is not to be inferred that business shows a decided shrinkage, but merely some little dropping away on all outlets, with no evidence that any effort could have prevented this or increased the volume of sales. Manufacturers, therefore, refrained from making any official change in the price list, and we find that by comparison the ruling rates are pretty much the same as one year ago on quotations. Still it may be well to add that desirable customers have not found it difficult to obtain any reasonable little allowance rather than they should go away empty-handed or dissatisfied, and this, coupled with some competition, had a tendency to keep margins rather close. No additions to the productive capacity have been made, but unfortunately, one of the oldest local concerns, through a combination of adverse circumstances, was compelled to suspend. There is evidently some doubt over the general prospects for trade, but the feeling seems to favor the idea that the interior buyers will prove somewhat better customers than those from local sources. The export trade has, as a rule, been considered fair and not unprofitable, though the margin was of somewhat small limit on all grades of doors, which have constituted the bulk of the supply going out. Again have we been met by the old difficulties in the effort to obtain some sort of data from local sources regarding the foreign shipments from this port. Warned by former experience, however, we have obtained from the "other side" a record of the imports of doors from January 1st to December 17th, 1883, from the port of New York, and append the same as follows:

We also have record of exports from this port of 5,129 doors to Australia, 437 do. to New Zealand, 1,085 to Africa, 300 to Mexico and 116 to U. S. of Colombia. In a miscellaneous way 3,700 stairs and balusters, valued $710; one stairway, valued $1,600; 14 pckgs. sashes, blinds and windows, valued $85; and 48 cases mantels, valued $697.

DRAIN AND SEWER PIPE.—We again find more or less complaint over the general condition of the market for domestic stock, and especially that of nearby manufacture. Demand has been very fair from all sources ordinarily represented, and occasionally the chances for pretty full sales were presented, but it required the keenest kind of management to secure contracts and then, as a rule, only at a rate on which no margin could be found worthy of being dignified as profit. All this appears to have been due in the main to the competition of the western manufacturers, who, with cheaper labor and liberal freight discrimination in their favor on many transportation lines, have not only cut off much of the country demand but found it possible to come right into the local market and secure a great deal of the trade. Naturally, prices have shown so much irregularity as to render quotations a matter of little importance as a guide and no "regular" figures were at any time current. Foreign pipe has had a very good year, and importers, as a rule, appear very well satisfied with the results. The business would not under ordinary circumstances be considered as liberal in proportions, neither was there encouragement to bring forward stocks except upon actual orders in hand, but sales have been fair and to new customers in many instances, who have been sufficiently well satisfied to repeat purchases. A considerable proportion of the distribution has been on local calls, but suburban trade has come from some distance around, and only recently sales were made for Jersey City delivery in successful competition with some of the western makes that have so cut up the trade here of late years. Contracts have been made within a few weeks for considerable deliveries during 1884, and these will bring the volume of business up to quite an excess over last season. On prices it has been necessary to figure pretty closely in most cases, and the line of profit was not large, the operating basis ranging at about 50 and 10@60 per cent. discount on American list, which is a trifle lower than last year. Owing to the careless manner in which manifests have been recorded, it is impossible to obtain any fair statement of imports for the year, and we omit the imperfect record in hand.

FIRE BRICK.—We have found a noticeable disinclination among manufacturers, agents, etc., to enter into any extensive details in commenting upon the business of the past year so far as the domestic product is concerned. It, however, does not require much of an effort to elicit the evidence that matters have been far from satisfactory and the season closing without prospect of any early reaction. At the very first portion of the past year difficulties were experienced in view of the efforts necessary to contend with a liberal stock of low priced foreign, and before this had been overcome it began to be pretty plainly shown that consumption must, to a considerable extent, fall away. In the meantime production had been continued almost without a check, with a natural sequence to be found in a surplus accumulation, and efforts to realize thereon led to competition, with the usual results in weak and unsatisfactory prices. Indeed, "current figures" have, as a rule, really represented jobbing values only, from which good, full shadings could be obtained on invoices of any magnitude. The closing figures are somewhat nominal, and the amount and assortment of stock available is very fair. While the general trade, as above noted, has from various causes been curtailed, our local wants have rather increased if anything, owing to the call for construction of fire proof flues, etc.

The foreign goods do not appear to have found any better market than those of domestic manufacture, and importers are naturally far from satisfied with the results of the year's work. The season opened with a considerable accumulation of stock on hand, and as the evidences of diminished consumption developed, holders grew more anxious, which in turn led to an easing off in values. In the meantime more or less successful efforts were made to check the flow of importations, but the cutting down on that score was not so extensive as hoped for and there always appeared to be some odd lot in the way to compete for any orders coming up on the market. Constant crowding, however, and careful management appear to have finally worked out the great bulk of the new receipts, and the balance left to carry over at the end of the year proved small and composed of fairly attractive stock. All grades have suffered in the downward turn of values, and importers probably were toward the close of the season without margins, but they now appear somewhat hopeful of getting matters into more satisfactory shape.

GLASS.—The past year will stand among the most eventful ones in the history of the Trade, more especially as regards the domestic product, yet the record does not require any very extensive detail. The season of 1882 closed in good shape all around and this ran well into the next year, with business at times pretty sharp. Indeed, the call was quick enough and full enough to exhaust the desirable portion of the home production about as fast as ready, with a great many dips made into the imported goods, the very light stocks carried over helping as a stimulating influence. In due season came the usual dull spell but the falling off in the demand was not positive in character, and orders commenced to come in again at a comparatively early date with force and liberality. About this time, however, came the basis of change in the situation, in the form of a general strike of workmen at the Pittsburg furnaces. Mutterings and warnings had been heard from early spring but were not considered as likely to amount to much until finally the workmen, refusing terms offered through arbitration, went out in a body and production ceased entirely. The strikers, however, were much less successful than the year before on a similar effort, and failed to coerce a compromise. Indeed, they found manufacturers in a very decidedly combative mood, which increased rather than diminished, and the lock-out continued up to the close of this report, with considerable bitter feeling at times exhibited, more particularly, however, on the part of the strikers. While this condition of affairs existed at the principal producing point in the country the demand was steadily growing, and having only a small accumulation to start upon, soon exhausted everything in first hands, then went for jobbers' stocks, took all the regular or standard sizes first, and then everything that would cut down, until finally the market seemed to be entirely cleaned out. Indeed, an old member of the Trade says that in an experience of a great many years he has never seen so thorough and complete an exhausting of the supply of American window glass, and at the end of the year there was not enough available to fill an ordinary trade order. As an evidence of their determination it may be noted that some of the Pittsburg manufacturers imported several car loads direct and sold them from their factories to meet the wants of regular customers for a better margin than could be obtained on their own product at the basis desired by the workmen. As the supply gradually disappeared values hardened and sellers could name almost their own figures, but in the absence of a purely speculative element there was no disposition to crowd the market. Importers have, of course, benefited by the state of affairs prevailing on the home product, but the line of profit will not prove remarkably large, owing to the small amount of stock they had to commence with. Previous to the strike there seemed to be an impression that the safest and surest policy was a light importation, and this was, no doubt, in a great measure correct from the indications presented at that time, but when the outlet suddenly expanded and immediate effort was made to fill it and the foreign market, strengthening margins were cut down It has in no way been a year to complain of, however, and the close left everything in healthy shape, with excellent promises for business to come. For plate glass of all kinds there has been a very uniform, healthy market throughout. At times the demand slackened somewhat, but only in a natural way, and the desirable portion of the supply was generally found to be quite closely sold up, with a full line of prices ruling. The American product obtained a full proportion of the demand, with quality still further improved to add to the advantage of manufacturers. Accumulations are quite limited and poorly assorted at the moment.

During the years 1877 and 1878 the Custom House reports made no distinction between Looking Glass Plate and Window Plate, a fact not to be overlooked in making comparisons.

HAIR.—There has been a steady full demand for Plasterers' Hair throughout the entire year and at no time was the accumulation sufficient to exceed the outlet or afford buyers any advantage. Indeed, the line of cost has ranged a trifle higher without attracting supplies in quantity, and, taken altogether, the results of the season's business are better than in 1882, especially as few "outside" lots came to hand to interfere. Leading receivers and dealers continue to speak with some surprise of the scarcity of stock, but more especially of cattle hair, and the general inclination is to believe that the latter is used for mixing to quite the same extent as goat hair. A desire to find a substitute for hair has continued with no greater success than before, but the upward turn of values has suggested new sources of supply, and offerings were made from both South America and Europe. The price, to be sure, was in each instance too high to admit of importation, but a different run of freight charges might bring stocks in more freely at any moment. The market closes quiet and firm, with the small accumulation in first hands only available on direct call.

HARDWARE.—There is very little detail or variety in the reports obtained from manufacturers, agents or dealers. A slow and at times very unsatisfactory form of demand has prevailed throughout the entire season, with complaints over the condition of the market by no means the exception. The actual amount of goods handled, it is thought, will compare favorably with the previous year—some think there is an excess—but the movement has been too erratic to admit of any close calculation, and this, with other influences, has robbed sellers of much advantage. One of the best selling class of goods was builders' hardware, including all standard selections from the highest to the lowest, and for either country or city work; yet there has always been enough stock and sufficiently full assortment to meet the calls, with a little to spare to prevent buyers from hurrying. Superficially, values have been quite steady, and the public announcement of changes in lists and discount sheets have been so few and far between as to draw forth occasional comment upon this feature. It was, however, deceptive. Indeed, there has been for months more or less cutting whenever such policy would expedite trade and secure a wavering customer, and the same irregularity still prevails. Of course the indifferent character of the demand in some measure led to the above results, but the steady shrinkage in the cost of material was a potential factor in giving consumers of the manufactured goods some advantage without entailing loss on the market. The production has been carefully managed, and the results are to be found in a light accumulation to carry over and the market in good shape should any revival of business set in, an event not looked upon as altogether improbable with the full opening of the new year. Exporters have been very good customers and a comparison of their movements will be found annexed.

LABOR.—Locally, the market has been void of exciting features during the year. A great many small strikes have taken place against individual builders and some of them with quite obnoxious features, but the ruptures were healed without general or very protracted contest and, as a rule, by mutual concession on the part of both employer and workman. The supply has not been so abundant but that the "unions" could retain fair control, in most cases, but a few exceptions were occasionally found, and a great many workmen are becoming anxious to emancipate themselves from the iron rule of the trade societies, who really govern their actions. The outlook for the incoming season is considered doubtful Rates have ruled full the past year, and on January 1st inst. stood about where they did in 1883 at same time; but it seems to be conceded that reductions must be made before building operations can progress. Resistance is, of course, expected, but it will probably end in the defeat of the workmen, who fail to see that labor must in due course submit to a shrinkage in value equal to that in food and raiment, and in accord with the general depression of the times.

LATH.—If manufacturers and receivers of Eastern Spruce Lath have any serious cause for complaint over last year's market we have not heard of it, and they certainly must be difficult to accommodate. There has been a steady addition to value each season since 1879, with 1883 considerably on the lead, both as to rates actually reached and the general average, while business has almost run itself. Commencing with the very first month of the year buyers developed an anxious feeling, and were quick to absorb anything arriving, while parcels afloat when agents were willing to offer them could be placed under engagements without difficulty. This continued until fair weather set in, and $2 75 per M had been reached, when greater caution on one side and somewhat larger supplies on the other commenced to have the natural influence, and the tone weakened. The declining tendency, however, was strenuously resisted, and for some time a weekly gain of 5 or 10 cents per M was all that buyers could secure. Finally with an unexpected heavy accumulation of cargoes, many of the captains clamorous for a berth to unload and two or three nervous sellers, the pressure became excessive, and values took a sudden plunge, touching hard pan at $2.00 per M, though few, if any, of the best stock sold for less than $2.10. This settled the limit of advantage to buyers, for as soon as the excess of supply was out of the way an upward turn set in, for which there was no culmination until a recovery of $1.50@1.75 per M was established from the lowest point. There was considerable contest at about $3.00 per M, but as soon as this was reached and past the jump appeared quicker than ever, with $3.75 finally shown, and even $4.00 was made in a quotable way, though not allowed to become public at the time. At near the highest rates the demand seemed to be more animated than when cost was much lower, and large amounts of stock were freely taken at an average of about $3.50 per M. The line of value, however, was almost too full to stand, and several natural adverse influences gradually began to develop. In the first place buyers calmed down materially after having secured enough stock for immediate wants, then lath commenced to come forward from unusual sources of supply, both the North and West contributing to a final aggregate of about 7,000,000, and eventually the Eastern manufacturers, stimulated by the ruling rate, urged production and shipment with greater freedom. At the commencement of the decline that followed only enough shading was made to shut off the irregular supplies, but after a while sellers found that Maine and the Provinces were sending forward lath faster than they could be handled, and the rate was forced down to $2.65, and then after some hesitation dropped to $2.25 asked and $2.00 indifferently bid, where the market closed. From the above it will be seen that at no time was the price as low as in 1882, and generally ranged very much higher, while the evidences all go to show a liberal quantity of stock handled by our receivers. The fact that a large proportion of the supply when it left first hands went almost directly into actual use is a factor of strength not above mentioned, and the claim at the close is that the yards are carrying over a much smaller accumulation than usual, with the prophets of the market claiming good basis for another sharp upward flurry before spring. On the average the run of quality on the Eastern made lath has been about up to the standard, but when the price was high and makers ran their saws for the simple result of quantity, it was not uncommon to hear complaints over the condition of the offering, and it was mostly these poorer grades sold at inside rates. The lath received here from the interior realized prices leaving a margin to the seller, and the quality was good in its way, but dealers and workmen were not used to the stock, and it can only be brought forward on some such favorable conditions as lately existed.

LIME.—Consultation with the principal agents and the Trade generally fails to draw out any information upon the market for Eastern lime, except that the amount handled has been somewhat in excess of the previous year, and this, in connection with a margin preserved on most sales, has prevented manufacturers from finding any serious cause for complaint. The season opened with more or less of the usual fluctuation, according to amount of stock available, but finally settled down to $1 and $1.20 respectively for common and finishing, and has remained there ever since, the year closing without the usual upward flurry and some little stock on hand. Indeed the monotonous character of the market for several months was its dominant feature, and matters really became somewhat stupid. The State product has also met with an increased sale, but more on its country distribution than here. Still the local demand has been a good one, and especially for the finer qualities, which are claimed to be adapted to outlets no other lime can supply.

LUMBER.—The actual amount of lumber sold on this market during 1883 was unquestionably fully equal to if not in excess of the preceding year. Yet no one appears to have been fully satisfied, and constant grumbling from January to December has been a prominent feature of the situation. The slow hand-to-mouth character of the demand, its more general distribution in small parcels and the absence of the least sign of flurry or excitement among any class of buyers, coupled with full stocks to commence upon, and ample supplies following, have formed a combination of influences leading to the above results. A more detailed report will be found in the various grades enumerated in the other portion of this review. As a natural result of the conditions of trade, there is a more or less claim of and absence of profit, and no doubt margins have been rather small, but up to the close of the year the announcements of difficulty among our dealers had been very light, all things considered, and the situation was quite as healthy as in other lines of business. Our local consumption of lumber for building purposes has become more restricted, owing to difference in the character of the edifices and the enforcement of the building laws, and full lenghths and sizes are in consequence a necessity. The neighboring cities and suburban towns can take a great deal of the surplus short and narrow stuff, as a rule, and indeed have in this way proven beneficial during the year, but still retained advantage enough to obtain easy terms. Exports have been full and general, as will be seen by our tables annexed, and at fairly renumerative returns. In a general way, the year closed upon a well supplied market, only a moderate current demand and considerable anxiety regarding the future. Very few operators, however, appeared to look for any early decided improvement, as indications generally pointed to a continued slow, moderate call, with plentiful supplies, present and prospective.

Spruce has scarcely realized the somewhat hopeful views expressed by receivers at the close of last season, and neither in the form of business, its extent or the rates obtained does any one appear to be satisfied. The first developments were to be found in the miscalculation upon the quantity of stock held in yard at the commencement of the year, the accumulation not only proving quite sufficient to meet the mid-winter outlet, but left enough over to carry well into spring, and thus materially reduce the number of buyers, who, under ordinary circumstances, would be anxious to secure a few early cargoes to fill out depleted stocks and assortments. The demand from consumers was also slow, and so indifferent as to plainly indicate that it would be useless to calculate upon any more animation to the movement through natural expansion, and an attempt to force must, of course, result fatally. A smaller number of special schedules were tendered than calculated upon also, and this prevented any serious piling up of orders on the books of manufacturers. As the season progressed it became still more evident that the mills would not suffer for want of material to work up, owing to the full supply of logs and greatly reduced and unpromising character of the business in deals for the English market. As a natural sequence of this condition of affairs the tone was easy on prices from the outset, and after settling off to a fair extent agents managed to bring matters into a comparatively steady situation, and so held them for the balance of the season, with the exception of such fluctuations as might occur under temporary accumulations of cargoes afloat, the absence of a supply rarely having a stimulating influence as buyers were generally to be found in a first-rate "waiting" mood. The downward dip on prices always commenced and was sharpest on lower grades, short and narrow stuff having no regular demand from local sources, and the country trade failing to afford the relief usually expected, so that it did not require much of an accumulation to make receivers despondent. Some of the undesirable cargoes sold as low as $12 per M, but a larger proportion at $13, and this latter figure was really about the average for "off" grades throughout. For more attractive and useful goods, however $14 was inside, with probably a large proportion of business at $14.50@15.50 for 8 inch up, and $16@17 for 10 inch up, with now and then something extra difficult, or special cuts realizing more money, though after getting above $17.50 the rate comes too close to Yellow Pine values to admit of any further buoyancy. There has, as a matter of course, been a great deal of grumbling on the selling side of the market over the ruling line of prices, but with low freight charges and plenty of room, the shipments have been made without great expense or cost, and it is probable that any manufacturer who has exercised ordinary judgment in making up cargoes for this market, has secured a margin, while the losses, if any, have fallen upon those who sent in their inferior goods only to have them slaughtered. It is now a two-years' experience that the provisions of the building law are being closely enforced, and manufacturers should have learned by this time that short and narrow cuts have no real standing on this market. Country trade can sometimes be depended upon to exhaust much of the surplus, but even that failed to some extent this last fall, and ran unusually light. At the close we find the feeling over the outlook somewhat divided, and in all cases expressed with considerable caution. In regard to the log crop it is yet too early to venture upon an estimate, but reports generally seem to agree that work in the woods has thus far progressed finely, and there is no reason to expect less than an average crop. The uncertainty is over the demand, and the average tendency is to entertain light expectations on this scare. The slow character of the business during the year was somewhat deceptive, as a pretty full amount was in reality covered, and the stocks in yard are again full to commence the new season. Very few contracts, however, have been made on local account, the country demand is unpromising, and with nothing to encourage the belief that the English Deal trade will immediately pick up, the selling interest finds few positively encouraging features to induce the hope of any solid improvement.

Northern Spruce and Hemlock were scarce early in the season, and commanded pretty good rates, but subsequently the mills caught up to the wants of the market, and prices eased off again, with offerings during the balance of the year full enough to keep advantage fairly in buyer's favor. The demand for hemlock, though still restricted to somewhat narrow channels, is, on the whole, increasing slightly in favor, and many consumers after becoming used to working find it quite as useful for numerous purposes at a more expensive wood.

White Pine has found a comparatively even market throughout the entire year. The range of prices has been somewhat lower than in 1882, but by no means out of proportion to the shading and other descriptions of stock, and there was an absence of violent or unexpected fluctuation. Desirable customers have unquestionably at times found it possible to secure somewhat better terms than shown on the nominal "regular" rates, but this was a natural outgrowth of the careful nature of the demand and the necessity for taking some action to retain the attention of buyers. The concessions allowed, however have for many months been merely fractional in character, as there was no indication that a larger or more general cutting down of values would have insured an increase of consumptive demand; and, indeed, there has been no serious complaint from the buying interest over the average season's cost, the slow call for goods proving simply an entire eradication of the speculative element and a determination to handle stock only on the basis of actual necessity, leaving the carrying of the supply as much in first hands as possible. The export trade has been good, and the shipments have kept ahead of last season throughout. East India orders were fair; but the West India and South American demands afforded the best outlet, with a noticeable increase on the latter of West Coast demand. This may be in a measure attributed to partial settlement of political difficulties and a recuperation of business in some of the South American States, as well as a desire for a class of lumber not obtainable from Oregon and California. Prices on shipping stock have been irregular, and at one time ran pretty low under competition, but of late made recovery and close quite firmly, owing to the somewhat reduced and broken assortments. One year ago our dealers were calculating that when again called upon to go into the country for supplies better terms would prevail, and in this they were not disappointed, all grades going off somewhat. The first concessions were not obtained from manufacturers, but mainly from middlemen, though finally all came into the market at a reduction. The shading, while fair in its way, is not considered as full as circumstances seem to warrant and we find expectations look toward a still greater shrinkage, unless the demand of incoming season develops unexpected animation and volume. Taking old contracts and the fresh purchases made after the cost commenced to recede at primary points, our dealers were very good customers for first-band lots, with the results to be found in a generally full and well assorted accumulation when navigation closed, and no serious reduction since, except upon shipping grades, as above noted. Some of the dealers have bought largely by the car load on telegraphic orders as necessity required, but even they seem to have a fair amount of stock on hand to meet current wants. Dealers in neighboring towns and cities have not as yet been forced upon this market, as their direct purchases are holding out very well, but they are expected to some extent before spring. From present advices the log cut will be quite full both North and West, but the indications, of course, are as yet only premonitory, and may have to be modified before spring.

Yellow Pine appears to have meant well all the season, but up to the close no one claimed to be thoroughly pleased with the gain actually established. To put the matter as briefly as possible, it was a clear case of commencing with a large surplus accumulation and too slow subsequent curtailment of production to properly adjust the supply to the diminution in general demand. Indeed the receipts here have really been well up to those of 1882, the early portion of the year keeping very full, the month of May showing a large total and December last recording over 13,000,000 feet. A great deal of this stock was in one way or another received under orders for special cut and quite a number of cargoes have been re-shipped on prompt call or previous engagement to other points, and there was always enough and to spare for our market and buyers generally were a "large majority" in fixing rates. In a great many instances sellers have been found who were sure the market was just coming around into better form and some even predicting a positive reaction, yet the very next sale would likely show a way down price and completely upset all hopeful expectations. Even the protracted drought over a portion of the South had no stimulating influence here, as manufacturers in other sections always stood ready to fill all demands, and no random stock was wanted. The price on the general range has stood at $18 00@20 00, showing but little variation in figures from last year, but the buyer has found greater advantage inasmuch as some very fine specials were obtained at the inside rate. The distribution from yard has been irregular, some dealers really doing a good business and working down stocks materially while others have sold but little, and according to the position they occupy in regard to supplies, may now be found as buyers on the wholesale market against spring wants. Agents have done very well at times during the season with the export outlet. Considerable sales were made from the accumulation here, but the main business was in f. o. b. orders for shipment from the southern ports. Taking the year through the outlets have been principally toward South America and the West Indies, but of late European calls have commenced to expand and afford more encouragement. Advices from the South have been quite conflicting and at times in flat contradiction of subsequent action of sellers, and it is upon these that hopes of an improvement have so frequently met with disappointment. An analysis of all accounts, however, seems to show that a great many mills have stopped, some through the assistance of the Sheriff, and that this fact, coupled with low prices, will lead to a production better adapted to the outlet during the coming season. It is also to be hoped that experience will dictate the sending forward of only attractive goods for this market. Anything else must take the chances, and very poor chances at that.

The receipts of lumber from the Southern Coast reported at this port for a series of years are as follows:

Year.	Feet.	Year.	Feet.
1877	57,848,000	1881	134,261,000
1878	72,040,000	1882	14 ,372,000

Receipts of Cedar reported from Southern ports as follows:

feet. Hardwoods have in all essential particulars shown about the same features as 1882, though probably on the average run of stock the cost was a little lower. Operators in reporting the market have, with remarkable unanimity, spoken firmly and cheerfully over fine to choice stock, and were quite as general in their condemnation of the situation for the faulty goods again allowed to flow toward this market in an almost uninterrupted stream. After all the warnings given it does seem strange that producers will not or cannot understand the necessity of sending forward better stuff for the use of this market. Buyers, both on home account and for export, know exactly what they want and will have nothing else. The idea that they will fall back on something poorer has long ago been exploded and greatly to the detriment of many who would not be convinced until they had undergone considerable personal experience. The difference between the grading at the mills and the New York inspection is unquestionably a prime factor in creating the difficulty, but it appears reasonable to expect that after the experience of the past two or three years the producer should by this time be able to make up an assortment suited to the wants of our market, and prevent the eternal wrangle between all interested, from the log to the consumer. Quantities of stuff shipped as firsts and heralded by letters extolling its magnificent attractions, has upon arrival turned out to be poor seconds or culled, and it is just these difficulties that must be overcome before trade can be brought into healthy conditions. The ragtag and bobtail stuff cast upon the market from these rejections has to be sold of course, and at the low prices available finds numerous Cheap John buyers, who work it up into all sorts of uses. A vast quantity is consumed in the manufacture of frames for advertising cards, and the manner in which some of the most inferior stuff is brought into play is said to be really ingenuous. Some effort was made to move poor stock on foreign outlets, but without much success; the undesirable stuff sent abroad has gone on through shipment or consignment from here by dissatisfied holders. Exports have been rather fuller than last year and the foreign markets are said to be now well stocked, with walnut in particular. Our general local consumption has been very good both for manufacturing purposes and house and office trimming. For the latter purpose cherry was an especial favorite and desirable lots were at no time allowed to accumulate. Walnut grading high has found prompt sale at full rates. Oak, choice poplar, one inch and wide in particular, fine dry white ash, and good selections of maple all had a good average market and both hickory and elm found fair sale. It has been difficult to give other than an approximating idea of value until the stock comes directly under treaty. Dividing into firsts, seconds and culls, however, the recent figures have shown on arrivals about $90.00@95.00, $60.00@75.00 and $30.00 and under, respectively, for three gradings on Walnut; $75.00@80 00, $45 00@50.00, and 20 00@25 00 do. on Cherry; $40.00, $28.00@30.00 and $18 00@20.00 for White Ash; $30 00@32.00, $22.00@25.00 and $15.00@20.00 for Poplar, with other kinds in about the same ratio. California redwood has sold well and seems to have come not only to stay but to make for itself a wider and better market. It is said to be very popular with all who have used it. Considerable oak has been exported to the British Provinces during the season and a fair amount to Europe.

Shingles have found a market in quite decided contrast with the season of 1882. Demand generally has been slow and uncertain, and at times almost at a standstill so far as the general run of stock was concerned, with values easy and dealers not in the best of humor over the situation. The arrivals were not at any time so full as to cause serious accumulation in first hands, but there has been quite enough to go around with something to spare for both the home and export outlets. Of late, the buyers on foreign account have shown somewhat increased interest though rarely handling any large quantity of stock, and confining themselves closely to actual orders. The California redwood shingles have found good favor and were especially useful on suburban orders for the completion of Queen Anne cottages, etc.

The exports of shingles from the port of New York for the years named as follows:

Piling has not secured a particularly successful or even profitable market, and receivers find reduced margins generally, with the close of the year. Commencing with rather more stock on hand than was intended, and more or less troubled by fresh consignments, sellers were compelled to cope with a slower and what ultimately proved to be a reduced demand, and as an almost natural sequence lower prices followed. Considerable stock was taken for docking, etc., but the heavy demand for foundation supports obtained from builders of the large structures on the lower end of the city during the previous year was missing, and made a serious difference in the outlet. At one time cargoes went almost for freight and 3@5c. has been the range, the market closing at about 4½@5c. asked, but with a full and well assorted stock in chains awaiting attention. One of the features of the year was the transportation of the big raft containing some 5,500 logs from St. John, N. B., to this port. The details are already too well known to warrant republication, but it may be added that the unfortunate condition of the market left the raft unsold, and, with the exception of some of the best sticks, unbroken at the end of the year. While the chances therefore are against much profit in the present raft, it has demonstrated what could be done under more propitious circumstances, and the projectors deserve credit for their pluck and risk.

The Yard trade has shown some irregularity, but as the direct medium of communication with actual consumers has on the whole been fairly active, except during the naturally dull seasons of the year. A spirit of caution characterized the movements of operators generally, and, while the hand-to-mouth policy and a desire to abstain from overloading themselves governed a large percentage of buyers, corresponding care exercised on the part of sellers prevented the running up of too extensive lines of credit and saved much trouble. Those who have deviated from the safest course are now experiencing some difficulty in getting accounts adjusted as closely and promptly as desired and find that the attempts to break away from the slow-plodding form of business, while presenting momentarily attractive features, are not ending as safely as could be desired. Some failures already announced, and other "signs" in the speculative building line, are the occasion of considerable perturbation among those who may happen to be interested. It may be remembered that during 1882 a great deal of old stock in the way of broken assortments, odds and ends, etc., was worked off, leaving the supply in better shape, and as care has generally been observed in securing additions, the accumulation now on hand is full and well assorted and adapted to any ordinary trade. There has also been close and careful figuring on cost, and all first-class houses are prepared to give their customers the advantage of every benefit obtained on the wholesale market.

NAILS.—The market has presented the anomaly of a material increase in demand and an extraordinary distribution to all sections of the country, with a slow but sure decline in prices. The weak tone developed in January, 1883, and the most strenuous efforts have failed to counteract it, the position at the present writing showing a decided lack of support, with quotations more likely to be above than below the actual selling rate. At the meetings of manufacturers the farce of re-affirming price lists was occasionally enacted by parties who were ready and anxious to sell at a liberal reduction from "official" figures, and efforts to cut down the production until within a week or two were of little avail, the Western and Eastern combinations failing to work in unison on that matter. Of late there has been quite a curtailment in the number of orders received, causing a more rapid accumulation of supplies, and still greater irregularity on values, the year going out with the market in a generally unsatisfactory condition. The influences leading to the demoralized condition of the nail market were to be found in the more cautious form of the inquiry, notwithstanding its larger volume, the lower cost of material, and more particularly to the increased productive capacity. According to figures furnished by the Iron and Steel Association the number of nail mills in the country is now about seventy-nine, with some 6,000 nail machines ready for work, an increase of 432 machines in eighteen months. The capacity is some 12,400,000 kegs per annum, and the location of the mills embraces sixteen States, with, however, the major portion of the product coming from Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts and West Virginia. Under the above situation the buyer has not felt much alarm about the supply, and the seller has been well inclined to realize rapidly in anticipation of the break, although since early autumn the margin for profit has been very limited. At the present writing the Western mills are shut down for six weeks, and this creates a hope for firmer markets.

PAINTS AND OILS, ETC.—Occasionally some little animation has been shown on the market for paints, colors, etc., but business rarely worked up to a point of good sharp activity, and the speculative element has been almost wholly wanting. The volume of trade, however, has, we think, been nearly or quite equal to that of the preceding year, and on some outlets rather larger, its slow form proving more or less deceptive and leading to an underestimate of the aggregates reached from month to month. Supplies have rarely run so low as to cause any difficulty about making selections, and occasionally there appeared to be something of a surplus, but dealers claim that they never were so overburdened with stock as to compel forced sales. On prices, it is undeniable that there has been a general tendency in buyers' favor and scarcely a fixed market rate at any time during the year. List prices could be shown, of course, and the "regular" figures asked, but desirable customers were never allowed to depart for the purpose of "shopping" if concessions would secure an order. Linseed Oil has followed much the same course as noted above for paints, etc. A steady outlet could generally be found for the product of both domestic and foreign seed, but buyers seldom anxious enough to create any activity and affording no stimulus to values. Spirits Turpentine has been more or less unsettled when brought under influences from abroad, but the home demand was of a very uniform character, taking only about enough to satisfy positive wants, as developed from time to time, and buyers crowding closely for all advantages to be gained on price. As a rule, cost has been easy throughout, and averaged below last year.

PLASTER PARIS.—The arrivals of lump plaster during the year show a material increase over 1882, and though a portion of this stock went through to Newark and some up the Hudson it is all part and parcel of our local business. The country demand for fertilizing purposes has been somewhat smaller than last year, farmers in view of previous liberal application to their land requiring a less quantity, and it is also belived that the absence of the potato-bug plague was also a fraction of some importance in reducing the sale of plaster, as large quantities of it were always used as a mixture with Paris Green. The additional imports therefore are a fair indication of the growth of calciners' wants, especially as the accumulation carried over will not in the aggregate greatly exceed that on hand at the corresponding time last season. Some of the Trade unquestionably have piled away a considerable excess, indeed about filled all their storage room, but others appear to be unusually short and not likely to get any immediate additions. During the early portion of the season transportation facilities were scant, but subsequently improved, and with freight charges fair, supplies have been laid down here without any serious impediment and the average cost is placed at about $3.00 per ton, a fraction less than in 1882.

Calcined Plaster has evidently had a first rate market all the year, and we find a greatly reduced number of complaints as compared with the season of 1882. All hands appear to have had a due proportion of the business, and while the old form of competition continued to prevail it was of a less positively aggressive character, just enough in fact to check buoyancy and keep values on a uniform basis throughout pretty much the entire season. There has of course been some little fluctuation but only such as might be expected in the natural course of business. The distribution of the stock has been of a very general character, including at times a full run of orders from dependent points and liberal amounts wanted for local use, covering all grades. In fact some of our largest manufacturers report that their business on local account will show an increase during the year of fully fifteen per cent., and promises a further expansion rather than a reduction. This, however, is readily accounted for when the intended fire-proof character of the large buildings is taken into consideration. Some of the dealers have been favored with a fair number of foreign orders, but the demand was not so general as last year, and the aggregate export movement runs smaller on all outlets.

ROOFING TILES.—There has been a fair, though not remarkably active demand for the foreign roofing tiles introduced last year and as agents were more careful to gauge their orders to the exhaustive capacity of the market, the importation ran much smaller. The season commenced, however, with quite a liberal accumulation in hand to draw upon, so that the amount of the receipts can hardly be taken as a fair indication of the actual volume of business, and it may be further noted that since fall set in, stocks have worked down rapidly and the amount to carry over will be comparatively small, while one or two contracts for next season's delivery have already been made. The cost has averaged $..00 per M. lower and quite generally stood at $25.00 on the current sales. Philadelphia is again reported as affording the best market, our local wants taking only small amounts and in a somewhat desultory manner. The imports reported at this port in 1883 were 302,000 pieces against 271,977 pieces in 1882.

SLATE.—Reports obtained from the principal operators in roofing slate are quite cheerful in character, and all the evidences go to show that the season of 1883 has been a very satisfactory one. Locally, of course, the trade amounted to nothing of sufficient magnitude to have any direct influence in shaping affairs. Now and then a pretty good contract could be made for some large edifice, but the m jor portion of the demand has been simply for odd and irregular parcels wanted to meet repairing jobs, etc., or to fill orders from near by suburban points. It is on the domestic shipping trade, however, that quarrymen have found the animation, in the demand through which they were kept driving busy from the opening of the season to the 1st of December, and, in fact, fair deliveries were made close up to the end of the year about exhausting the increased product and leaving little or nothing on hand unsold. Indeed throughout the entire year all below 22 inch have been scarce, and it was only in the large sizes that an accumulation could at any time be found. The above remarks refer particularly to the black or Pennsylvania slates of which a large and general assortment has been distributed throughout the West, with a prospect of further expansion of trade, while the South has been a liberal exhaust also, New Orleans in particular, with the small sizes most in favor. Trade with the last named city, however, has of late received something of a check, and slight uncertainties have arisen that will require careful management and a little time to overcome. It appears that the prosperous condition of the season led manufacturers to tone up somewhat in their views and about September last they made an advance on the supplies shipped to Gulf ports. This was very well maintained for a while, but sellers were subsequently somewhat suddenly confronted with quite a large importation of Welsh slate with advices of more to come, and offered at prices calculated to draw demand from the domestic article. Extremely low rates of freight on vessels coming out after cotton cargoes was the main basis upon which the foreign shipper could compete, but of late this advantage has grown less in view of the falling off in supply of cotton at New Orleans and a reduction on the price of domestic stock fully equal to the addition made in the fall. With the above exception values have ruled quite uniform during the season, and close firm in view of the very limited supply of stock in first hands. No difficulties of importance have arisen on the labor question, steady employment and good, fair wages keeping the workmen quiet, and quarry owners also intend to continue production during the winter with a view of holding their gangs well together. Only a few shipments have been made East, as producers in the latter section have succeeded in creating a home demand for the local output. The Eastern States quarrymen have also found a good general demand, quite up to the average, as their natural green and red colors and good quality give them a commanding position where consumption requires an extra assortment. The supply was equal to all calls and the run of cost quite uniform throughout the season.

The condition of the export trade requires little information beyond such as may be afforded by the table of shipments as given below. It will be noted that with the exception of a few small and unimportant parcels the entire export trade has been with the Australian and vicinity markets, and is not of remarkably extensive proportions at that Indeed for many weeks the demand became decidedly flat and uncertain, and while of late showing some signs of revival again, that feature has only been secured at some sacrifice on cost. No encouragement whatever is received from Europe, and as noted above the margin has been so much the "other way" as to permit the importation of Welsh slate at the Southern ports in competition with the home product. Shipping sizes are in fair supply.

STONE.—While the data available is altogether too meagre to admit of any positive comparison with the last season, the concurrent opinion of many of the leading operators is to the effect that the business in front stone during 1883 made no retrograde movement so far as the aggregate consumption was concerned. Brick and terra cotta, even when the latter has to be anchored with railroad iron, have in some cases been given a preference but not enough to seriously impair the sale of stone either for fronts entire or trimmings. As for several seasons past, the brown sandstone has been far in lead in the matter of favoritism and with many cunsumers it was simply impossible to induce them to handle anything else. Most of the supply was drawn from the Jersey quarries and sellers naturally had considerable advantage, through which they were enabled to sustain a fair degree of uniformity on values, especially for fine stock, as there is a wide margin to be allowed for quality. Probably the next desirable grade is the foreign red shade of building stone, which shows an increased importation and is evidently yearly growing in favor. The cost has remained firm and indeed importers have refused the opportunity to close contracts where to bring negotiations to a successful issue a concession was necessary. For other descriptions of front stone there has not been much inquiry nor could an outlet have been forced even at a considerable allowance on cost. As it was, buyers had quite a little advantage over the transactions made, and while the "price list" remained unchanged it has been a matter of remark over the extreme low quality customers were supposed to be buying and the very high grade they received when deliveries were made. The general supply in the yards is smaller than a year ago, very much so in some cases. Agents and importers, however, feel that the chances are mainly on their side, and should the building operations exceed expectations it must prove of almost immediate benefit to the first-hand dealer.

Blue stone has had a good year, take it all in all, the demand calling for pretty much every kind of stock and keeping up a good full volume to the end of the season. The distribution from the quarries, it is estimated on competent authority, will exceed 1882 by some 1 @15 per cent and it has gone over a pretty wide spread of country, the South in particular proving a first rate customer, though a full average amount and assortment was taken on city account. The export trade has not amounted to much and was principally in small odd lots to cover some special want, though one or two held-over contracts were completed. The accumulation left in yard does not amount to much. There has been some cutting of rates, but nothing of a serious character, and the price list is said to have been better preserved than for many seasons past. The sale of foundation stone has been steady and liberal, with a tendency toward further increase if anything, with full prices obtained throughout.

The following shows the imports of Stone, as reported by the Custom House during the years named:

JANUARY 19, 1884.

W. H. Vanderbilt and Jay Gould both go out of their way to show the valuelessness of the West Shore road and yet wages are made that one or the other of them will control it before the year is much older. The West Shore would be handy as the New York ending of the Wabash and Missouri Pacific systems.

A high license law based upon the Scott law of Ohio would, if enacted, be a great relief to the taxpayers of New York. It is proposed to charge $500 for a license to sell liquor and $250 for the privilege of dispensing beer. If enforced such a law would bring between three and four million dollars annually into the city treasury, enough to cover the expense say of our entire police department. From a taxpayers point of view this would be a very desirable thing to do.

We don't want any legislative investigating committees to probe into the affairs of our city government; what we do need is such reforms in our city charter as will fix responsibility for waste and inefficiency. Our municipal machinery is all out of order, because we do not know whom to blame when things go wrong. In Great Britain Parliamentary investigating committees are of some value, as they are composed of experts or gentlemen of repute, not members of Parliament. But our legislative investigators are too often mere junketeers, if not blackmailers. The legislative committee which is to commence its sessions in this city to-day is fortunately composed of men of good character and fair abilities, but they can find out nothing that was not known before.

The Northern Pacific road was financiered and completed by two newspaper men—ex-reporters—Henry Villard and Horace White. The former commenced his career as a war correspondent, and the latter was originally a compositor. The West Shore road was constructed by ex-army officers. In neither of those roads was there a reputable financier or railroad man in a controlling position. The result was what might have been expected in both cases. Journalists are not usually good judges of how to spend money, and army officers, while they know what is good engineering work, are reckless in money matters. The Northern Pacific, according to Jay Gould, cost much more than it should have done, and is not very well built, while the West Shore was also too costly but is very well constructed. Real railroad men will some day get both of these properties and will make them profitable to their owners.

The question of housing the poor is becoming a burning one in England. The Tories, headed by Lord Salisbury, are agitating a scheme for using the national funds to provide decent quarters for the industrious poor. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the great Radical leader, proposes a still bolder remedy. He would have the government seize the property of owners of tenements which were unfit for human habitation. He would class landlords, who make money out of miserable and unwholesome tenements, with the criminal classes, who should be punished by being deprived of their property. Mr. Chamberlain claims that they ought to be proceeded against like the sellers of unwholesome food. Between the Tories and the Radicals something will doubtless be done to improve the habitations of the poorer classes of Great Britain.

Good. The Park Commissioners have decided to drain, cleanse and cement two of the lakes in the Central Park, the one near Fifty-ninth street and the other near the Conservatory, on Fifth avenue. This should have been done long since, though we doubt whether those two bodies of semi-stagnant water are really the cause of the malarial disorders which are said to prevail in the neighborhood. Whenever new streets and avenues have been opened up, or the soil disturbed by necessary improvements on this island, local sickness has often resulted. The paved and built-up portions of our city are as healthy as any in the country, except, of course, where houses have been built over dammed-up water courses. But any turning up of the earth is apt to be followed by sickness, which lasts until the improvements are completed. But there are many exceptions to this rule; the most notable being the region just north of the Central Park, where the soil is so gravelly that it will not retain moisture permanently. The malaria complained of in the neighborhood of the Central Park is in those localities where extensive improvements are under way. We are sure that in time no portion of the island will be freer from sickness than this beautiful and fashionable region. These particular lakes may be partially to blame for the malarial troubles complained of, and the Park Commissioners did well to order their improvements, if for no other reason than to reassure the neighboring property holders.

The Proposed Cable Roads.

A personal inspection of the cable system of Chicago and an investigation of the plans of the company which proposes to put a similar system in operation in New York, enables us to speak with some knowledge and authority upon the subject. On the whole, the impression made upon us is favorable. The growth of New York, as shown by the steady increase of business on the horse car and elevated roads, necessitates additional inter-mural facilities for travel. The metropolis is behind many smaller cities in means for getting from one point to another, especially between the east and the west sides. We ought to have the best passenger transportation system in the world, in view of the compactness of our population below the Central Park and the ease with which the public can be accommodated on either side of it. We could have had all necessary facilities had we the general local railway law which the constitution of the State calls for; but the local horse car monopolies have had power enough with the daily press of the city to coerce the two last Governors into vetoing the general railway laws passed by two successive Legislatures. In the meantime, the west side has suffered from lack of necessary horse car facilities, while certain zones of travel east and west are unavailable, because of there being no railway lines in operation. It is estimated that fully twenty tracks could be laid, running from river to river, which would be profitable to the companies operating them, and a great convenience to the public. Among the thoroughfares needing horse cars, according to experts, are Liberty street, Chambers, Canal, Thirty-fourth, Forty-second and One Hundred and Tenth streets. In addition to which the transverse roads through the Central Park would in time become profitable if operated under a general system, embracing connections with roads running north and south. But under our present laws, passed at the instance of the elevated roads and timid property holders, no horse or steam cars can cross Fifth avenue and Broadway below Fifty-ninth, nor can any track be laid upon the West Side Boulevard, and at the instance of Mr. Tilden in 1875 this prohibition was made to include the laying of any track across any streets through which an elevated road runs. These enactments should be altered this winter, if we are to have the needed accommodations not only east and west, but north and south, on the west side.

While we are providing for the future, some general system should be adopted, and the time has come when a programme can be sketched which will meet every needed requirement of travel on this island for the next fifty years. The following would perhaps embrace the general features:

1. The organization of a company under proper restrictions, with a sufficiently large capital to supply all the future wants of the city in the way of local transportation. The fares for travel north and south should not be over five cents at any time of the day; three cents should be sufficient on the transverse roads. But it should be possible for a passenger to purchase a ticket in any part of the city to any other part, and not pay more than one fare.

2. The elevated system should be adopted on the river fronts, on Lexington avenue, Tenth avenue or the Boulevard, and also, if possible, on some of the cross-town lines, where it would not interfere with the east side elevated or Metropolitan roads. Railroad men of high standing are authority for the statement that during the commission hours the full capacity of the east side elevated has now been reached, and, with the present facilities, any increase in travel will be dangerous. Hence the urgent need of an elevated road on Lexington avenue. It is clear, from the way the city is growing north and east, that a Lexington avenue, as well as the Second avenue road, will be needed to supplement the travel on the Third avenue.

3. The cable system could be made use of by all the elevated roads. Its adoption would add twenty per cent. to the value of all property on their lines. Travel by cable would be comparatively noiseless, it would decrease the wear and tear of the iron tracks, and would save citizens from the annoyances of noise, steam, cinders and oil droppings. Then, in future elevated roads, lighter and far more ornamental structures could be erected. They could be made a positive adornment to a street instead of an injury to property.

4. All our surface cars should in time be forced to use the cable. There would be little gained in the way of speed, for the experience of Chicago shows that there is danger to life where a surface cable car is driven too rapidly. But in Chicago, as in San Francisco, the cable system is replacing horse power. It is cleaner, pleasanter riding, and far more economical than the latter. At first, in Chicago, there were a number of accidents, due to the noiselessness, and unacquaintance of foot passengers with this mode of street propulsion. But the recent statistics on the subject prove that there are fewer accidents now with the cable than when horses were employed. It is the same capitalists in Chicago who own both horse car and cable lines, and they will gradually substitute the latter for the former. We should also profit, in another way, by the experience of San Francisco and Chicago, and make the opening under the surface through which the cable runs large enough to accommodate telegraph, telephone and electric wires, and thus solve another very important city problem.

The Rapid Transit Commission now in session will doubtless take all these matters into consideration. The cable system is incomparably superior for city passenger travel to either the steam engine on the track of the elevated road or the horse on the surface road. An important matter to be borne in mind is whether the city treasury or our citizens should benefit most by the privileges given to some company, which will operate all the cable lines on this island. If they give us cheap fares, say five cents from north to south and three cents from east to west, they might argue that they should not be taxed heavily in addition. But, however this may be settled, there is no doubt but that we shall have the cables here before many years are over. But they had better be introduced under some general system, which will satisfy all the future requirements of our citizens in the way of local travel.

Comparative Valuation of New York Realty.

Certain of the daily papers talk about the enormous increase in valuations of New York city real estate during the past year. As a matter of fact, the increased valuation aggregates about the cost of the new buildings. It is stated to be $41,094,759 more in 1883 than in 1882. The comparative table, which we give at the close of this article, shows the undoubted prosperity of New York for several years past. The increase in estimated value is of course greatest in the lower wards, on the upper end of the island and in the annexed district. In the First Ward the increase is nearly $2,000,000 in one year; in the Fifth Ward it is over $1,000,000. The increase of over $1,000,000 in the Ninth Ward is somewhat of a surprise, but the increase of nearly $12,000,000 in the Twelfth Ward, of $9,500,000 in the Nineteenth Ward and of nearly $6,000,000 in the Twenty-second Ward, was what might have been expected from the activity in building in those sections of the city. It will be noticed that the increase in the Twenty-fourth Ward is very small. The same is true of the Tenth, Thirteenth and Seventeenth wards, that is, the eastern portions of the city, the home of our poorer tenement population.

It is very easy to predict that 1884 will not show so large an increase in valuation as has 1883. There are costly edifices under way which will be completed this year and will figure in the next tax levy for large amounts. A few structures like the Navarro properties alone will add millions to our taxable property. But this year there is no reason to expect any increase of values in the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, or Seventeenth wards. There may be a slight increase in the First, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Twentieth and Twenty first and probably a relatively large increase in the Twelth, Nineteenth and Twenty-second wards. Should the Legislature adopt the recommendations of the commissioners, and set apart certain sections of the annexed district for extensive public parks, we would naturally expect a large increase in the value of property beyond the Harlem. If the valuation increases $25,000,000 this year over last it would be as much as the most sanguine would expect. The following figures speak for themselves:

* Decrease.

M. Henri Cernuschi, the well-known French bi-metallist, says in a letter to Judge Wm. D. Kelly that "silver is as fit to be coined into money as gold, and certainly exists in greater volume than gold. If mankind had to choose a single metal as money, the preference should be given to silver, because of the superior volume of that metal, which would be sufficient for all nations, while gold is an insufficient mass or volume." This is very true. The Chinese, it is said, thousands of years ago, discussed and tested all the various currency theories, including every phase of fiat money, and they finally settled upon silver because of its greater mass and steadiness of production. But public opinion in this country tends to the use of both metals at some acknowledged interchangeable ratio. We shall in time have full commercial relations with Asia, Mexico, Central and South America—all of which use silver exclusively. Our trade relations with Europe are already intimate, and gold is just now the recognized unit of value on the other side of the Atlantic. Hence our bi-metallism. As for paper, the very best currency is that which represents a gold or silver dollar actually in the treasury; in other words, the gold note and the silver certificate are the most certain and safest form of paper money issued in any part of the globe. This is a far-reaching question, but the way in which it is treated by the New York papers is exceedingly discreditable to their conductors. The Times and Herald speak of silver, which is the retail money of all mankind, as if its producers were criminals and the coinage of the white metal a folly. The ignorance displayed on this question by those two journals is simply phenomenal.

Our Prophetic Department.

INVESTOR—Well, Sir Oracle, we have had a blue week both in the stock and grain market. You were quite right about the latter in your recent conversations, but were you not a little out in saying last week that good securities were a purchase at present prices?

SIR ORACLE—I have nothing to take back. I distinctly said, while prices might be lower this season, that good dividend paying securities were a purchase for investment, and I say so still. The absurdly high price of Governments, as compared with other securities, tells the story. The use of money is worth more than three per cent. when stocks and bonds can be purchased which are reasonably and permanently sure to yield six, seven, eight and even nine per cent. Now I insist that there are such securities in the market—plenty of them. Gold dollars won't keep selling for ninety cents always, and some day Wall street will wake up to the situation and the leading capitalists on all the bourses of the world will be as eager to buy as they are now to sell. The "street" to-day is discounting all manner of bad news. It will get on the long side when least expected.

INVESTOR—But is there any new factor visible in the industrial world which is likely to turn the tide and advance stock values? The banks are still contracting their issues; business continues depressed; the multifarious enterprises started when the boom was under way are all clamoring for more money. The whole world is trying to accommodate itself to the gold unit of value, when, as the Bankers' Magazine points out, the silver added to the gold is insufficient to meet the enormous demands of modern commerce. From what point of the financial heavens, then, do you look for the appearance of any light to dispel the gloom?

SIR O.—The approach of a new era of prosperity will first show itself in Wall street. It was there the boom started in 1879, it was there the collapse began in 1881, and there the liquidation has continued for over two years. The first signs of returning vigor will be in the better demand for sound securities. This may not come right away. I look for lower figures this spring. We may have a semi-panic; indeed, the past history of speculation shows that all bear as well as bull campaigns end with a brief season when there is a furious flurry in prices. But facts are stubborn things, and I insist that securities which bring in from six to nine per cent. are ridiculously cheap when selling below par, while Governments bring in only three per cent., and real estate mortgages not more than five. The person who has money to invest and who can do so without going into debt, can now go to Wall street and buy with his eyes shut. The time will surely come when this will be understood, and then look out for a turn in the tide upward.

INVESTOR—But are there not more securities in the market than money to purchase them? Has there not been an over-production of bonds and stocks and more houses built than are actually needed; in other words, must we not pay for our improvements as a nation before we can expect them to appreciate?

SIR O.—Yes, that is about the English of it. We have been over-enterprising, have incurred too many obligations, and in the effort to pay for them are sacrificing good properties. Hence the depreciation of securities, which tendency, I think, will make itself felt in time in real estate. But our people are so sanguine and enterprising, our latent resources are so great, that I look for a rapid recovery when it takes place. But the heavy profits to be made on investments at present figures cannot but tell for the bulls in the long run.

INVESTOR—Do you look to Congress for any remedial legislation?

SIR O.—Something will be done, but not much. An endeavor will be made to stimulate ship building and increase our merchant marine, but tariff legislation will, I fear, be a disappointment. The Democrats will not dare to commit themselves to any vital measure of tariff reform. If they did and could carry out such a reduction in the tariff duties as would stimulate foreign trade, it would not prove effective before the close of next year. A large crop of grain and cotton next summer and a good foreign demand might help to turn the tide and give us better times. But I see nothing to do us any good this spring beyond the unquestioned cheapness of good securities on the stock list.

Construction Companies and Architects.

General Edward F. Winslow, in explaining the bankruptcy of the North River Construction Company to a Herald reporter, admitted that the road cost more than was expected, and that this was a "mistake made by architects every day." Investors in new buildings, especially apartment houses, are aware of the truth of this remark. The architects, from a natural desire to secure contracts, very often largely underestimate the cost of the proposed structure. This is not always done designedly. The capitalist is sometimes whimsical and insists upon alterations in the plans, which make the charges heavier. Then a laborers' strike at a critical period of the work, an advance in lumber, iron work or other material, have all to be taken into account. Some of the apartment house projectors have suffered severely from these causes of uncertainty. This is true, we believe, of the building on the corner of Twenty-eighth street and Fifth avenue, of that on the corner of Thirtieth street and Madison avenue, as well as all the Navarro buildings. In the case of the latter the difference between the estimates and the actual cost is reported to be surprisingly large. In all the co-operative schemes, the final footings of the bills are said to be largely in excess of the original estimate. But then the erection of apartment houses is a new business, and it was generally new people, both investors and architects, who have constructed them. The historic estates of New York, such as the Astor, Lenox, Goelet, Rhinelander and others have not constructed any of these palatial structures. Mr. Navarro made his money in the elevated roads and the stock market, and he will doubtless profit by his experience if he should ever construct another apartment house. Under the circumstances, that mistakes should have been made was quite natural. But railway construction is a very old business. If the officers of the West Shore and North River Construction Company undertook to construct a first class road through an old-settled country, and should have underestimated the cost, it showed either lack of intelligence or honesty. The engineering problems were easily solved, because competent railroad men in the United States have had the experience which the construction of a hundred thousand miles of road through all kinds of country have given them. There might be some uncertainty as to the cost of right of way, but prudent managers would have allowed themselves a wide margin to meet all possible expenses from this cause. Mr. Henry Villard might explain his failure by the uncertainties of constructing a road through a comparative wilderness, but every mile of ground between Weehawken and Buffalo has been gone over hundreds of thousands of times, and if the engineers made deceptive estimates they were incompetent, and if the promoters of the road failed to supply sufficient funds in advance they were either fools or deliberately dishonest. From all accounts the West Shore road has been built without regard to cost. The contractors have made the money and the unfortunate investors have lost theirs. It is a pity some legal machinery is not in existence which, in justice to the officers of the road, would show that they were not interested directly or indirectly in the extravagant outlays.

The Proposed Building Law.

The Joint Committee on the above law met at the Ashland House on Thursday evening last to consider the printed proof of the law as finally amended. The gentlemen present were Inspector of Buildings W. P. Esterbrook, Charles Buek, W. M. St. John, C. O'Reilly, W. J. Fryer, Jr., C. W. Luyster, Wm. A. Burtis, S. Crowell, N. Poulson, N. Le Brun E. L. Dobbs and J. B. Radley. Mr. R. M. Upjohn occupied the chair. A long and animated discussion took place on the various provisions of the proposed law, in which Mr. Esterbrook freely participated. The bill as printed was finally adopted unanimously, subject to a final correction in the phraseology. It will be presented at Albany next week, with the signatures of the committee appended. The New York Board of Fire Underwriters will also be represented, in addition to the committees previously reported, the members being Messrs. St. John, Burtis and Crowell. The new bill is admitted to be a great improvement on the present law. It will define clearly the position of the Building Department powers, and harmonizes, as far as possible, the various interests connected with building. The amended measure is styled the "Proposed Building Law for the City of New York to amend the consolidated act of 1882."

Who were the engineers and contractors who built the Harlem bridge at Third avenue? The Park Commissioners say it is the worst bridge ever inflicted upon a city.

Home Decorative Notes.

—In walking through the embroidery department of the Pedestal Fund Art Exhibition we had no reason to despond, for looking at the exquisite textiles of American manufacture, such as cloths of gold, lustrous velvets and brocades, soft-lined woolen fabrics and the silken figured goods that lined the walls with beauty, the thought occurred to us that at no distant day, if we so desired, we should cease to be dependent upon the looms and needles of the Orient or of Europe for the embellishment and decoration of our homes.

—The square wicker chairs stained in mahogany, silver bronze and gold effects, with loose cushions of terra cotta, cardinal, royal blue or the shaded plushes are extremely elegant.

—Dainty little salts of gold are in the shape of oyster, clam and scallop shells, with silver lining, the tiny spoons are of gold and spade shaped.

—The effect produced by relief embroidery is indeed superb, and almost equals that of the natural model, the method of working is quite simple, the petals are modelled in the desired tints of plush on a thin foundation, this is then applied to the desired material and fastened down by stitches taken lightly on the underside, the pansy and geranium are the favorite flowers for this peculiar style of embroidery. Some beautiful specimens of the above work was noticed at Bently Bros., of 1152 Broadway.

—Barrel-shaped cheese cups of Dresden and the delicately transparent Belleek ware, with an accompanying silver spoon, are much in favor for holding Neufchatel cheese.

—The demand for lamps is constantly increasing, the styles and designs most exquisite and varied; rare specimens of Crown Derby, so famous for its beautiful bright blue, scarlet and gold decorations, are seen in all their r gal splendor.

—Exquisitely beautiful after-dinner coffee spoons have hammered bowls and copper decoration on the slender handles, at the top are tinted branches and coffee berries of copper.

—Most exquisite articles de luxe are constantly arriving from Austria, France and Switzerland, costly and perfumed satchets of velvet, satin and alligator skin for gloves, handkerchiefs, laces, etc., library cigar and tobacco sets of brass and ivory and copper in curious shapes, and a very attractive line of hammered and oxidized silver goods is exhibited by Baker, Pratt & Co., of No. 19 Bond street.

—The Roman aprons made of linen woven in colors are both artistic and dressy, very lovely also are the round or square shaped silk aprons of delicate blue, pink, etc., with edges and pockets trimmed with Oriental lace.

—A very odd and highly novel picture frame is of oak and decorated with all the necessary equestrian paraphernalia.

—Something which will add joy and pleasure to the long winter evenings and amuse and gladden the hearts of the little ones, is the Polyopticon, it is a wonderful little instrument, as it will throw upon the screen any kind of picture and reproduces the colors perfectly, it is in every way superior to the magic lantern. All styles and sizes of these instruments were noticed at No. 6 East Fourteenth street.

—Dainty Pompadour slippers with high French heels are carved from Swiss wood, for catch-alls.

—Shoe horns of ivory, stained in shades of wood colors, are etched in designs of fishermen and mermaids, and are decorated with ribbons for suspension.

—The rattan furniture gains daily many admirers, the silver bronze, gilded and stained wood effects, decorated with ribbons, harmonizing or contrasting in color, are very attractive; the music racks, work baskets, oddly shaped tables and bookshelves, are numerous in style and finish; the exquisite baby carriages in shapes of canoes and slippers, and lined with blue and lavender satin, are particularly beautiful. A very choice and varied assortment of this style of furniture is offered by F. W. Richardson & Co., of No. 28 West Fourteenth street.

—The birch bark forms a pretty medium for pen and ink drawing, cut in the shape of a maple leaf, with root of sappling attached, it is quite unique for dinner cards or menus.

—Knitting has within the past few years received a wonderful impetus, beautiful examples of knitting were recently shown by Marie Henderson, of 872 Broadway, every possible style of work in silk or worsted was there. Miss Henderson now offers a superior quality of knitting silks in every color.

—Natural flowers may be preserved by taking them when fresh cut and dipping them in paraffine melted enough to maintain its fluidity; move the flowers about very carefully in the liquid so as to remove all air bubbles, withdraw quickly and hold a moment to dry.

—The crocus pots are beginning to show color; the tender purple points are struggling and pushing their way through the hedge-hogs and bee-hives. A fine variety of these languid little flowers are offered by Walter Reid, of Broadway and Thirty-third street; during the present week a very rare and choice selection of orchids was exhibited by this firm.

—Luxurious sofa cushions are stuffed with down and covered with plush ornamented with applique designs, relief embroidery or sprays of flowers worked in chenille or arrasene.

—In fine upholstery, carpets, draperies and rugs, the acme of magnificence seems to have been reached; the carpets are simply beds of flowers, soft creamy grounds with roses, wood violets and soft green foliage, dark blue and red grounds with quaint designs of flowers in pale blues and rich browns, with patches of ferns; there are rugs in every variety and style of elegance, the domestic rugs are rapidly gaining in favor; a very attractive rug, and specially adapted for dining-rooms or bed-rooms, is wrought in the Kensington style; a variety of these goods was recently shown by J. & J. Dobson, of 40 West Fourteenth street.

Something About the Real Estate Exchange.

The recent call for 40 per cent. of the subscription to the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited) has naturally attracted attention to the affairs of that institution. In order to give our readers some authentic information, a representative of THE RECORD AND GUIDE called upon and had the following conversation with one of the directors:

REPORTER—I come on behalf of THE RECORD AND GUIDE to get the latest and most authentic news about the exact status of the new Real Estate Exchange. Is there anything to communicate that would interest the public?

DIRECTOR—I am willing to tell you all I know but I wish it distinctly understood that I am not authorized to speak for the Board or its officers. I have my own ideas as to what the Exchange should be, but I do not know that they are shared by my associate directors. At their last meeting the purchase of the houses on the northwest corner of Liberty street and Liberty place was confirmed. The total cost of these buildings to the Exchange is $421,500. As the capital stock of the Exchange is $500,000 this will leave only $78,500. Should printing, lawyers' fees and running expenses for the first year be say between $8,000 and $9,000, there will be $70,000 left. The structure adjoining the "Marquand Building" is not fit for occupancy and will have to be reconstructed. The new edifice should be fireproof, and should correspond in appearance to the Marquand Building. This and the construction of an auction room would use up all the funds of the Exchange, and probably leave it in debt, if its constitution permitted, which it does not. There is some talk of not paying off a mortgage of $180,000 which is now a lien upon the Marquand Building. This would give the Exchange plenty of money for its new building and auction room, and leave a respectable fund in its treasury. But as yet this has not been fully decided, and may not be for some little time.

R.—Will the purchase of the Marquand and adjoining building be a paying investment?

D.—In the judgment of one of the most far-seeing brokers on the board, the rental can be increased so that it will amount to at least $35,000 per annum, which will pay, as you can easily see, a very good dividend upon the purchase. Then there will be other sources of revenue; the auctioneers will pay for their stands. I understand that for three years past the gross income from the auctioneers in the Trinity Building has been $11,000 per annum. It is reasonable to suppose that this business will be quite as remunerative to the new Real Estate Exchange as it has been in private hands at 111 Broadway. There ought to be a large increase of business in the auction room.

R.—But will the new Real Estate Exchange secure all the business now transacted at Trinity Building?

D.—It is understood that the owners of the lease of the latter building are willing to sell, but some of our directors do not see that they have anything really to offer. The business will inevitably come to the larger, richer and more influential establishment, but it may take some time.

R.—You spoke of other sources of revenue.

D.—Yes; when organized the Exchange will furnish information about city property, assessments, taxes, liens and the like, for which they will charge fees; but this source of revenue may not be available for a year and may not amount to much for several years. Then we ought to realize something from the permission we propose to give outside brokers to become yearly members at a charge of sixty dollars per annum. They will have all the privileges of the Exchange, except the right, of course, to vote for directors; nor can they expect to have any interest in the dividends, if any, that may be declared. If even moderately successful before ten years are over there will be a thousand annual members, which would give an income of $60,000, in addition to the rentals, auction fees and other sources of revenue. I look upon the seats in the Exchange as being intrinsically valuable. The brokers who compose the directory are among the most experienced in New York. Their business has been to manage, nurse and increase the incomes of estates, and you may be sure they will attend to their own business quite as wisely and faithfully as they do that of their private clients.

R.—I see that there is very little if any premium upon the subscriptions to the Exchange. If it is such a good real estate investment why do not the shares command a higher premium?

D.—Among the five hundred shareholders hastily got together there will naturally be forty or fifty impecunious speculators, who may not be able to meet their engagements. From the composition of the membership we think there are fully three hundred members whom no ordinary pecuniary temptation would tempt to part with their shares. There are probably forty or fifty who would be forced to sell as soon as the additional calls were made, and some subscriptions may perhaps be sacrificed, but those who hold on will find that they have a good paying investment. Unlike other Exchanges there is little probability of annual dues being exacted. We may not declare a dividend the first or second year, but the price of the seats will inevitably advance as soon as it is fully understood that all the capital in the Exchange is being put to a productive use. The directors cannot go in debt or mortgage the property of the Exchange without the consent of a majority of the subscribers, which it would be very difficult to get. I do not believe they will ever be applied to; at least, not while the present long-headed and cautious brokers have control of the institution.

R.—But what do you expect the Exchange will finally effect? Will it meddle with public affairs or aim at any alteration in our laws?

D.—Here again I want to warn you that what I will say on that point is my own individual opinion. I do not speak for the Board or its officers. The Exchange will never be able to fulfill the objects its projectors had in view, unless it can succeed in so altering the laws affecting real estate as to make conveyances of property as easy, sure and inexpensive as transfers of bonds and stocks. The expense, uncertainty and waste of time which is now involved in the purchase and sale of real estate must be done away with. Our friends, the lawyers, must make up their minds that the real estate brokers and property holders will do all they can to cut down their extravagant charges against real estate. To do this the Exchange will be forced to become in a sense a political body. It will not become partisan, but will use both parties to accomplish its ends. Naturally it will have something to say in all measures affecting local government, so as to lighten taxation. It will be profoundly interested in building laws and sanitary enactments.

R.—What machinery would you suggest for carrying out these higher aims of the Exchange?

D.—We are about organizing a General Committee on Legislation. Among the list of our members are some of the wealthiest and most influential citizens of New York. Our purpose is to get those gentlemen to work, if they will, so as to bring their influence to bear not only at Albany but at the City Hall. So far organizations of real estate owners have not amounted to much, the politicians have got the best of them. But the real estate brokers represent a business interest, which is naturally seeking its own advantage, and they will keep at work at this problem of land transfer reform, as it is a matter which affects their pockets. My own plan would be to have the General Committee of the Real Estate Exchange the nucleus around which all the best classes of our citizens should rally. I would have them open negotiations with the Chamber of Commerce, the Stock, Produce, Cotton and Metal Exchanges, so as to get their co-operation if possible. Then why should not the great clubs of New York be utilized for purposes of civic and legislative reform? Why should not the Union League Club, which has done good work in the past, and the Manhattan Club, which has an influential membership, help in promoting such measures as will give New York responsible and economical government? There is the University Club, with over a thousand members—all educated gentlemen, for no one can belong to it unless he is, at least, a bachelor of arts. Surely, there should be some public spirit in a club made up of college graduates. The Union and St. Nicholas Clubs ought to help in redeeming this city from misrule. The great London clubs have all a public function. They represent the various phases of political opinion in Great Britain. The social features are in the great clubs of London subordinated to the higher politics of the Empire, and so it should be here.

R.—Yes, and there are a number of reform organizations which have been trying to do some good in their own way.

D.—I am afraid some of these do not amount to much. They are often composed of knots of uneasy people who adopt some high-sounding title and then write documents to get their names in the papers. The one difficulty I see in our way is the crowd of noisy and uneasy cranks who infest organizations of this kind in order to achieve personal distinction or add to their notoriety. If there was some way of keeping our deliberations secret, of not permitting any name to go before the public in connection with our movement, it would save us from these notoriety hunters and make our work far more effective. My idea of a model municipal reform association is that of the Philadelphia Committee of One Hundred, which has done so much to save our sister city from rascals in office.

R.—Will not the establishment of the Exchange lead to speculation?

D.—Possibly. If our land laws are simplified and transfers of property are easy, there will be a great increase in the number of transactions to the advantage of brokers, and, if you please—speculators. This will, however, greatly advantage real estate owners, for if sales are readily made property will advance in value. Real Estate is now unavailable for a call loan at a bank. To secure a mortgage involves a tedious waste of time and much trouble and expense. If titles could be readily ascertained and guaranteed, real estate would at once have a standing in a bank and could be used as a collateral for a short time loan. This would be a wonderful accommodation to business men in times of monetary distress. In many of the recent failures in the clothing trade, the bankrupts were found to be possessed of large parcels of real estate, but they were unavailable. Were it possible before the close of this coming spring season for all the real estate of the country to be made available as an asset for a call loan, there would be a revival of business that would be magical. It would be simply an enormous addition to the floating wealth of the country. What was latent would become active. This might lead to what you would call speculation, but in no sense would the increase of business be illegitimate. It would help every real interest in the country. Should the reforms we have in mind be brought about, a real estate auction room would be as thronged as is the Stock Exchange. Our auctioneers and brokers would not only sell houses and lots, but would buy and sell guaranteed mortgages. Then why should not contracts be bought and sold at auction. Suppose any large owner of real estate should give a sixty days' contract upon a house or a block of land, it might be auctioned off at the Exchange and perhaps change hands twenty times before the contract expired. Then, I believe that corporate wealth is finding a field in real estate. Land and apartment house companies are being organized daily, and their shares will in time find a market in our Real Estate Auction Room. I also think that in time the great estates of the country, the theatres, hotels and noted blocks of buildings in every city will be auctioned off in the New York Real Estate Exchange. Railroad grant lands and blocks of unimproved property in every State will find their market in New York. All this may seem visionary, but I do not think that the projectors of the Exchange themselves realize the full importance of the work they have originated.

Park Commissioner Crimmins, George N. Williams, William Lalor, ex-Alderman Sheehy and three other members of a committee appointed by the East Side Taxpayers' Association called on Mayor Edson on Thursday and explained to him the reasons why they thought an exterior street should be constructed along the East River between Sixty-fourth and Ninetieth streets. The draft of an act to establish such a street was also shown, and, if the Mayor approves it, the committee will go to Albany and have it introduced into the Legislature. This is a desirable improvement and will be effected some day or other, but is it needed just at present?

Imperfect Plans of the Dock Department.

The public is already familiar with the legal complications which have sprung from the attempt at executing the plans of the Dock Department along the water front. The Courts have decided that the river streets cannot be widened without granting an indemnity to property holders, who have secured certain privileges on the wharves, and this decision has been sufficient to check, for the present, even the attempt at improvement. The situation will not be amended by the discovery, due to a careful study of the subject, that the plans themselves are to the last degree defective, and only calculated to prolong a system which has already worked great injuries to the city.

The conception of river side streets may have been thought very pretty, but it was founded on no sound commercial reason. The plan would be well enough in a rural market town, with only a local traffic and no wholesale business; but for an entrepot like New York, where merchandise from every continent on the globe is to be handled, such streets represent rather an obstruction than a thoroughfare. They compel the use of drays for the removal of goods back and forth between the piers where they are unloaded and the warehouses in which they are stored, and this one incident is sufficient cause for their condemnation. The firm of H. B. Claflin & Co. keep eighteen drays constantly employed at trundling goods between the piers, the depots and their warehouses, and this rather numerous collection would be completely lost among the countless total of all the similar vehicles kept in the service of wholesale houses in the city. It is not surprising that our shippers are beginning to announce the complete withdrawal of one commercial specialty after another from our wharves, and their discovery of entrepots in Brooklyn, Jersey City and on the Kill Von Kull, where heavy merchandise can be more economically handled. It is impossible to find in New York facilities for handling such merchandise as sugar, grain, flour, cotton, petroleum, iron and other bulky specialties in the long list of products for exchange, and under the present system their loss to the city is inevitable. The work of transshipment is better done even in Chicago. There all terminal machinery is made to meet and connect, and, were it not so, that city could never indulge in the luxury of wood pavements.

This clumsy and labor-losing method is the reason why it is assumed that the plans of the Dock Department are abortive. Instead of facilitating the work of commerce they promise only to continue the process of banishing the shipping from our piers. But while inflicting this damage they incidentally compass also another great injury. They contemplate the sacrifice of space enough for the ground room of a supplementary city of no mean population. Even if carried out only along the water front already improved by the construction of piers and bulkheads, these plans would deprive us of a surface more than five miles long by two hundred feet broad, a surface, too, that should be utilized over every inch of its extent. But for what purpose is the sacrifice to be made? To give us the filthiest, most offensive and crowded streets in New York, streets which all cleanly and respectable business instinctively avoids. They are simply a disgrace to the city. In these days of elevators both economy and good taste demand that, to within a few feet of the bulkhead, our water front should be lined with lofty fire-proof warehouses, solidly constructed and imposing. This is the object to be pursued, and it is a case, fortunately, where our indiscretions may be made to serve us well. It is not necessary that the streets shall be completely abandoned. The construction of warehouses resting on granite or iron columns and piers over these thoroughfares will serve the purpose of reclaiming the space, and yet leave us in the possession of everything worth while for the service of intercommunication. For the details of the plan, if it is permissable to descend to details when the general design is only suggested, the street railways should remain; but with switches, and vertical tracks extending the length of each pier they should be used exclusively for the transportation of merchandise. By this means communication could be maintained between the warehouses and any pier on either side of the city, and also with the freight depots of the railroads when they, too, like the warehouses, have been placed in their proper location.

As to the means of securing this reform along our water front, they are easily suggested, and the obstacles, though possibly considerable, are not greater than the obstructions which prevent the execution of the present plans of the Dock Department. Give the streets in fee, subject only to the right of way to men who will span them with warehouses, constructed in accordance with certain exterior requirements made to secure uniformity in the design. There can be little room for doubt that the space would be readily taken, for land will never go begging in the lower sections of the city. Of course there would be some opposition. It would come from two sources, from the owners of warehouse property held for rent in other sections of the city, and from the proprietors of the dilapidated rookeries that now line the water front streets. The first class could indemnify themselves by the construction of new warehouses on the reclaimed space, and their old buildings would certainly continue to rent for much more than enough to pay the interest on the money required for their new adventure. The second class could give us more trouble if they were persistent in their opposition, and might have their action for damages were the improvements undertaken without their consent. But over what ground can the Dock Department travel that fails to lead the way to a court house? It would probably make easier terms for the city to buy all the property abutting on the streets, holding it afterwards for sale or rent for warehouse purposes, than to complete the dock improvements in accordance with the accepted plans. These plans, it must be remembered, are only an elaboration of our present faulty system, a system which is driving the shipping from our water front. Any expenditure in this direction represents only an extravagance.

While discussing this subject, however, there will be no use of attempting to disguise the fact that it is now too late to retrieve all the bad consequences that have followed upon the practice of our unlucky commercial methods. Brooklyn has now nearly, if not quite, as many miles of improved water front as New York, which she offers to the use of shippers on terms that render competition on this side of the East River very difficult. Jewell's wharf, near the foot of Fulton street, may be considered a representative pier, yet the proprietors draw only about $10,000 per year rental, and this dock is probably as profitable as any other in the city. Compare this amount with the $70,000 per year, the sum at which one pier has recently been let in New York, and we may have some idea of the relative cost of wharfage in the two cities. The shipping has floated away from the New York piers, the charm is broken, and commerce is now distributing itself around the entire harbor. The west shore of the Hudson River has nearly five miles of improved water front, there is another mile on the Kill Von Kull, and the American docks at Tompkinsville, Staten Island, where large quantities of cotton are stored, form the nucleus of a new system destined to rapidly expand. The speedy completion of a water front railway along the north shore of Staten Island, connecting with the main land, is now as certain as any other human event; and when this route is opened the island will have advantages over every other section of the harbor. Unlike Jersey City, Hoboken and Weehawken, where the corporations have secured a monopoly and control, the water front on Staten Island is free and open to individual enterprise, and it is comparatively inexpensive. These are the new facts which forbid that we should be too sanguine, even under the most favorable conditions, when speculating on the probability of a return of the shipping business to the city. But we should not be prevented by the discovery of these facts from improving our water front in accordance with plans that will bring greater comfort and convenience to a section of New York that is becoming painfully crowded.

The Mutual Life Building.

NEW YORK, January 15th, 1884.

Editor of THE REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS' GUIDE:

DEAR SIR—In the article on the Mutual Life Insurance Company's building, published in your number of January 12th, I find the erroneous statement made in a former issue of your paper repeated. You say that "the granite piers stand upon brick piers of their own area." This is a mistake; the brick piers have a sectional area of more than double that of the granite piers. It is plain to the view that they (the brick piers) are not only large enough to take the projecting base stones of the granite piers, but they extend also each side beyond the line of the jambs of the granite piers.

The statement you make, based upon this assumption (of the piers having the same area), that "the granite can scarcely be needed for strength," shows that you have considered only one factor of strength in a pier, viz., sectional area; accordingly, brick would have been a strong enough material instead of granite.

The factor of proportion of height to cross section in a pier, which you have failed to consider, is quite as important as sectional area. The granite piers in question are seven and one-quarter diameters in height. The brick piers upon which they stand are only one and one-half diameters high; therefore the long piers are proportionately weaker than the short piers below them and require a proportionately stronger material to obtain the same strength, and these matters have been adjusted by calculation.

I do not consider the buff (lime) stone, which you mean to recommend, competent, much less would I use it if it were "sand" stone, as you inadvertently call it.

Again, if the buff stone were used instead of the granite, the piers, being of the same material and of inferior or weaker proportions than those above them, would be weaker than they. That they would look weaker is beyond doubt also, and this would be undesirable.

But now I am stepping on æsthetic grounds, upon which I prefer not discussing the merits or demerits of my work.

If you will kindly give this a place in your paper you will greatly oblige,

Yours, most respectfully, CHAS. W. CLINTON.

The Dry-Goods District.

Mr. Victor Levi says that rents do not hold their own in the business district of the Fifth Ward. Landlords, like the Lorillards, who have been sanguine as to the value of rentals in years past, are now willing to concede something to the tenants. Unlike residence property, leases in this business district are usually made between November and February, the first of the latter month being the beginning of the renting year. There are no lack of applicants for lofts, but costly stores are not in the same demand as formerly. There is a disposition to do business on a more economical basis, so far as rentals go. Jobbers in Yankee notions, men and women's underwear, and a great variety of other articles, have no need of costly stores in which to display their goods, and hence the demand for upstairs accommodations, on account of their cheapness. Mr. Levi instanced one establishment, a newly erected building, which the proprietor thought ought to rent for $10,000 a floor. He is now willing to take $7,500. The failures in business have not as yet apparently diminished the numbers of those who require accommodations for disposing of merchandise by wholesale.

The real estate dealers of Chicago partook of a banquet at the Palmer House on the 15th inst. Some two hundred gentlemen, including the Mayor of the city, were at the table. The novelty was the use of cider in place of wines. Speeches were made by the President, H. C. Morey, B. F. Jacobs, A. E. Cummings, H. L. Turner, Mayor Harrison, C. H. Milliken, R. C. Givens, J. P. Wilson, I. B. Raine and F. E. Bryan. In the course of a speech made by W. L. Pierce, he said:

The want of confidence that had existed the past two years in railroad securities had caused a decline of a thousand million dollars in the market, quotations could not be restored by an addition to an irredeemable currency. A crisis had come to these inflation issues of stocks and bonds without a general panic setting in as in 1873. A tumble had taken place in iron fabrics, but the cure was not in the currency. In fact money had been more abundant than ever, the uses for it had lessened by the collapse in railroad building and iron over-production. The effect had been to increase the currency as compared to the quantity of commodities, and the conclusion was irresistible that what the public had confidence in must rise from the inflation of the circulating medium alone. Over $80,000,000 excess of exports over imports last year, 16,000,000 acres of public land taken for entry, 20 per cent. increase over 1882 and double that of 1880; New York bank deposits, $38,000,000 increase over the same time last year, $8,000,000 above legal reserve, enormous crops of wheat and cotton, immense in stocks in store and to come forward, continued heavy immigration, and an easy money market to cap the climax of good things in store, were the prospects for the year 1884. The public had not lost faith in real estate, and Chicago real estate stood first.

John Swinton recently advertised for a compositor in the New York Sun. He received over two hundred replies from first class workmen, and it is quite clear that five or six hundred good printers are now out of employment in this city. The printers have themselves to blame. They have raised wages in this city at a time of unusual business depression, when the prices formerly paid were far higher than in other cities. New York city should do the great bulk of the book and job printing of the country. It is the metropolis which distributes the great mass of books, and the railroad companies and others who want large jobs and show cards would prefer to have their work done here as it is the greatest and most convenient centre of trade. The theatrical business requires an enormous quantity of show bills, but New York has been largely cut off from this ucrative work by the exorbitant demand of the working printers. The theatrical business is given to Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago and other interior cities. Even posters for this city are printed thousands of miles away, and have been for years. The daily newspaper proprietors are greatly to blame for this unnatural rate of wages, which is driving business from New York. They have two objects in view, one to make the printing of daily papers costly, and so discourage the rivalry of cheap papers. Then again, Messrs. Bennett, Jones and Dana do not like to fight printers' unions. It looks mean and excites the prejudice of the working classes against them. Typographical Union No. 6, the local association of the printers, has taken advantage of this position of the newspaper proprietors and has put up the price of composition to absurdly high figures, which is a very good thing for a few men, but ruinous to hundreds of others, as it has driven printing to other cities. The proprietors of the Evening Post and Tribune have successfully resisted the attempt of the union, and the other newspapers could save from two to four hundred dollars a week in their printing bills without any trouble. The price of composition and job work must come down, and the newspaper proprietors who encourage the present high rates are simply injuring the whole book and job trade of this city.

Old New York real estate dealers will regret to hear that Anthony J. Bleecker is no more. He died at his late residence, 100 West Fifty-sixth street, on Thursday last. He was born October 20, 1799, and came of one of the historic families of the metropolis. He was sixty years in business, in which he did so much that he claimed to have bought and sold the New York of his day four times over. Mr. Bleecker was once a United States Marshal and ran against Fernando Wood as a Whig candidate for Mayor. He will be buried to-day from Trinity Church at 2 P. M., and his body will be laid in the family vault.

In reference to the paragraph in our last issue showing the shortcomings of the New York press, a well known journalist sends us a letter, from which the following extract may be of interest:

"True, too true. I have often thought of it lately, and wondered if it is possible for the daily journalism of the metropolis of the country to find any lower depth of intellectuality. Is the taste of New York so utterly limited to crime, scandal and party bickerings? What we want is a paper to be read by people who have brains as well as membranes. Let it represent at least a fair average of culture, be bright and newsy, but not nasty. There is room for such a paper, provided it can be content with the company of the "few and fit." If it insists on having the coppers of the million it must go down to this level to get them. The newspaper should be very liberal. The present race of papers are away behind the cultivated intelligence of the community, keeping step with the veriest old prejudices and superstitions. Not that the editors believe in them, but that they think it will, in some way, swell the subscription list. One would think that the appreciation of pluck and independence had died out of this "Kingdom of majorities." And this suggests one of the dubious aspects of the Democratic experiment; this habit of conforming everything to the source of authority below rather than to that above."

Improving Old Buildings.

It is not always the modern office buildings that produce the largest net income. Adding interest on the cost of some of these expensive structures, the sum of losses from unrented space and the increased cost of maintenance, furnishing steam, running elevators, &c., it may fairly be questioned whether during this decade at least it would not be more profitable to remodel many of the old structures in the office district than to build new on the ten-story principle, particularly where the area is limited and the demand not pressing.

There are very many buildings in the lower part of the city that, from natural causes, undesirable occupation, or bad management, have so depreciated that the rent bears no reasonable proportion to the valuation. Such property is always capable of improvement, and any one familiar with the requirements of the probable occupants of a building, and competent to undertake such work, has a large field of usefulness before him. Architects invariably ignore this branch, preferring rather to distinguish themselves by designing ornamental fronts and roofs. Not so with our real estate agents, however. One of them, Mr. Ferdinand Fish, has met with such marked success in the improvement and management of this class of property, that his increasing business compels him to keep an experienced architect constantly employed preparing plans and specifications and superintending work.

Mr. Fish evidently retains the confidence his predecessor, the late James M. Taylor, enjoyed for so many years. He has a number of clients who are guided by his judgment in the purchase or leasing of property of this class, for which we notice he advertises in another column.

We are compelled to recognize his success in the management of at least one building that has come under our notice, being in view from our windows.

Through skilful rearrangement and judicious expenditure he has more than doubled the income within two years. We hear of another instance where the increase has been even greater. Certainly no one knows better the requirements of tenants than a real estate agent, who, also, if he be competent, is most likely to make an investment profitable where a chance presents itself.

Real Estate Department.

The season of dullness is drawing to a close. Next week there will doubtless be more activity, which will keep on increasing until April. The only important transaction on the Exchange during the past week was the sale of some lower Broadway property, which brought what experts thought was rather a low figure. From this time forth, for a year or so, no forced sale will be a good one nor will prices be as buoyant as they have been.

The following shows the Conveyances and Mortgages recorded during the past week, as compared with the corresponding week last year:

Out Among the Builders.

The Colwell Lead Company intend to tear down the building on the northwest corner of Sixth avenue and Thirty-ninth street and to erect on the site a five or six-story structure, into which they will remove from their present place of business, at No. 1416 Broadway. No architect has yet been selected.

A company has just been incorporated, under the style of "The Lyceum," with a capital of $36,000, in 360 shares of $100 each. The incorporators are P. G. Hubert, Saml. Lowden, Jas. W. Pirsson, J. S. Ellis, R. L. Pirsson, H. E. Reeve, C. W. Clinton, Thos. C. Van Brunt, Wm. H. Hall, Ed. Franke, F. F. Ward, and M. McDonough. The object of the company is the purchase and improvement of real estate for residences, homesteads and apartment houses, and for buildings for public meetings. Mr. P. G. Hubert informed a representative of THE RECORD AND GUIDE that the company intended to erect the Lyceum as early as possible. It would contain a club, a private theatre, with spacious dining-rooms and other apartments. The theatre would be used for select musicales and theatricals of a private character. One of the main objects of the club would be the reception of distinguished artists from abroad. Some of the best families in the city would be connected with the club. The theatre will nearly equal in size the Fifth Avenue, and will have a tier of private boxes reserved for the stockholders. Hubert, Pirsson & Co. will be the architects.

Geo. Murray is about to build a five-story improved tenement, 25x85, on the north side of Ninety-second street, 100 feet east of Second avenue.

Schastey & Co. intend to erect, in the spring, a store front, size 55 feet front and 12 deep, on the west side of Broadway, south of Fifty-third street, to connect with their old building on the south side of Fifty-third street, adjoining. This is in addition to the six-story brick factory, for which plans were filed by them a few weeks ago. The total cost of these improvements will be about $40,000.

Henry Weil intends to reconstruct the five-story brick factory, Nos. 119 and 121 Chrystie street, recently damaged by fire. Thom & Wilson will be the architects.

The bill of costs and expenses incurred by the Commissioners in the matter relative to the opening of One Hundred and Forty-sixth street, between Avenue St. Nicholas and Tenth avenue, will be presented to one of the Justices of the Supreme Court for taxation on February 1, 1884.

Contractors' Notes.

Bids or estimates will be received at the Department of Public Works until Wednesday, January 23, 1884, at 12 o'clock M., for furnishing materials and performing work in the erection of an iron shed over a portion of the sidewalk surrounding Fulton Market.

General Horace Porter will doubtless confine himself hereafter to making funny after-dinner speeches. His presidency of the West Shore road was a heart-rending joke to a great many people.

The up-town movement of churches continues. The old Jane street Methodist Episcopal Church, near Eighth avenue, built forty years ago, is about to sell out and move up-town. The Presbyterian Church in the same street will also remove.

New York and several debt-ridden cities might take a profitable lesson in finance from Baltimore, which owes $38,000,000. This is a large amount, but it is so judiciously managed that it is not felt to be a burden on the taxpayers. The money is so well invested that the annual levy for interest purposes is only three mills on the hundred dollars. The water-works debt of Baltimore is $7,000,000, but the revenue on the works more than pays the interest. The city has a large sum invested in the stock and mortgage bonds of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, which pays the interest on $10,000,000, while the revenue derived from her street railroads provides the interest on another million. Baltimore's sinking fund investment is $8,000,000, producing an income of $425,000, which is growing at the rate of $300,000 a year. This is sufficient to meet the interest on her entire debt as it falls due. From this showing it is evident that Baltimore has been a well-governed city.

Don't pay back to a tenant that you have to turn out by summary proceedings, any deposit that you required and obtained when the tenant moved in, as security for the faithful performance by him of the covenants on his part contained in his lease. Keep the money. It does not make any difference whether the sum deposited with you is inadequate or more than enough to cover any loss that the tenant's default may have caused you. If it be more than enough, that's the landlord's good luck, and it is the tenant's own fault, and is the bargain he made. That's what Judge McAdam decided last Saturday in the case of Rice against Bliss, on the argument of Messrs. McDaniel, Wheeler & Souther, counsel for the landlord.

Special Notices.

The thirty-fourth annual report of the Manhattan Life Insurance Company, a synopsis of which will be found elsewhere, makes a very good showing. The total income for the year is set down as $12,346,362.41; the gross assets, $10,871,184.23; and the surplus, $2,389,550.52. This seems to be a very prosperous and popular company.

Turning of every description is done by J. Gregorius, of Nos. 113, 115 and 117 Attorney street, where he turns out all kinds of hardwood mouldings, mahogany, walnut, cherry, ash, oak, etc. He has every facility for this kind of work on the above premises, and has been in business for many years. All orders addressed to him as above will receive prompt attention.

A recent invention that will interest contractors and builders has been patented by Mr. T. L. Lynch, by means of which sash, weight and cords can be attached to the upper and lower sashes without tearing out the sashes, stop-beads, etc. The advantages of this invention will be readily appreciated by architects and builders, but for the uninitiated it may be well to state that heretofore it has been necessary, when repairing a broken cord, to tear out a part of the frame with the almost certain chance of disfiguring the woodwork and paint, damaging lace curtains and hangings, and possibly breaking expensive plate glass. This invention has been applied in the houses belonging to Mr. John Castree, president, and to Mr. W. H. Buxton, cashier of the Irving Savings Institution, to whom Mr. Lynch refers. It has also been endorsed by a number of architects. Mr. Lynch's office is at 103 Christopher street, where his improvement can be seen and full particulars obtained.

Parties requiring butchers' fixtures, tools, etc., would do well to call at the manufactory of Edward L. Gallon, Nos. 305, 307 and 309 West Forty-first street. This is the oldest established business in that line. Refrigerators, wine and fish freezers and saloon ice houses are also supplied by him. Contracts can be made with architects and builders for supplying flats, apartment houses, etc. The best of references are given, as will be seen from Mr. Gallon's card in another column.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—On the market for Common Hards matters are somewhat stupid at the moment, and there is very little of much general interest to advise. The season of the year and the condition of the weather, however, are both prime factors in checking consumption, and while a more active state of business would unquestionably be very welcome, operators are not altogether disappointed. Even at some of the large jobs where work goes forward spasmodically as opportunity admits, there is a fair accumulation of stock to draw upon, and about the only development of new demand is when the necessities of the case require positively dry brick. The slow distribution, however, is fairly offset by the reduced quantity of stock offering, and the average inclination of prices in buyers' favor, the few sales made this week showing some advance, and the turn about $8.00 per M has been made for the best stock. From "Up River" arrivals have stopped altogether, and the probabilities are that about the last of arrivals for the present are at hand from lower down the stream as the flats are frozen over and communication with the yards checked. New Jersey has also contributed moderately, and arrivals from Long Island have been small, though there is some inquiry for the latter, and the probability is that more could be placed. Considerable stock remains afloat, but is not offered with much freedom at the moment. As matters stand it is a somewhat difficult effort to decide upon a really fair and positive representative line of quotations and we therefore call figures a little nominal at say $6 50@7.00 for Jerseys, $7.00@7.25 for Long Island, about the same or a shade more for "Up Rivers," and $7.50@8.00 for Haverstraws on the general run, but fine sold as high as $8.12½ per M. Pales are also firmer with $1.00 about an inside rate, and the best reaching $4 25 per M on actual sales, and only moderate amounts of stock available.

CEMENT.—Domestic grades are without any great degree of animation and selling mainly on regular calls and to seasonable outlets. No fresh receipts are secured, but from the accumulations on hand agents meet the wants of the market fairly and promptly. There is some irregularity on values and quotations are made from $1.15 up to $1.25, according to quantity, delivery and brand, and we hear of some of the favorite marks on special orders going still higher. Foreign stock is also steady, indeed inclined to some degree of firmness at full former rates. Fair arrivals have taken place since the first of the month, but about all appears to have been sold before receipt, and of the standard brands, at least, we hear of little or nothing available. Importers, as a rule, report a fair demand still extant, and generally appear in cheerful mood over the outlook.

GLASS.—The market for window is dull at the moment. Of imported stock the accumulation is on the increase and this appears to have a slight softening influence upon values though holders are not pressing business at all. American remains to some extent nominal. The meeting of manufacturers this week has been very secret but it is understood they still feel unwilling to submit to the demands of the workmen and want more protection in the way of tariff.

HARDWARE.—The distribution continues to be limited to a few small and unimportant orders, and the general market lacks animation throughout. Dealers, however, seem to be in expectation of a better call for builders' hardware at an early date, on the belief that stocks in second hands have run down somewhat and that consumption will improve. Supplies and assortments in first hands are good and equal to any ordinary call, and the effort is to keep values on a steady basis if possible. There has, however, for some little time been an irregular tone on the market for screws, and manufacturers vary on the line of discounts. The rates on Manila cordage were recently reduced ½c. per lb.

LATH.—The market has not been active because there was not much stock to be active with, but the evidences favor the belief that a larger quantity would have found a place without much difficulty. On the business transacted there has certainly been a recovery of tone and an increase of value with the rate advanced to $250 per M, at which the market closes with much firmness, and everything immediately available sold out. Neither can we learn that there is much afloat for this port (indeed only one cargo apparently), and the selling interest again appears to have secured a fair advantage with a reasonable prospect of holding it. Yard prices are also firm, as few dealers have much stock, and in the majority of cases there is an inclination to part with it as slowly as possible.

LUMBER.—The season of the year and the uncertain condition of the weather have a tendency to check consumption and deliveries from yard, and the tone of the market is dull all around. In a wholesale way the small arrivals prevent any special effort to realize and permit receivers to enter a claim of steadiness, but the general indications are that they would find it extremely difficult to secure a larger outlet, even at a marked concession on the line of valuation. The fact is, no one really requires any important addition to stock just now, and are more or less disturbed about the future The recent failures in the building trade have confirmed some of the previous fears, and, naturally, contracts are entered upon slowly in all cases, as lumber at present cost is considered a great deal better to carry than an uncertain risky line of credit. Exporters afford a fair sort of outlet, but this does not, to any noticeable extent, help the market beyond the grades handled.

Eastern Spruce in a general way has a steady position, as it is more than likely that a moderate offering would secure fairly prompt attention and command about the old line of valuation. Arrivals, however, are quite uncertain at this season and the position has no really fair test. Specials do not appear to be tendered with the usual freedom and buyers evidently start the New Year with some misgivings, which leads them to be very careful in asking for estimates. Thus far the advices from manufacturers have continued moderately firm, but without evidences of tendency to buoyancy. Quotations about $13@16 are the general range, with the usual possibilities for specials.

White Pine has found some little local demand and a fair outlet for shipment, but the movement is not of unusual proportions nor so large as to afford sellers any great amount of encouragement for further advantage at the moment. The manufacturing interest is making a larger consumption than builders, but from both these sources the inquiry is very careful and rarely allowed to exceed positively defined wants. Accumulated supplies are fully equal to all calls made, but under sufficient control to prevent pressure. We quote $18.50@22.00 for West India shipping boards; $28@30 for South American do.; $17@18 for box boards, and $18.50@19.00 for extra do.

Yellow Pine continues to be reported upon in a more or less irregular manner, some of the trade adhering to hopeful views of the near future, and others apparently decidedly lacking in faith, consequent upon repeated disappointment. There is certainly no open call for stock, and random offering would have a pretty hard time of it, but in the way of specials a little has been done and further business is looked for. Agents fill the f. o. b. orders to a fair extent, but some complaint of a reduction in the number of sales in that way are also to be heard. We quote as follows: Randoms, $20@22 per M; Specials, $21@.3 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $24@25; Dry do., do., $25@26; Step Plank, $30@35 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $14@16 for rough, and $19@21 for dressed. Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports $13@15 for rough, and $18@20 for dressed.

Hardwoods have been rather quiet and moving in about the old form. Desirable stocks are moderate, well in hand and form, but there is a plentiful accumulation of off grades on which holders are willing and anxious to realize. We quote at wholesale rates by car-load about as follows: Walnut, $65@110 per M; ash, $35@40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, $40@75 do.; whitewood ½ and ⅝ inch, $25@30 do., do., and do. inch, $28@38; hickory, $45@55 do.

Shingles continue plenty enough for the moderate demand, and without any positive change in value are only about barely steady. We quote Cypress at $8 per M for 5x20 and $10 do. for 6x20 regularly assorted shipping; Pine shipping stock $2.50 for 18 inch, and Eastern saw grades at $2.50@4.50 for 16 inch, as to quality and to quantity. Machine dressed cedar shingles quoted as follows; for 30 inch $15@20 for A, and $20@28.50 for No. 1; for 24 inch, $10.50@15 for A and $15@20.50 for No. 1; for 20 inch $7@9.50 for A and $9@12.50 for No. 1.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

THE WEST.

From the columns of the Northwestern Lumberman we take the following:

Logging, on the whole, is progressing most favorably. Rarely are there so few obstructions in the way to good work. If the swamps are not solid it is not a fault of the weather. There is plenty of snow in most of the districts for good hauling, but not enough anywhere to impede the progress of the loggers. During the extreme cold weather some of the crews made no great exertions, but now that the thermometer has gone up from 20 to 40 degrees the men and teams are working their best. One thing that pleases the operators is the small cost, as compared with last winter, at which they are banking their stock.

CHICAGO.

AT THE YARDS.—The chief element of trade at the present is—hope. The lumber dealers of this city have been credited with great enterprise and commercial ability. Now they are distinguishing themselves as witnesses to the doctrine of faith. They are hoping and believing, if not with all their hearts, certainly with all their might. Probably not for years have the lumber merchants had as much time to devote to this good work as since New Year's. Never within our memory have we seen the district show so little life as now.

The question of prices is the vital one now. The dealers went into winter quarters with the determination to rest indifferent about selling, to hold for steady prices, and to carry so stiff an elbow until trade should start up in February that a new and healthy tone should be given to values. But it is hard to hold more than a hundred concerns to one view or one purpose. Now that the managers and their clerks have plenty of time on their hands, some of them are amusing themselves by sending out hektograph circulars and price lists, and otherwise feeling of trade

There is another cause that may operate against steadiness of prices. Several yards will go out of business the coming spring, and their stock will be for sale. If they go off quickly at auction, and are distributed among the yards, or if they could be taken care of by a pool of yards, it would be a good thing for general values But if they are disposed of at cut prices to the country trade, the effect will be to demoralization.

The monthly statement of stock on hand has not yet been made up. It is, however, generally known that the aggregate of lumber in the yards, while it is not as much as at this time last year, is not very encouragingly less. Sorts are, however, lacking in some instances. Twelve-foot 2x4, and 2x12 dimension, and 12-inch 12-foot boards are very scarce, and the latter are nearly out of the market. Two-by-six joints are also in shorter supply this season than usual. By common consent the mills did not cut as much of this kind of stuff last season as usual, because there was a great surplus of it the year before.

There has been a little more movement in hardwoods than last week in this line, though trade has not revived as it should do after such general cessation of business as has prevailed during the last three weeks. There have been some good orders, notably for ash, walnut and cherry, and the character of them was more satisfactory than has been customary of late. A great many large manufacturers are entirely out of lumber, and now that they are starting up manufacture again, must buy in considerable quantities. The above is true particularly of ash, which is the most active of the cheaper woods. For oak there is comparatively little demand outside of the finishing requirement, the chief call from the manufacturers being for bolsters and reaches.

Walnut has shown a little more activity, and there is noted some calls for firsts and seconds for finishing purposes. This is unusual, and it would hardly do to call it general demand. Cherry is, in the language of one of the dealers, "doing first rate." Prices are wonderfully stiff, can't even be bent, and parties that have good firsts and seconds let them go very reluctantly. Poplar seems to be suffering from an extra depression, while it must be only temporary, we reflect the actual state of the market by lowering the highest range of our quotations on firsts and seconds and common.

Reports from the mills are favorable to better times in the hardwood trade. Of course there is great deal of good lumber scattered about the country, and plenty of men come to the city wishing to dispose of stock, but it is not to be found everywhere, as it was a year ago. Large and choice lots of any given kind of lumber can no longer be found at every station through the hardwood country, and some searching is often necessary to discover the stock wherewith to fill the more exacting orders. Besides, almost all the stock in the country is dry, showing that there is a very slow output. All this bodes good to the manufacturer and dealer alike.

LUMBERMAN AND MANUFACTURER,
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Reports are meagre concerning the lumber business of the country, several letters received this week report uniformly "Trade dull and collections very difficult." Handling lumber with the mercury standing anywhere from 20 to 40 degrees below zero is neither pleasant nor profitable work. During the last half of the month several large sales are reported to Southern Iowa, Missouri and Kansas for future delivery. Prices are firmer and confidence seems about fully restored as to values. News from the woods makes it probable that there will be no scarity of logs next summer, but considering the growth of the western world and the consequent increased demand for lumber, we are led to believe that neither logs nor lumber will materially change in value in 1884, even if the winter should prove long and favorable for the loggers.

FOREIGN.

The London Timber Trade's Journal says:

Business for the past year in the timber trade has been, on the whole, less unfavorable than was at one time expected, but prices have been all in favor of the consumers. The season commenced with a slight advance on the closing prices of the previous year, but the rise sought to be established could not be sustained, and prices may be said to have been declining all through the season, up to its termination, without showing any signs of recovering. The chief characteristic has been the close competition on all sides, which necessitated turning goods over quickly at very little margin. Such a spirit of trade is averse to holding stock, and freshly-arrived goods in large lines were sold on the quays with the object of saving yard expenses. The cheapness of the commodity has undoubtedly been the principal cause of the season's heavy import.

NAILS.—The demand is moderate and careful, and buyers evidently do not propose to invest with any more rapidity than necessity compels. The market in consequence has a dull sort of tone on all outlets with no selling basis for the infusion of greater strength at the moment. The general run of supplies is ample for all the calls made, but the prospect of a reduced make at the Eastern mills before work is resumed at the West, tends to make holders a trifle steadier and unlikely to allow concessions. We quote at $2.60@2.70 per keg for 10d. to 60d., according to size of invoice.

PAINTS AND OILS.—It has been a light and somewhat uncertain week all around, and dealers, as a rule, appear to have little or no news to communicate. Supplies are fairly assorted and well enough in hand to prevent pressure to realize, but all available when called for, and no attempt to increase the cost would be made. Linseed Oil remains steady and in average demand at 56 @58c. for domestic, and 58@60c. for foreign. Spirits Turpentine selling slowly and mainly in job lots with tone of market weak, especially for large parcels. Quoted at 35@37c. according to size of invoice.

PITCH AND TAR.—Buyers call for about average quantity and are met by a fair offering with former rates accepted all around. We quote pitch $2 25@2.30 per bbl., and tar $2 50@3.00 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.

MARKET QUOTATIONS.

Our figures are based upon cargo or wholesale valuations in the main. Due allowance must therefore be made for the natural additions on jobbing and retail parcels.

MORTGAGES.

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given, and the amount. The general dates used as headings are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date.

J. T. LINDSEY, Business Manager.

The stock market has again looked sick during the past week, with some signs of recovery at the close. But old operators are of opinion that prices "will not be better until after they are worse." In other words, that the natural end of a bear, as of a bull campaign, is a break more or less serious. We will certainly have higher prices, and that some time before April, but not before another semi-panic such as the market had last August. It is the remarkable ease of money which has saved us thus far, but a crisis of some sort is apt to occur in all speculative markets before there is a recovery. Good stocks are intrinsically cheap, and investors can purchase them now without fear, yet there is danger at any time of some unexpected disaster driving prices still lower.

The extensive selling of West Shore bonds was undoubtedly due to the belief, on the part of large holders like the Astors, that there was danger the road would get into the hands of a receiver, in which case the latter's certificates would constitute a first lien ahead of the mortgage. This view was justified by the history of the monster Rockaway hotel, where the mortgagees lost all their money, and even the mechanics' bills were not satisfied. Judge Emott is out with an opinion that the liens of contractors, laborers and material men do not come ahead of first mortgage bonds, which is true enough where the roads are solvent, but receivers' certificates for necessary construction and maintenance work have, under the rulings of our courts in equity, the precedence of any mortgage. Judge Emott is not now on the bench, and his opinion has no judicial authority, nor does it meet the state of facts which has led investors to sell their bonds.

H. R. R.	160,924,436	160,952,882	142,038,381	150,390,592	146,050,808	....	175,994,523
Elevated	8,011,862	9,256,670	45,945,401	60,881,757	75,585,778	86,361,029	92,124,443
	168,936,298	170,209,502	187,983,782	211,222,349	221,636,586	....	268,118,966

From these figures it will be seen that, notwithstanding the 92,000,000 of fares annually collected by the elevated system, which has been in existence less than eight years, that the horse cars carry 16,000,000 more passengers than in 1877. The travel on our elevated and surface roads increases in a far greater ratio than do the additions to our population. When the city limits did not extend beyond Madison square, the thrifty citizen walked to his place of business; now every new resident is forced to patronize the elevated or surface roads. The number of those who walk from their residences to their places of business is less than it was forty years since. Those who travel on the east side elevated are aware that that artery of our city life is overtaxed. We must have additional means of communication between the upper and lower parts of the city. To solve this problem there is the proposed Arcade Railway under Broadway, and then there is the cable system with the elevated roads along the river front. Perhaps both of these improvements will be needed before the close of this century,

The decrease in the price of Northwestern securities, that is, Northwest, St. Paul, Manitoba, &c., is undoubtedly due to the collapse of the real estate speculation in the regions traversed by these roads. Here at the East we have but a faint realization of the excitement which prevailed in the extreme Northwest, due to the large emigration and the heavy speculative buying of unimproved lands. Had the advance in these lands continued there would have been no such terrific breaks in the Northern Pacifics, and the chill which has followed that fever is what accounts for the lessened interest in Northwestern stocks. The same depressing influence has been felt west and southwest, but not to so great an extent. A few years will, however, see a revival of this speculative feeling. Our population is increasing with marvelous rapidity and the depression in our manufacturing industries will force unemployed workmen to take to mother earth for a living. The new railway lines will in time help to revive interests in the land, for large sections of the latter have thereby been made available for settlement.

Why Not?

The director of the Real Estate Exchange who was interviewed last week said he would like to see some co-operation between the leading exchanges, commercial bodies and clubs in this city to secure to New York a more responsible and economical city government. His proposition was for the Real Estate Exchange, through its General Committee, to invite the co-operation of all organizations who were interested in the property and the fair fame of the metropolis. The Chamber of Commerce, the Stock, Cotton, Produce, Mining, Metal, Building and other Exchanges have thousands of wealthy members, all of whom are interested in good municipal government. Then, says this director, why should not the great clubs of New York co-operate to the same end. All the leading London clubs have political or public objects in view, their social features being mainly incidental. The Union League Club has taken political action, and the Manhattan was organized to do the same thing. The St. Nicholas Club represents the descendants of our old Dutch families, and ought to have some civic pride. These and other organizations, if they would second the efforts of the Real Estate Exchange, might change the character of our city government and greatly improve its personnel.

This project might be worth trying. A good deal, of course, will depend upon the character of the gentlemen who will constitute the General Committee of the Real Estate Exchange. If they know what they want, act prudently, and are in earnest, they can achieve important results. It may be that among the bodies above mentioned there is no public spirit, and that the wealthy and influential citizens of New York are satisfied to see the present reign of misrule continue. If they decline to co-operate for public ends it may be well to consider whether it may not be desirable to open up negotiations with the various labor unions to see if the working people cannot be induced to vote for some better candidates than those furnished by the small machine wire-pullers in each party and the corner liquor shops. There has never yet been an effort made to unite all the best efforts of our city life into one great organization that would make an honest effort to redeem New York from the political slough into which it has fallen.

Speculation Declining.

The feverish speculation of the last few years is coming to a natural and not untimely end. Three times as many stocks were daily sold in 1880 than in 1883. Business is so dull on the Cotton Exchange that the brokers are trying to lure the public in by reducing their commissions. The mining boom is over, for the present at least. The speculation in grain has been active, but the New York operators find that dealing in Chicago prices is a losing business. The trained experts of the capital of the Northwest are more than a match for the Wall street men who take "flyers" in wheat, corn and provisions. It is safe to predict that there will be less grain speculated in by New Yorkers the balance of the year. That siliest of all speculations, the buying and selling of pipe line certificates, still flourishes, and more barrels of petroleum are traded on in a week than has been produced since the discovery of coal oil in Northern Pennsylvania. In this business the Standard Oil Company holds marked cards. It knows the exact consumption and production, and handles all the certificates. It is a losing game to all who deal in that slippery substance. Honestly conducted faro gives a far better show to the operator who wishes to "buck the tiger." The folly of speculating in petroleum will soon be seen by the most inveterate gambler, and that will put an end to the overcrowded meeting places of the petroleum brokers. Real estate is in no condition to be operated in speculatively just at present. When our land transfer laws are reformed and titles guaranteed, real estate will be one of the safest things to deal in. It cannot be "cornered," it always has a substantial and rising value as the country increases in population and wealth, and legal impediments, overcharges and insecure titles out of the way, we might reasonably expect to see a great deal of money put into real property. But the laws cannot be changed until after a long struggle, and hence there is no present prospect of speculative dealings in realty. The era of speculation, therefore, is coming to an end, and many persons who are employed as intermediaries between buyers and sellers will be forced to fall back on some productive employment. Of course, speculation will again revive, but not until we have large crops and high prices, and make money in manufactures and commerce.

The deal between the Tammany and Republican Aldermen, by which a very common liquor dealer was elevated to a high responsible municipal trust, ought to arouse our citizens to the necessity for changes in the machinery of our municipal government. There is really nothing to choose between the three factions who make up the Board of Aldermen. They are all and severally a disgrace to our city. For years this paper has held that the only way to reform our civic administration was to make the heads of departments responsible to the chief magistrate of the city and diminish the power of the Aldermen. It is gratifying to know that at least one daily paper, the Times, is re-stating points made by us on this subject for some time past. Says that paper : "Not only the power of confirmation, but all other powers and functions whatever, should be taken from the Board of Aldermen. It is an anomaly, founded on the analogies of our political governments. It has no legislative functions in the proper sense of the term, and there are, properly, none in a municipal administration for any such body to exercise. All its administrative functions could be better disposed of in some other way. The constitutional amendment requiring all legislation relating to cities to be general ought to be adopted, and then a system of municipal administration should be established with false political analogies left out and corporate analogies introduced. The concerns of the city are those of a great public corporation and they should be administered under general laws as such. The Board of Aldermen is unnecessary and, in the present condition of affairs, only an agency of mischief and corruption."

More Up-Town Building.

Whene'er we take our walks abroad, as the tuneful Watts meant to say, how many poor architects we see. And especially does the intellectual poverty of the poor architect show to disadvantage when he is under pressure to do something "original."

The immediate text of these remarks is the "Hoffman Arms," so called, a new and large apartment house at the corner of Madison avenue and Fifty-ninth street, which bears on a placard the names of its architects, to show that they think it a creditable work. Being of a different opinion, and, we trust, of a benevolent disposition, we suppress the names. The building is nearly a square of 100 feet on each of the streets it fronts, and at present there are some five stories of it completed. It is of brick, except the bay windows, which constitute its chief peculiarities. These are of metal. There is one very broad one in the centre of each front, and there are three others which begin above the ground, apparently on corbels, one at each end of the avenue front and one at the north end of the street front. The corbels are, of course, shams, the real support being inside, but they are solemnly moulded as if they were actual shelves of stone built into the wall, instead of sheets of metal tacked on to it. In the first story, the bays are moulded more or less into the similitude of masonry, with round and elliptical arches, panelled pilasters and key-irons, the spandrils being filled with coarse and indecorous decoration. But above this a spasm of expressiveness has come upon the designer, and he has deferred to his material in his architecture. That is to say, he has bestrewn the frames of the windows with promiscuous boltheads, big and little, which look like so many blisters, and this eruption of metallic pustules, which would have a meaning on a boiler, is continued to the top, forming a sort of varioloid decoration, which is not at all attractive in itself, but which serves to bring out much more strongly the absurdity of the imitation of masonry in the lower part. It seems odd that an architect should be willing to hold his own work up to ridicule in this way. We do not wish to do an injustice to the architect of the Hoffman Arms, but we strongly suspect him of an intention to differentiate the two parts with paint so that haply the unwary passer may be led to suppose that the bottom part is really masonry, and carries the metallic varioloid. If the whole feature is painted one color, it would be unjust to ascribe to him any intention whatever.

The masonry is not much more fortunate. The basement and first story are of stone, and there is an entrance archway in the centre of the avenue front. There is nothing striking in the treatment of the stonework, but the brickwork is original. The first story above the stone has rather small and widely spaced openings, covered with flat arches in brick. There is a piece of terra cotta in the centre of this arch doing duty as a keystone, and this keystone carries a pannelled stilt, which in turn carries a spreading semi-circular bowl of terra cotta, fluted, and the lid of this bowl is the sill of the third story window. Quaint and touching device! The top of this upper window is as remarkable as the bottom. It is covered with a segmental arch in brick, the voussoirs finishing against a horizontal string, and thus completing the covering of the window. This would be well enough if it were let alone, but the architect of the Hoffman Arms has no notion of stopping for any such inadequate reason as that he has "got through." Between this string-course and another above is a wide brick frieze, and over every window, having manifestly nothing whatever to do with the window, is a pediment, hanging over the opening like an extinguisher, the full height of the frieze, filled with ornament in terra cotta. Still, we should regard the architect's intention, and, judging him by such evidence of his intention as the building contains, we must acknowledge that he has succeeded, since it seems to have been his intention to do something different from anything else, and the dissimilarity of the Hoffman Arms is marked.

It is a great relief after this to look at the two houses on the northwest corner of Madison avenue and Sixty-seventh street. The two houses occupy a space of about 50 feet on the street by 75 on the avenue. They are brought under one roof, and treated as one composition, although the smaller, the westernmost, a twenty-foot house, is cleverly detached so as to assert itself as a separate dwelling. It consists of a bay window in stone running through two stories and the basement, and flanked by a round arched doorway. In the third story are two square-headed openings, one of them giving access to the roof of the bay window, and above the cornice is a gable having a large arched opening. The gabled wall is very slightly projected from the basement upwards, and the projection emphasized by roll-mouldings decorated here and there with carving. The remaining 30 feet are divided into an almost unbroken wall and a wide bay window similar in treatment to the first. In the third story is a double window over the recessed wall and two openings over the bay, while above the parapet is an elaborate dormer.

The central third of the longer front on Madison avenue is slightly withdrawn and the projections on either side are "cleaned" with mouldings as already described. In this central part is an arcade of three round-headed openings in the first story, of which the middle one is the doorway. In the second story are three square headed openings, enriched by pilasters, aligned over the arches, the material still being sandstone, and the third story is a brick wall, the openings being flanked by stone quoins. The roof story is withdrawn a few feet over this part so as to make a balcony, and the parapet story itself is in metal, which is rather unfortunate and rather puzzling also, since there is a central dormer of masonry in the same plane, for which it seems to have been practicable to provide a foundation. There is a chimnied gable at the south end balanced by a large dormer connected, by means of a decorated piece of wall, with another tall chimney at the north end. The composition, the use of material, the modelling and decoration of detail, are all extremely well studied, with the result of a refined and scholarly piece of work, which is, moreover, especially easy and domestic in expression, and has a touch of quaintness which does not degenerate into affectation.

There has been a considerable outburst of building activity in Eightieth street, between Madison and Fourth avenues, unaccompanied by any evidence of mental movement on the part of the designers, except in two brick houses on the south side of the street, near Fourth avenue, where an architect has clearly been at work. A brown stone basement and first story is broken in each of them by a bay window running through two stories, with a narrow arched opening in the second story over the lintelled doorway. Above is a group of three round arches over the bay and a single round arched window over the doorway, with a wide and narrow gabled dormer in brick and stone against the steep roof, corresponding to the division below. The treatment is massive and vigorous, the division effective, and the carved enrichments, the capitals of the jambs, and a row of leafage over the doorway, skilfully designed and executed.

The Gray Mare the Better Horse.

Judge Brown, in the United States District Court, for the Southern District of New York (this city), has decided, in the matter of Ransom, that when partners buy land for their business, as partnership property, and the title is taken in the name of only one of them, that the wives of the partners have no inchoate rights of dower in the land. So, too, a widow has no right of dower in land held under a contract to purchase, where the husband had sold his contract before his death. Such decisions as these are welcome. This troublesome right of dower ought to be abolished, as Mr. Dwight H. Olmstead says: "Under our laws now-a-days a wife has more rights than her husband." And then a man often does not know whether he is married or not, and buyers of land are constantly running risks on that point. The Court of Appeals, though, in the late case of Coleman vs. Burr, have struck a severe blow at the humbug custom of husbands conveying houses to their wives by way of payment for alleged services on the part of the wife. In that case the husband allowed the wife $5 a week for eight years for attending to his own mother, who was helpless from paralysis, and then he paid her by deeding property to her. The Court say that he was bound to take care of his mother, and that it is part of a wife's duty as a wife to render loving and devoted ministrations in his family, and that to allow such contracts would not only make her a menial and a servant, but that "fraud upon creditors would be greatly facilitated, as the wife could frequently absorb all her husband's property in the payment of her services, rendered under such secret unknown contracts." A few more such decisions in that line, and creditors, who have parted with their money or their property, will begin to have some rights that can be enforced against roguish debtors. As the laws stand now, the honest creditor has but a poor show. In Pennsylvania, in the suit of the Commonwealth against Springer, in October last, the Court of the Delaware Quarter Sessions carried the law pretty far against a husband's rights. As we were saying, the wife has more rights than the husband now-a-days. In that case the Court said that the wife could turn him out of her house, "exclude him from the right to eat at her table, ride in her carriage, and sleep in her bed," and that the Court can't insure him those rights and comforts. That his only remedy is to seek another home, invite her to share it with him, and upon refusal subject her to the pains and penalties of willful desertion. It is not possible at this stage of development of this social condition to foretell whether houses will be less in demand by husbands, and real estate fall in price, or a greater demand arise on the part of wives who may desire to be practically mistresses of the situation.

Our Prophetic Department.

INTERVIEWER—There are several subjects of general interest, political and financial, which it might be profitable just now to discuss, and hence, Sir Oracle, I will take the liberty of questioning you on somewhat diverse topics. What have you to say, for instance, about the West Shore Road?

SIR ORACLE—Had we a properly organized government the West Shore, the Nickel Plate, so called, the Ohio Central and many other parallel and connecting roads would never have been constructed. It is as clear as daylight that such a thing as permanent competition between railway companies is out of the question. The whole history of railroads in all countries shows this beyond all peradventure. It follows, therefore, that the paralleling of existing systems, which are already competent to do all the business offered for the next half century, is a criminal waste of capital. If the investors in such competing lines were asked to throw their money into the ocean it would be better for the country that they did so, for the unnecessary railway lines they build forever remain as a tax upon the community. They must be maintained, and it is the business and traveling public which are forced to bear the burden. In no other country is a new road allowed to be constructed without the sanction of the government. This is done to prevent waste of capital, or what Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt called "blackmailing." Now, there was some excuse for a West Shore Road between Weehawken and Albany. Had it saved passengers and freight from the South and West going North and East the waste of time and money involved in crossing the river, and accommodated the local traffic on the west bank of the Hudson, it would have met a want, though its business would not have been a paying one for many years. But the construction of the road west of Schenectady was a criminal waste of good money. I recollect what Mr. Sharpe, the well-known English railway attorney (who was on a visit to this country when Commodore Vanderbilt was quadrupling the track of the Central Road) said respecting that work: "What folly is this? The double track Central Road is not employed more than six hours out of the twenty-four. What, then, is the need of these extra four tracks? In densely populated England, although there are different ways by which we can get from one city to another, there is no such thing known as a quadruple track, and there is no need of one on the Central Road nor will there be for fifty years to come." Yet here comes the West Shore Road and adds two more tracks to the two superfluous ones already in existence.

INTERVIEWER—From what you say, you probably doubt whether the West Shore bonds will be able to pay interest?

SIR O.—I prefer to postpone answering that question for a couple of years. Anyone who peruses a time-table of the West Shore Road will notice that its stations are at little hamlets which have neither business nor population. Newburg, Kingston and Syracuse are the only important cities it enters or passes through on its road to Buffalo. It has a branch to Rochester and is a mile and a-half away from Utica. But it is a well built road, will command its share of through traffic, and will get a large summer business to the Catskills and from the southwest to the north. In time it will doubtless build up a respectable local trade. I think Jay Gould is right in saying that the disasters which have overtaken this road will put a stop to the paralleling of existing lines for the next twenty years; but no new road should be constructed without the authorization of a board of government engineers. But then, to save the country from a monopoly of the existing lines, freight and passenger charges should be fixed by law upon the arbitration of disinterested railway commissioners.

INTERVIEWER—Let us change the subject. What judgment are you prepared to pass on Congress so far as it has gone?

SIR O.—The Democratic majority in the House will not be able to present the free trade, or rather revenue, reform issue to the country. The protectionist Democrats and conservatives, with the Republicans, will outvote the revenue reformers when the matter is finally presented to the House. There will be no possibility, therefore, for making the issue without smashing the Democratic organization, which is not likely to be done with the Presidential election a few months off. This fact, and the opposition of the spoils Democrats to civil service reform, renders the Presidential election doubtful. The Republican party has had a bad record of late years, and the Democratic party has nothing to offer in the way of reforming abuses or improving business. The political outlook to me is as unsatisfactory as is the financial situation.

INTERVIEWER—Will not the foundations of a new and better party be laid? Surely the country will not be subjected to a choice between two evils?

SIR O.—It is this which troubles me. The country has got to be so very large, and the interests of the several sections so diverse, that united party action becomes more difficult and insincere at each recurring election. Here is the Democratic party, with its irreconcilable protectionist and free trade wings. The Republican party is absolutely without principle. It is not a unit upon any live question. It is unanimous only on the question of polygamy, where it caters to a prejudice that has no more relation to living issues than the politics of the moon. The longer the nation lives the more difficult it will be to get united party action upon a definite platform. Without party responsibility corruption will reign in all the departments of government.

INTERVIEWER—What measures would you suggest for correcting this state of things?

SIR O.—I know of nothing better than Gambetta's scheme for reforming the politics of France. Let at least half the House of Representatives be chosen from groups of States or upon a general ticket voted for by the whole nation and the rest from single districts. This would give us statesmen interested in the nation and not in the petty localities they came from. Our present state of affairs leads to log rolling and corruption. The member for the Mississippi Valley wants the great Father of Waters improved, but he votes against the Hennipen Canal, the improvement of the Atlantic and Pacific harbors, and will not favor the appropriation of a dollar for a navy or merchant marine. The seaboard representatives are opposed to internal improvements and thus the "shrieks of locality" drowns the voice of the nation. This is why the politics of France has become a bye-word in Europe, and it is also one of the vices of our national system. This might be corrected were we to have a national convention to alter the constitution, but the various appeals to the country to call such a convention have so far been unheeded. Nothing but a national catastrophe of appalling magnitude will lead to the adoption of a better political machinery. We did not become a nation or have a national banking system until after a bloody civil war, and I look for serious disturbances in the immediate future, due to our maladjusted political system.

INTERVIEWER—Again change the subject. How about the financial outlook?

SIR O.—Anything but reassuring. We depend absolutely upon our agricultural productions to pay for foreign goods. It was abundant crops and the high prices they brought which gave us the boom from 1879 to 1881. Our crops are now much smaller and there is no demand for them. Wheat is a drug in all the markets of the world, and cotton is not much better. Exchange is consequently stiffening and you will begin to hear talk of a possible drain of gold. Should that occur and assume any magnitude look out for the deluge.

Suggested Terminal Improvements and the Alternatives.

A Third avenue horse car, going up town, was stopped at the corner of Grand street by one of the cross-town cars standing in the way. In front of this obstacle was another obstructed car of the same line, and a third car was just drawing up in the rear. To the passengers on the Third avenue car the cause of the detention was quickly visible. The stoppage was due to a coal cart backed up against the curb, a short distance from the corner on Grand street, to be relieved of its load, and the horse stood with his nose projecting a few inches over the line of the tracks. The coal cart did not seem to give down very freely, and the driver, a playful fellow, was engaged in patting encouragingly the back of the stoker who, with his shovel, was endeavoring to direct the current of coal into the shute under the sidewalk. The operation proved to be very laborious, and before it was completed about one dozen horse cars going up, down or across town, and thrice that number of vehicles of other kinds, stood awaiting the denouement. The incident is only mentioned for the purpose of illustrating scenes to be witnessed in other sections of the city. No passenger on the University place cars, unless unreasonably sanguine, expects to pass through the dry-goods district on Church street during the busy hours of the day without finding himself blockaded at least once in a line of perhaps a dozen cars, all awaiting the delivery or removal of a single dray load of merchandise in front of one of the wholesale warehouses. We do a large business in New York, but the amount seems quadrupled by the lack of system which distinguishes our methods of local transportation and freight handling.

We hear a great deal about terminal facilities in this city, but, as a matter of fact, the subject of an economical and free system of handling goods seems never to have been studied at all. We adhere to the most primitive horse and hand cart methods, locate our storage and wholesale warehouses and railroad freight depots far away from the water front, in the most improper places, and perform an amount of manual labor altogether disproportioned to the results achieved. It is not becoming in the United States to admit that any inconvenience or evil which springs from a want of invention, or the adaptation of means to end, is necessary. Had the rear of the coal cart which blockaded traffic on Third avenue and Grand street, for example, been provided with some sort of attachment which would have conducted the coal directly into the cellar, the driver could have found no excuse for the feeling of evident satisfaction with which he contemplated the vexatious delay that he was causing on the streets, and the cost of the labor of the coal shoveler might have been saved. This was the reflection of one of the blockaded passengers.

Still, habit will adapt us to almost anything; and we could endure the inconveniences that spring from our primitive methods of shifting merchandise were it not for the material losses which they inflict on the city. Twenty years ago it was a common spectacle to witness all along the East River water front great ocean-going ships lying one alongside of the other in two or three banks. Now, at this moment of writing, there are barely more than a dozen ship-rigged craft to be found between the Battery and the sectional docks. We shall be told that this decadence in the East River shipping is due to the more general use of iron steamships for ocean transportation, concentrating commerce along the North River piers. But during the time that the East River piers have been falling into comparative disuse more than two miles of Brooklyn improved water front, very productive to the owners, have sprung into being, the cotton docks on Staten Island have been completed, miles of wharf room on the Kill Von Kull provided, and nearly all that remained of the available west bank of the Hudson River has been turned to the service of commerce. "Get out of this, we want your room," is the prompt injunction of the Brooklyn dock master to the ship's officer who has just seen the last of his cargo discharged on the wharf; and if the captain is not himself pressed for time his best alternative will be found in crossing the river and tying up at a New York pier, where he may lie unmolested during a whole season. Is this difference in the demand for wharf room caused by the superior cheapness of the Brooklyn property? The East River water front on the New York side of the stream, renting already at very low figures, begins to look as if it might soon be had for the asking, and the appearance of the neighborhood suggests that it would be dear even on those terms. These piers have been deserted and are falling into ruin simply because they offer no facilities for warehousing heavy merchandise. The dray system, peculiar to New York, among the cities surrounding the bay, has its limit of usefulness. It is necessary to draw the line somewhere; and shippers have decided that it shall be drawn on hogsheads of sugar, molasses and tobacco, bales of cotton or jute, tons of iron, cargoes of wheat, flour, bacon and all other unwieldy articles which go to swell the total of commercial exchange.

In former articles in THE RECORD AND GUIDE a plan for improving the terminal machinery of this city by constructing warehouses on piers over the river streets was suggested. This suggestion was made, of course, on the idea that those streets form the principal obstruction to the convenient handling of freight, but could it be shown that the obstruction can be removed while preserving the streets in their present form, half the objection to their existence would disappear. The Engineer in Chief of the Dock Department, Mr. George S. Greene, Jr., has discovered the great disadvantage of a want of direct connection between the piers and warehouses, and with a view to remedy the evil, he has made plans for elevated railways leading from the outer extremity of each pier to warehouses located on the opposite side of the street. The first objection to this plan seems to be fatal. Except in a few localities, no warehouses are located on the opposite side of the streets, and the elevated ways would, therefore, be of no service. If their construction, however, would stimulate the building of warehouses along the streets, they would be of incalculable service. The system could be extended until it comprises also an elevated railway exclusively for freight, running parallel with the river along the entire water front, and if thought advisable, the street could be covered by a platform, adding greatly to the superficial surface available for handling freight. But this plan, even if it proved powerful enough to give us a water front system of warehouses, would still be open to the objection of a great sacrifice of space. New York is a small city in area with great expectations touching the future of her population and commerce, and every inch of available surface not needed for communication or breathing places should be utilized for building purposes. The sacrifice of a space 250 feet broad by many miles in length would make a heavy draft on the future resources of the city. Indeed, Mr. Greene's plan would probably prove to be only the plan for spanning the streets in process of evolution, for warehouses once located along the river streets would soon creep over the obstruction and align themselves near the bulkhead where they belong. In this case, the only question to consider in advance would refer to the need of both an elevated and surface railroad for the purposes of freight transportation. The surface road would probably always remain more than sufficient, and there will never be room for passenger trains along the water front in New York.

There are three courses open to the city in the treatment of its water front question. First, it can disentangle the legal complications through which improvement is checked by coming into possession of all the property fronting on the river streets. This might be thought a transaction of startling magnitude; but it would add nothing to the tax levy, since the property would remain productive in the hands of the city, and subject, during the progress of improvement, to a rapid increment in value, the profits of the final resale of the property might be made more than equal to the total of the city debt. The second course would be found in encouraging the formation of a syndicate which could purchase both public and private titles and make improvements in accordance with plans stipulated in advance. Here, again, there would be found a large inducement of profit, and we could be certain that the work of improvement would be honestly and economically prosecuted. This plan, too, would have the advantage of withdrawing nothing, even temporarily, from the total of all taxable property in the city, a consideration which might or might not be thought of much importance. The third plan is to drift, to fight the tiger of legal complications in a small and yet very expensive way, and to see the commerce of the city distributed to other shores. Guided, like the feet of Patrick Henry, by the lamp of experience, this last plan, is what a prophetic soul would be likely to anticipate. But in this case a glance at a coast survey map of the harbor and a good railroad map of New York and its vicinity will teach us where commerce will be certain to next spread its wings. The remaining unoccupied water front, offering deep navigable water on New York Bay, is found on the prolongation of South Brooklyn around to the Narrows, and along the north and east shore of Staten Island. Here, in fact, is about the only easily accessible water front remaining to private enterprise, and the people concerned are at present showing no disposition to neglect their opportunities.

The city of New York is doing its best to encourage their efforts.

The iron trade is reported to be better than it has been for a year past, which, if true, ought to be an indication of better general business to come. It may be a superstition which regards with such anxiety the price of iron, yet it is nevertheless a fact that when that metal is in demand business is good and stocks advance.

The State Board of Assessors are right, for income tax is the only solution of the problem of how to make millionaires contribute their share to the public burdens. The Astors pay five times more in taxes than the Jay Goulds and Vanderbilts in proportion to their wealth, because their investments are in real estate and not in stocks and bonds. It would not, perhaps, be wise to tax personal property as such, for then New York might drive its business away to rival cities, but real estate should not be saddled with all the costs of government, nor should all our very rich escape doing their duty to the public.

The Commissioners to select and locate lands for public parks in the annexed district have made a report to the State Legislature which is full of valuable matter. No condensation we could make this week would do it justice. The report is accompanied by maps and explanatory data prepared by Mr. John Mullaly, the secretary, which explains the matter on hand fully. It will surprise many of our self-satisfied citizens to learn that the principal cities of Japan have larger and finer parks than New York. Tokio, for instance, has nearly 6,000 acres of park, or one acre for every 167 inhabitants. The Commissioners recommend six parks and two parkways. First, the Van Courtlandt estate of 1,000 acres, 60 of which is a lake; second, the Bronx River park, situated on either side of that stream and between West Farms and Williamsbridge, comprising 653 acres. This is a spot of rare beauty. Cretona Park is the name chosen for the Bathgate Woods, 135 acres, between One Hundred and Seventieth and One Hundred and Seventy-fifth streets; this is the proposed location for a Zoological Garden. St. Mary Park, 25½ acres, in Morrisania, and Claremont Park, 39 acres, a short distance from Highbridge, are also recommended. Pelham Bay Park embraces 1,700 acres, having a shore line of nine miles, is also strongly urged. Then the Bronx and Pelham parkway, a broad boulevard, will unite the two large parks, while a similar parkway will join the Bronx and Van Courtlandt parks. The total of the parks will amount to 3,800 acres of land, which will cost about $2,000 an acre if secured at once. The bill accompanying the report empowers the Supreme Court to appoint commissioners to secure these parks. For the present the lands selected will require no improvement beyond being enclosed and some few carriage-ways and foot paths established. The Legislature would do well to reorganize the Central Park Commission before charging the old board with new responsibilities. The reorganized board should consist of men of high character, and the number increased to seven.

Still another city park has been suggested, this time by President Wales of the Park Department. He proposes to locate one hundred acres on the west side of the Harlem River, the southern boundary of which would be One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street; the park running along the banks of the river to Fort George, taking in what is now known as Highbridge Park. This region is already a great popular resort in the summer time, it is practically useless for building purposes, but has rare beauty of natural scenery. This region should be the Richmond Hill of New York. If this project is carried out, the new pleasure ground will be known as Higbbridge Park.

Our New York College.

Mayor Edson, in his recent message, criticized the expenditure n ade upon the New York and Normal Colleges, complaining that it was not the right thing to pay for a superior education being given to a few young men and women, when the primary schools were over crowded and many poor children unable to get the rudiments of a common school education. In this the Mayor but echoes the complaints made in several newspapers, notably the Sun. Undoubtedly the original organization of the New York College was a mistake. It should never have undertaken to educate the young men in Greek and Latin or prepare them for professional life. The institution should have aimed to do what Peter Cooper attempted in his well designed Union. It should have cultivated the arts, which had direct relation to industry, and given every boy a chance to secure a good technical education. Had this been done we would not have had to rely upon foreign mechanics to do the best and most artistic work in our shops and manufactories. The girls Normal School is open to no such criticism. It trains teachers, the great bulk of whom are women. Some three hundred young women are graduated yearly, thoroughly educated in the work of instructing the rising generation. True, they do not all become teachers, for the supply is greater than the demand, but the training they get is an advantage to them as heads of families. The New York College has taken a new departure lately, which, if fully carried out, will remove the objection now made against that institution. It has opened a workshop for training the most deserving students in wood and metal work. One hundred and twenty-five scholars work three and four extra hours weekly in this shop, and have made great progress. The writer paid a visit to the college last week, and found President Webb earnestly engaged in directing the work in the shop. It seems the boys are eager to enter this work school so as to train themselves for technical trades, but as yet the establishment is limited in size and does not begin to supply the room or the work called for by the students. There is a fine laboratory connected with this college, but it is under the charge of a professor who has more reputation than good sense. The laboratory is used only three hours a week, when it should be constantly employed. There ought to be some machinery by which flighty professors can be disciplined or retired, but we have nothing in this country corresponding to the Royal Commissioners, who in England periodically visit the public schools and point out deficiences in the management and shortcomings in the professors. If a person has written a book, delivered lectures or made himself conspicuous in a public way, it does not follow that he is therefore a competent teacher. Something should be done to put the laboratory in the New York College in charge of a professor who has the practical knowledge to make it useful to the students. General Webb's West Point education has been of peculiar advantage to the institution in its scientific departments. No school in the country is comparable to it in the attention given to mechanical and free-hand drawing, natural science and mathematics. The teaching of Greek and Latin should be stopped in this institution, and some of the features of the foreign technical schools adopted. The college should turn out decorators, designers, master mechanics, chemists, in short, the training should be for industry in its higher departments. We boast of our public schools in this country, but we are shamefully behind Europe in facilities for acquiring an art and industrial education. When there is no more Greek and Latin taught and the College of New York becomes one of industry, there will no longer be any complaint of the institution now so admirably conducted by President Alexander S. Webb.

What an Ex-Mayor Says.

Ex-Mayor Smith Ely, Jr., is disposed to take a hopeful view of the real estate situation. Tenement house rents may come down, Mr. Ely thinks, but then they ought to be cheaper. There are many low-priced newly-built tenements in Harlem, which might relieve the pressure from the crowded neighborhoods down-town. It is his opinion that the working people of New York were never so well off as during 1883. They got high wages, while everything they consume is cheaper than ever before. The large additions made to the savings banks told the story of their prosperity.

"But, Mr. Ely, will there be as much activity in real estate and as many houses built in the coming as during the past two years?" asked our representative.

"I do not believe," was the reply, "that any desirable property will go begging. Real estate is said to be active when lots out of the line of improvement are bought and sold on speculation, but this does not constitute a healthy market. The city is growing, building will continue, and it will be all the better if this natural growth is unaccompanied by feverish advances in prices."

"What kind of houses do you think will be most in demand?"

"I suppose that for the present we have had enough apartment houses built for a year or two to come. There have been very few houses constructed for families of moderate means, and I should judge that those in the market would be in demand this spring for renting purposes."

"But," asked the writer, "were not builders wise in not constructing houses that would rent from $800 to $2,500? Does not the opening of the Brooklyn bridge and the prospective construction of elevated roads in that city make it certain that there will be an abundance of houses for people of moderate means across the East River?"

"I have always thought," said the ex-Mayor, "that there was a power behind which aimed at the construction of a bridge that would feed some railway system connecting the two cities. The bridge is practically a failure for vehicles and foot passengers. Its true value will be understood when it becomes the nexus between the local steam railway systems of New York and Brooklyn. The latter city is admirably situated to supply cheap homes for an industrial population. There is ample room and verge enough to grow in every direction but one, and there is an abundance of available lots underlaid by a gravelly and sandy soil, and therefore healthy, which can be bought for two hundred dollars each. It is Brooklyn which is to be the home of our working, and what may be called our lower middle class, population. On the whole, I am hopeful about the real estate outlook. Realty has had no boom. There has been no speculation. Money is plentiful, and hence the conditions do not exist for any serious break in prices. Rents may come down somewhat, especially in tenement property, but this would be an advantage to the whole community."

A New Book on Real Estate.

Real estate is indeed becoming, as it must, the most important species of property in which we deal, and with that in view it is desirable that all who buy and sell and deal in it should understand all about it; hence such a comprehensive book of brief, clear statements like that of Prof. Tiedemann, of the Law Department of the University of the State of Missouri, should be in the hands of all of our readers. He calls his book an Elementary Treatise on the American Law of Real Property. He has cut away and omitted a large part of the technical and seemingly arbitrary and unreasonable rules of the law of real estate, and has given its principles with a statement of their rational and historical sources in a way that men who are not lawyers can readily understand them. The author's conclusions are sound, and his statements uniformly correct. We note that the late decision of our Court of Appeals in the case of Bartles vs. Nunan, 92 N. Y., deciding that a deed to a man and his wife gives them an estate by the entirety in this State since 1848, just as it always did before that, had not reached Prof. Tiedemann when this book was printed. The case of Meeker vs. Wright, cited under § 242, which was apparently the law here when he wrote, has been over-ruled.

When the author comes to talk about deeds, a topic to which he gives eighty-three pages (chapter XXII.), it is interesting to note how different are his views from those of our New York Land Transfer Reform Association; however, that is hardly a fair statement, for Mr. Tiedemann is not stating his own views, but only very correctly the law as it is. A complete revulsion is shown in the fact that according to the common law (before the passage of the Statute of Frauds in England) signing a deed was unnecessary; all that was needed was a seal; while the Reform Association propose to do away with the formal seal altogether. The book is well printed and bound, a credit to the publishers; and is, we repeat, a very succinct, clear, readable statement of that branch of the law.

Concerning Men and Things.

"Gabriel Conroy" was dramatized by the wife of W. S. Andrews. The latter gentleman, by the way, has had a somewhat varied experience. He is the son of the Puntarch, Stephen Pearl Andrews. Mr. W. S. Andrews was in early life a comedian, and a good one at that. For some years past he has been a lawyer and legislator, and the constitutional amendment to secure home rule was proposed by him. He has represented Mr. S. J. Tilden and ex-Mayor Cooper in many business and legal transactions.

Edwin Booth's failure at the Star Theatre was well deserved. He was welcomed cordially and had full houses at first, but there was so much parsimony in the scenery, and such bad acting in the company, that old playgoers declined to attend the later representations. It must be mortifying to an actor of Mr. Booth's standing to play to empty benches from the same stage where Irving drew crowded audiences at double prices. In many parts Mr. Booth is the most popular actor, but of late years theatre goers have been trained to something better than the old "Star" system, and expect the ensemble to be at least respectable.

It is not creditable to our amusement public that Mrs. Langtry has been so successful during her recent engagement at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. It is true the play was interesting and the support excellent. But Mrs. Langtry is not, and never will be, an actress. The curiosity which gave her thronged houses on her first appearance was at least comprehensible. She came here with the glamor of being a great court beauty and a favorite in a society composed of princes and nobles. But her vulgar and ostentatious flirtations with a horsey and silly young fellow should have dissipated whatever romance was connected with her early life. There are plenty of better actresses than she who cannot get an engagement, while her personal charms have been altogether overrated.

Sorosis, at its recent dinner at Delmonico's, dispensed with the use of wine. On the same evening two hundred real estate dealers and brokers, with their friends, partook of a dinner in Chicago at which no stronger drink was permitted than cider. That a ladies' club should be content with coffee is not surprising, but the abstention of Chicago brokers and agents was, to say the least, unusual. When are the real estate dealers of New York to have their first dinner, and when it takes place will they follow the example of Sorosis and their fellow-professionals of the City of the Lakes?

Mr. Charles Buek, President of the Real Estate Owners and Building Association, says that at the meeting of the joint committee of five building societies, at the Ashland House, held a week ago Thursday, that his society together with the Mechanics' and Traders' Exchange, were in accord that a provision must be inserted in the proposed new building law, that there should be a right of appeal where a builder or owner considered himself aggrieved by the decison of the Superintendent of Buildings, and while these two societies favored the bill generally, they would oppose any bill which does not contain this provision.

Home Decorative Notes.

—At the present time many signs of a revival are presenting themselves, and art is now much better understood in the refined and intellectual life of this country, a certain knowledge of pictures, architecture, statuary and of music is indispensable to those who desire to share in the culture of the day.

—The delicate pink satin straw baskets, filled with pink carnations, are popular for German favors.

—A new caprice in the way of decoration, and though the article chosen to work upon seems strange indeed, the result obtained is quite a happy one; take a pine wood pail of ordinary size and line throughout with silk or satin of some bright color, paint upon the outside sprays of flowers or branches of fruit. The handle should be formed of silk cord or ribbon finished with loops or tassels, this trifle serves effectually for holding papers or fancy work.

—Holland hyacinths are very satisfactory for house plants, remaining in bloom at least two weeks; those who have their sashes lined with pink, salmon, dark blue and red hyacinths have indeed a window garden

—A stroll through the rooms of the Gorham Company, of Union Square and Seventeenth street, affords convincing proof that luxury has no want of ways to ally itself to utility; most exquisite tea-sets of hammered work in copper and brass, decorated with salamanders over the outer surface in silver and gold, bronze lamp vases, wonderful in style and workmanship, coffee, chocolate and ice cream spoons of every possible design. The harlequin spoons in copper tints, each differing from the other, are quite new and very much admired.

—Sheet and pillow shams, embroidered in colored silks, are among the highest novelties.

—The growing taste for art brings forth very great improvement in table decoration, the latest freak is to have the flowers laid simply in a line upon the table cloth. Madras muslin, finished with a lace edge, is laid over the cloth through the centre of the table, the very delicate flowers' in blues, pinks and greens produce a wonderfully happy and pleasing effect.

—Round boxes covered with embossed or illuminated leather and lined with red silk, form very pretty paper holders.

—Wonderful delicacy in quality is noticed in some of the new and exquisite pieces of Royal Worcester ware, vases of the finest perfection in perforated work with enameled colors, and dull and colored gold beautifully jewelled. A fine effect in another style has the design, in raised gold and colors, of birds, fruit and clustering wild roses or other flowers on a body of ivory tone. A very choice selection of v ses and dainty treasures for artistic cabinets was recently shown by Wilhelm & Graef, of Broadway and Twenty-sixth street.

—Very elegant bonbon boxes are composed of the dark red wood shades of ivory, with lids of oxidized silver and antique designs in repousse work.

—Work baskets of fine willow-ware, in gilded or silver bronze effects, and lined with some bright-colored silk, with a band of satin ribbon passing through the handles and tied in the centre with a large bow, are extremely pretty and attractive.

—Banish from the drawing-room all hard, stiff chairs, however artistic, allow comfort to be the first consideration. The Woodstock chair of mahogany and upholstered in any shade of plush you may desire, is a very attractive and odd style. At the rooms of Baumann Bros., of 22 East Fourteenth street, was noticed varied and beautiful designs of odd chairs, richly carved bed-room sets and highly ornamental drawing-room furniture.

—The narcissus blossoms, enriched by a wealth of ferny fronds drooping gracefully downward, form a rich and very elegant screen panel.

—Painting upon polished wood is one of the most effective methods of decoration, pear, oak, pine and mahogany are the woods most used; appropriate designs for window spaces are primroses, lilacs, lilies or any tall-growing plants, while for door panels plants which are large and straggling should be chosen, reeds are very good with birds' nests built upon them, while the tiny warblers are seen hovering about, hollyhocks are also very much favored.

—A handsome fire screen is of translucent glass, decorated with natural ferns and fall leaves pressed between two layers of glass, while a brilliant crimson and black butterfly is seen fluttering around.

—The common splint rocker may be greatly improved by fitting a cushion at the back of the chair, and covering it with olive-green felt, outlined with the sun flower design; fasten it on the chair with bright yellow and olive-green satin bows and loops of ribbon; make a cushion for the seat of the same material and design and fasten it on in like manner.

—Cretonne of the soft creamy ground, with clusters of roses, bluebells and bright-colored butterflies fluttering about, is exceedingly pretty for bureau covers; blue or black velvet sewn about the edge, and with the addition of soft lace, forms a very pretty finish.

—The bright-colored Japanese parasols partially opened and caught together with bright ribbons, are very pretty for catch-alls.

—Art throughout the world during the past fifty years has been one of constant advancement, it is noticed, in the departments of both painting and sculpture. Some very important and valuable examples of renowned artists and sculptors was recently noticed at the art gallery of Miss S. J. Gibbons, No. 1160 Broadway. An original Teniers, called "Out of Door Sports," claims the age of two hundred years, and is valued at $3,000. Two exquisite flower pictures of pansies and Lady Washington geranium are from the hands of the popular French artist, De Longpre; some exquisite pieces of statuary are by Turini—one, entitled "The First Step," is remarkable for its delicacy of treatment.

A Better Outlook for Building.

Our reporters find an improved feeling existing amongst architects and builders since the first week in the year. The offices of the former have been characterized by dullness for several months past. New plans have been few and far between, and those who were at all occupied were engaged on work in progress, commenced during the earlier part of the past year. A large number of owners of vacant lots desire to make their land productive and thus avoid the burden of taxation which now lies so heavily upon them. Hence architects and builders report that a good deal of "talk" is under way, and in several instances building operations are promised. Property holders who for years have postponed improving their lots now speak of doing so, while many alterations and other improvements are anticipated. The workmen, who were somewhat of an obstacle to building last fall, are now less independent, and while good men ask and obtain good wages, those less competent have yielded to the inevitable, and have "come down a peg." A down-town builder, in a talk with one of our reporters, stated that the men preferred to leave the Union when they found that its rules interfered with their means of livelihood. "It was all very well sticking to the Union," they said, "but the Union did not support them and their family, and if they found that by obeying its regulations they would starve themselves, then they would have nothing to do with it and make the best terms they could with their employers." It will be recollected that The Record and Guide was the first to advise the workmen to adopt a conciliatory policy, as they were only frightening off capitalists from investing in building operations, and so cutting their own throats. They have now learned this from sad experience, and are in the majority of cases willing to get work wherever they can obtain it. Trades unions sometimes exercise a useful function in society, but they must be conducted with prudence and wisdom. They should act on the principle that the interests of the employers and employed are one, and that whatever hurts the one harms the other. Another factor has been the high price of building material. But, as a down-town architect told one of our reporters, if 150,000 brick are required for a building it only makes a difference of several hundred dollars on the total cost of the structure, and when this calculation was put before his client, the latter saw the absurdity of waiting for lower prices and made up his mind at once to go ahead. It is evident that the number of building operations will show an increase during the next few months, but it is too early yet to predict more than a moderately active spring. One thing is certain, however. Capitalists are beginning to learn that it is much safer and generally more profitable to invest in real estate than to put their money in stocks and bonds.

Mining stocks have had something of a boom during the past two weeks. Bodie led the advance. This mine is as singular in its formation as it has been unique in its management. Four times have veins of very rich ore been discovered on its various levels. The stock has on each discovery surged up to very high figures. It has fluctuated between twenty-five cents and fifty dollars. Its management has always been unscrupulous. As soon as a rich vein of ore was discovered an assessment was levied, and every means taken to depress the stock. Manipulation was always resorted to to boom the quotations as soon as the ore was worked out. If it is true that liars will finally find themselves in the lake of fire and brimstone, the managers of this property will not have many cold days after leaving this world. Bodie lies just south of the famous Standard mine. The latter has been a splendid and steadily paying property. It seems that the gold veins in the Standard became broken and richer on entering the Bodie. The rise in Bulwer stock was entirely unwarranted. All that Bulwer owns is a mill; the mine itself is regarded as practically worthless, though at one time it had a streak of two hundred dollar ore. The recent strikes in the Bodie district have been in the upper levels. On the whole, however, mining speculation is still under a cloud, but the rapid rise in Bodie stock shows that were there real development on the Comstock, another wild mining speculation would soon be under way.

The Real Estate Exchange is settling down to steady work. The site has been bought and paid for, a general committee on legislation has been appointed, and the standing committees are employed in organizing the various bureaus and in adopting regulations governing the Exchange The directors have secured handsome offices in the Duncan building, which will be occupied until suitable quarters are secured in their own Exchange site. The rents of the present tenants of the buildings in Liberty street will accrue to the Exchange after the 1st of February. They will amount to more than the running expenses of the institution, and when No. 65 Liberty street is rebuilt and the auction room fairly under way the income will be sufficient to pay handsome dividends in addition to the current expenses. It is proposed to keep on record descriptive lists of property from all parts of the country. Should any of the brokers connected with the Exchange be able to find a market for this out-of-town real estate they will share commissions with the Exchange.

Mr. H. H. Cammann says he approves in the main with the views of the director of the Real Estate Exchange who was interviewed in last week's Record and Guide. The director in question, however, understated one point. He spoke of the Exchange having only $70,000 at the end of the year after paying for its property. He forgot that the rentals commenced on February 1, and would by the close of the year amount to a larger sum than that mentioned by the director as possible expenses. Very few of the subscribers had sold their seats, perhaps not more than thirty in all. But in every case those who purchased the certificates were first-class people, men with means and character. Since the Exchange was organized Mr. Ludlow had received letters from all parts of the country from persons who wished to buy or sell improved lands and large estates in widely separate States and Territories. It had been suggested to some of the directors that the Exchange should have a list of reputable brokers doing business in all parts of the United States. They could send on their lists of properties for sale to be kept on record at the New York Exchange for would-be purchasers. The fees for furnishing this accommodation would of course accrue to the Exchange.

The Mutual Life Building.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

SIR—Mr. Clinton, the architect of the Mutual Life building, in the letter published in your number of January 19th inst., with reference to the criticism in the preceding number on that building, says that you neglected to consider the relation of height to diameter in the piers—the brick piers, he explains, are one and one-half diameters in height, and the granite piers seven and one-quarter; "therefore the long piers are proportionately weaker than the short piers below them, and require a proportionately stronger material to obtain the same strength, and these matters have been adjusted by calculation."

It seems that the whole pier, brick substructure and granite superstructure together, would have to be considered, constructionally, as one member in relation to its stability. But, waiving that, the stability of a pier depends upon its resistance to a load that will crush it, or to a load that will buckle (bend) it. According to the best authorities these two forces are equal when the pier is twelve diameters high.* When higher than twelve diameters the load which will bend it is less than the load which will crush it, and in that case a computation is necessary wherein the relation of diameter and length is a factor. But this is not the case when a pier is less than twelve diameters high. Then the sectional area of the pier and the safe load the material will carry are alone the elements to be considered.

The safe load for good brickwork is one-fifth of that which may be imposed upon cut granite. Is the area of the brick piers five times as great as that of the granite piers which they carry? Respectfully,

ENGINEER.

* Hurst, p. 52. According to Hodgkinson, Box and others, "Formulas for Iron Columns, 12 to 15 diameters."

A Remarkable Forecast.

The following article, which appeared in THE RECORD AND GUIDE over three years ago, is certainly a most unusually correct prophecy of a future occurrence. In this article we foretold to a letter what has since taken place in the stocks and bonds of the Northern Pacific Road. It is so minutely accurate that it seems incredible, but we invite subscribers to look over their files and if they have not any of their own to come and see the article in THE RECORD AND GUIDE office. We believe now what we said then, that the stock of the Northern Pacific Road is worthless and the property must some time go into the hands of a receiver. The first mortgage bonds must be scaled, as the road for years to come cannot pay running expenses. But here is the article:

[From THE RECORD AND GUIDE Dec. 11, 1880.]

Then look at the Northern Pacific Railroad. Has it not been from the start the most doubtful of all the enterprises of the age? Granted that there are some excellent wheat lands in the Red River valley; conceding that as we near the Pacific coast there is timber and arable soil of potential value, still the fact remains there are vast uninhabitable spaces which are without minerals and useless for any productive purposes. Then even the good lands are unsettled. True, there is a show of activity in the stock; but this is due to the sales of land which must in time become exhausted, to the work of the road itself in laying tracks and the opening of some few farms. But this will not support a railroad permanently. There is nothing more certain than that the $40,000,000 which is to be subscribed will be an almost total loss to the investors.

But, says a credulous investor, "see the respectable banking houses which are in this North Pacific syndicate. Surely they would not countenance a scheme which will eventually injure their patrons."

The business of a banker is to buy cheap and sell dear, the same as any other merchant or broker. The immense fortunes of banking houses are built up from the profits they make in inducing investors to purchase bonds at high prices which cost them very little. The Panama Canal bubble and the Northern Pacific bubble will neither of them burst until long after the bonds are sold. The close of the year 1881 will see the bonds and shares all marketed, and then the bankers will then disavow all responsibility for the future. Jay Cooke reaped the first harvest from the crop of fools who went into the Northern Pacific at the termination of the war. The second crop of unwise investors will be exploited by the very respectable bankers who formed the syndicate to place the $40,000,000 of new bonds. It is not improbable but there will be a third and a fourth crop to be fleeced, for it must be remembered that this has been the experience of nearly all the great transportation lines of the country. The Northwest has been reorganized three times, and yet the road ran through a much more settled country even at first than the Northern Pacific is likely to do for the next twenty years. Then look at the history of the Iron Mountain, of the Kansas Pacific, of the Fort Wayne, the Union Pacific and the Wabash, all of which were in every way more promising properties than the Northern Pacific can be for a generation. And, yet, it is easy to see that the Northern Pacific syndicate will be successful. Their inside price will probably be from 60 to 75. They will sell to the jobbers at from 90 to 95. The innocent investors will take them between that figure and par. All will go well for three or four years—the road will be completed—then will come the failure to pay interest, foreclosure proceedings, reorganization, more bonds, to be followed by another failure further along and another reorganization, the investing public the victim every time, the great contractors, manipulators and bankers reaping the rich harvest. If, in this connection, our readers would take up Poor's Manual since it was first published, and carefully follow the history of every railroad company west of the Alleghanies, they will find that we are justified in our forecasts of the future history of this road.

Of course, what we have said above will not be heeded. These bankers are powerful, and their advertisements will secure them the co-operation of the press. It is really no one's interest to protect the public, for the small bankers will aid the larger ones, expecting to get their one or two per cent. in the placing of the bonds. Those who speculate in them will expect to get out before the deluge comes.

Of course, in time even the Northern Pacific will pay, but certainly not in our generation. The country will become more and more settled, local and through traffic will increase, and then feeders will be built and connections made which will make it a profitable road, but certainly not this side of 1900.

Realty at Albany.

ALBANY, January 24.

The bill for the revision and remodelling of the building laws for New York city has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Daly. It has the same number of sections as that presented by Mr. Browning last year, which was known as the Esterbrook bill. This has many new provisions, retaining, however, most of those in last year's bill. It appears to be more satisfactory to the Mechanics exchange, builders associations and the other organizations. It is Esterbrook's measure, with additions and enlargements. One of the important additions is the transformation of the fortieth section from increasing the power of the Bureau of Buildings in the Fire Department to its abolition and transfer to a new and separate department of the city government, to be known as the Department of Buildings, and the placing of the entire enforcement of the law in the hands of that department. It provides for the appointment of the head of this new department, who shall be known as Superintendent of Buildings, by the Mayor within twenty days after the passage of the act, to serve for three years at a salary of $5,000. It gives him a deputy, and the necessary inspectors and clerks. The Fire Commissioners are required to turn over to the Superintendent as soon as appointed all papers, documents and books used by the Bureau for Inspection of Buildings in that department.

There are several other important changes and additions to the bill from that of last year regulating the erection of buildings, of interest not only to builders but property-holders. In the fourth section there is inserted a paragraph which provides that whenever the excavations for building or other purposes shall be carried to the depth of more than ten feet below the curb at the place where there shall be a party wall on adjoining lot standing upon or near the boundary lines of such lot, the person causing the excavations to be made, if furnished the necessary license to enter upon the adjoining land and not otherwise, shall at all times, from the commencement to, until the completion of such excavation at his own expense, preserve such walls from injury, and so support it that it shall remain as stable as before the excavations were commenced.

A new provision is inserted in the eighth section, which gives the Superintendent of Buildings power to prohibit the building upon stone or other walls in freezing weather, or until thaw, and then rebuilt if injured by the frost. It provides that in all cases of dispute between the builder and the Superintendent of Buildings as to the extent of the injury and condition of any frozen wall, the progress of which has been suspended by the Superintendent, the owner or builder may notify the architect and masons who are members of the Board of Examiners, to survey such walls; and if one of them concurs with the judgment of the Superintendent, his order shall stand confirmed, but if both non-concur the Superintendent shall revoke his order to suspend work.

There is a new provision inserted in the sixteenth section, which provides that the Superintendent of Buildings shall, by and with the approval of the Board of Examiners, make uniform regulations for the periodical inspection of passenger elevators, with a view to the safety of passengers, and shall also prescribe suitable qualifications for persons who are placed in charge of running elevators. The regulations so made shall require any repairs found necessary upon inspection to be made without delay. In case defects are found to exist which would endanger life by the continued use of such elevator, the use of such elevator shall cease upon notice from the Superintendent of Buildings, and shall not be again put in use until he furnishes a certificate that it has been put in safe order.

The provisions relative to the construction of theatres are more extensive than in last year's bill, and the requirements look more toward making them fire-proof.

There is a new provision inserted in the thirtieth section relative to drainage and plumbing of all buildings, both public and private, hereafter erected in the city, requiring the execution of the work in accordance with plans previously approved in writing, by the Board of Health. The drawings and description of the plumbing shall in each case be submitted and placed on file in the Health Department.

The Board of Examiners is enlarged under this bill by including one member of the Real Estate Owners and Builders Association, who, in conjunction with one member of the American Institute of Architects, one member of the Board of Underwriters, two members of the Mechanics and Traders Exchange, one a carpenter, the other a mason, and one member of the Society of Architectural Iron Manufacturers, are to constitute the Board of Examiners.

Most of the new provisions placed in last year's bill have been retained, in many instances enlarged upon to meet the requirements of the growth of the city, especially those in reference to flats and that class of structures.

The act to change the street opening law for the city, so as to prevent the opening of streets through the grounds around the Insane Asylum on the Bloomingdale road, has passed the Assembly, much to the disappointment of the owners of lots near the Morningside Park.

New parks appear to be the order of the day. Senator Murphy has introduced a bill for the Board of Street Openings to locate a park at Coenties slip. The bill does not determine the size or dimensions, nor say what property shall be taken.

Senator Campbell has introduced a bill for a park at Corlears Hook, the same dimension of that in the bill which he passed in the Assembly last year.

Mr. Clarke, who represents the two new wards in the city, has introduced a bill providing that all property holders who are in arrears for assessment for street openings may, if they pay the same before January 1, 1885, have the penalty reduced to six per cent. interest. He claims that there is about $4,000,000 of these arrears.

Senator Gibbs has introduced a bill to enlarge the market grounds on the Gansevoort property.

The controversy over the question of a general street railroad bill is to come up in a new form this year. The Railroad Commission has discovered the demand for new street railroads in the various cities of the State, and are preparing a bill to submit to the Legislature for the formation and the construction of street railroads. They are meeting with the same difficulties that the Legislature has found in its path. The existing street railroads are trying to have the commissioners frame the bill to suit their purposes and help them maintain the monopoly. Mr. Richardson, one of the owners of a street railroad in Brooklyn, has been before the commission to insist upon particular provisions, while Jacob Sharpe has had his lawyer hanging around the office of the commission for two or three days to get them to recommend provisions to suit his. It is from this source that the influence has been brought to bear that has secured the last two vetoes of the street railroad bill in the executive chamber.

The commission has two measures under consideration. One is to amend the Rapid Transit Act of 1875 by extending its provisions to horse or surface railroads, and the appointment of commissioners to locate the route and determine what streets shall be used. The other bill has the main provisions of that of last year. The Railroad Commission expects to make its report next week.

About Architects' Estimates.

NEW YORK, January 21, 1884.

Editor of THE RECORD AND GUIDE:

DEAR SIR—Reference being made in your last number to several buildings of ours as notable examples of the great actual cost of large buildings as compared with the original estimates of architects, we deem it right to utter a few words in defense of our much maligned profession. That as a rule buildings of any kind cost far more than was generally proposed, is an undoubted fact, but that architects or builders purposely under-estimate in order to induce their clients to commence building and thus secure a job, or that they know so little of their business as to be unable to give an approximately accurate estimate, would prove architects to be either knaves or fools, and we trust your knowledge of our profession has taught you that they are neither the one nor the other.

The fact of the case is, that a building, if erected strictly as designed and intended by a competent architect at the time the estimate is made, will very seldom cost more than the original estimates rendered to the owner, except in so far as the actual cost of labor or materials have changed between the time of estimating and the time of closing contracts. In our office, and in every well conducted office in this city, original estimates are made with the most conscientious care, and are based on actual sub-estimates from contractors, revised by our master of works and at least one member of our firm. It so happens, however, that the buildings actually constructed almost always differ in many essential points from that originally intended, and upon which the original estimates have been obtained. The Navarro buildings, for instance, as first projected by us, were to be comparatively plain, though thoroughly built and fire-proof structures, and could easily have been erected for the sum proposed if contracted for at once; the owners, however, as they realized the beauty of the site and the magnitude of the enterprise, thought it wise to erect the almost palatial structures now on the ground; the apartments, which were to be trimmed with pine, were finished in expensive cabinet work, and the floors made of polished hardwood, the sidewalks all around the block were excavated to form vaults and covered with granite slabs, in fact everything was done to make these buildings the most perfect, durable, convenient and elegant apartments in the world. This has been done, and though the cost is of course greater than first proposed, we unhesitatingly assert that no buildings of the same character could have been erected at the time the contracts were made (more than a year after the original estimates), at less cost with stricter economy; this needs no better proof than the fact that the four duplicate buildings now being erected, though having the advantage of being duplicated buildings, with the full experience acquired in the original structures and, though erected under the immediate superintendance of one of the most careful and experienced builders in this country, who is also a largely interested stockholder, will cost very little less than the original buildings that were built under contract. Nothing better could be done than to duplicate the original contracts. As regards the wisdom of the owner in erecting such expensive structures, we believe Mr. Navarro to be a man perfectly able to manage his own affairs; he has in our presence and that of several others expressed himself as perfectly satisfied with his investment, and the economy and care with which the work was being done, and the fact that he, when fully knowing the cost of the first four buildings, decided to duplicate his enterprise and erect four more, does not certainly look as if he thought ill of his investment.

As regards our building on Madison avenue and Thirtieth street, it was not built under contract, but erected by one of the stockholders under the percentage system. We unhesitatingly refer to the members of the Executive Committee in support of our statement that any extra cost incurred on that building was done at the request of the owners.

HUBERT, PIRSSON & CO.

REMARKS.—We were careful to explain why architects' estimates were often under the real cost. Hubert, Pirsson & Co., in the above letter, merely restate what appeared in our last week's article. We said that labor strikes, the whims of the capitalist, sometimes his desire to improve upon the original design, the increased cost of materials and the like, were among the causes which often added so largely to the cost of buildings. Mr. Navarro, it seems, is pleased with his investment. He certainly can claim the credit of bringing into existence eight magnificent structures, superior in conveniences and appointments to the palaces of kings. But our correspondents are well aware that there are some architects all of whose buildings have cost more than the estimates originally prepared by them, yet doubtless in every case a satisfactory explanation can be offered.

The General Term of the City Court of New York were divided in their opinion filed December 31st, 1883, upon a very interesting question, Judges Hawes and Hall holding in favor of the landlord, and Chief-Justice Shea in favor of the tenant, in the case of Chadwick vs. Woodward, the judges in the prevailing opinion doing us the honor to cite one of our legal reports (20 REAL ESTATE RECORD 806). Mr. Woodward leased from Mrs. Chadwick furnished premises in this city, she agreeing to put the plumbing in good order at the beginning of the lease. He moved in, did not pay his rent, and, when he was sued for it, claimed damages against her for defective plumbing, and for sickness in his family caused by sewer gas The able law firm of Foster & Thomson were counsel for the landlord, and the Court decided that Mr. Woodward having hired the premises opening into a sewer did so with the knowledge that sewer gas might escape into them, that it does not make any difference that the landlord knew about the escape of sewer gas when she let the premises, and that her not saying anything about it was not such concealment as would break the lease, so Mr. Woodward having occupied the house for the whole three years of his lease, had to pay his three years' rent.

Important to Judgment Creditors.

It is generally supposed and understood that when a Court appoints a receiver of property, that receiver holds the property for the benefit of all the parties interested. Very few know, however, that in the case of a foreclosure of a mortgage, a receiver appointed to collect the rents of the property is not appointed in the interest of all the parties, but that the New York Court of Appeals has decided that the moneys in such a receiver's hands belongs either to the mortgagee who had the receiver appointed, or to the owner of the property.

Generally this makes no practical difference, for the receiver is appointed on the ground that the property is not worth enough to pay the mortgage, and in fact in such cases it usually does not sell for enough to pay it, and the mortgagee is glad to get the net rents from the receiver on account of the deficiency.

But the other day, in the case of Hall vs. Keyes in the New York Superior Court, it turned out that the property sold for enough to pay the mortgage and the expenses, and that left a couple of thousand dollars in the hands of the receiver who had been collecting the rents under an order obtained by that mortgagee; and the latter decided that he did not want the trouble and expense of examining the receiver's accounts, and did not care what became of that money; as the money did not come from the sale of the property under foreclosure, it could not be taken by the referee appointed to sell, and was not, therefore, a part of the surplus moneys that should be distributed under the foreclosure decree to the subsequent lienors; this left that cash the property of the mortgagor, and if paid to him would have left his creditors out in the cold. Some have thought that in such a case some diligent judgment creditor might examine the owner in supplementary proceedings, and so get hold of those rents; and this might be a very good way. But in that case of Hall vs. Keyes the next party entitled to payment from the surplus moneys in the foreclosure was a mechanic's lienor (The J. L. Mott Iron Works), who had no judgment upon which an execution could be issued and supplementary proceedings taken, and the surplus moneys, after the mortgagee was paid, would not one-fourth pay them the amount granted to them in that decree, so that any of the creditors who had judgments, no matter how far they came after The Mott Works, might have stepped in and have taken the money (unless the mortgagor himself had got it first, and possibly spent it). But the counsel for The J. L. Mott Iron Works, Mr. Geo. W. Van Siclen, relying upon the rule of equity that where a creditor has two funds to look to for payment, one of which he alone can reach, and upon the other of which other creditors have claims with him, he must first take his pay from his own separate fund as far as it goes, made a motion on the equity side of the Court for an order requiring the mortgagee in that case to take the money from the receiver, as far as it would go, and then take his balance from the proceeds of sale, thus leaving a reasonable amount to go to The Mott Works. Notwithstanding the strenuous opposition made on behalf of subsequent parties the Court granted the motion, and the money was this week paid over in accordance with that decision.

THE LEGAL STATUS OF STOCK EXCHANGES.

This is a work which should be in the hands of every active broker on the lists of all the exchanges of the country. It gives the history and the laws which control all manner of stock exchanges. The members of the newly-organized Real Estate Exchange would do well to carefully peruse this volume. Had its contents been thoroughly understood by the organizers of the Exchange it might have escaped many mistakes, and saved both time and money. The aim of all wisely planned exchanges has been to avoid the uncertainties, expense and waste of time which seem to be inseparable from the legal machinery of every civilized nation. The law has been called, in irony, we suppose, "the perfection of human reason." If this were true, then alas for poor human nature; for reason, the most godlike faculty of man, would then appear as a veritable will-o'-the-wisp in leading men's minds from just and wise conclusions. The worthlessness of legal tribunals to settle matters of fact, insure justice, and expedite transactions between man and man, is shown by the history of litigation in modern if not in ancient times. Realizing this fact owners of personal property devised exchanges, where their interests could be transferred without resort to the law. In place of courts committees of arbitration were established, the members of the exchange binding themselves never to appeal from their decisions to any court of law, on pain of expulsion. The history of exchanges dates back to the time of the Romans, though the Stock Exchange as conducted in our day is a creation of modern times. An exchange was erected at London in 1571. The Paris Bourse dates back to February, 1304, while a document exists showing that a corporation of New York stock brokers existed in 1792. Regarding the extra legal character of these exchanges we find that "a voluntary association of persons like the New York Stock Exchange, by which each individual broker is enabled to carry on his separate business under regulations made alike for the protection of himself and his client or principal, has no technical name or place in the law." Again, "an institution like the Stock Exchange is an anomaly in the law. Without being a corporation or a partnership, it possesses some of the characteristics of both. It does not exist by virtue of a charter or legislative grant. The obligations and rights of its members are not determined by any statutory provision. Unlike an incorporated commercial joint-stock company, the privilege of membership in such a voluntary association may be conferred or withheld at its pleasure, and the law cannot compel the admission of an individual into the society against its wish." These are some of the general elements which distinguish stock exchanges from corporations, incorporated joint stock associations, or partnerships, and by which their extra legal character is established. The Real Estate Exchange is organized under the Limited Liability Act passed in 1875. This law was based upon the operation of the Limited Companies' Act of Great Britain, and is intended to limit the liabilities to the face values of the stock subscribed to by the members, was enacted in a time of great business depression, and was a dead letter for years, as there were very few new enterprises started until the revival of business in 1879. It is a good law in itself, but it has the defect of all human enactments that it is not suited for every emergency likely to arise in business. It involves legal expenses which are unnecessary, and puts limitations upon the action of companies which are often onerous and wasteful. It was the intention of the originators of the Real Estate Exchange to advance the price of seats five hundred dollars after two hundred and fifty subscriptions had been secured, but this could not be done under the law, which provided that all the subscribers should come in on equal terms. This must have cost the Exchange over $100,000, for the remaining two hundred and fifty shares could have been sold at a large advance upon the original subscription. The bill for legal expenses will always be heavy, and much of the money thus spent would have been saved, had the Real Estate Exchange been organized like the Stock, Cotton, Mining and the other great exchanges of the world. But seeking its membership from among wealthy property owners it was thought advisable to organise under a law which insured it against any demand beyond the price of its shares. With the site paid for, a surplus on hand, and a certain revenue, it may be wise for the Real Estate Exchange to get rid of its dependence upon the law and assimilate its organization and management to that of the Stock Exchange. The Produce Exchange is worked under a special charter, which was passed by the Legislature in 1862, and subsequently amended, but under the constitution, no more special charters for corporations can be legalized hereafter; they must conform to some general law. During the Tweed regime, a charter was passed, which it was intended to sell to the Stock Exchange, but although it conferred extraordinary powers, the stock brokers would have nothing to do with it, as they did not wish to place themselves under the power of the courts. This same charter was subsequently owned by the American Mining Company, but it did not save that body from bankruptcy.

One of New York's Palaces Described.

The "St. Catherine" apartment house, on the southeast corner of Madison avenue and Fifty-third street, presented an appearance of great activity when a representative of THE REAL ESTATE RECORD AND GUIDE called there the other morning. Scores of artists, workmen and superintendents were engaged in painting, decorating, and otherwise hastening the completion of the interior. The building is eight stories and basement in height, and has a total frontage of one hundred and fifty feet, one hundred on Madison avenue and the remainder on Fifty-third street. Unlike most apartment houses of a first-class character, the "St. Catherine" has only one suite of rooms on each floor, with the exception of that on the first story, which occupies part of the basement in addition. There are seven suites in all, each intended for one family. Every suite contains twenty-one rooms, and every room can be entered from a private hall which runs through the entire floor, and which is eighty feet in length and on an average six feet in width. All the apartments above the first story are entered from both staircase and elevator. The halls are wainscoted in finely carved and highly polished oak, the ceilings being richly decorated. The upper suites are all arranged on the same plan. The principal parlor is a magnificent chamber, twenty feet long and twenty-two wide. This room contains five windows, two looking out on the avenue and three on the street, commanding a splendid view of the Central Park. The ceilings are delicately frescoed with floral decorations, four laurel wreaths, one at each corner, standing out prominently in the general design. The woodwork is of finely selected mahogany, while from the centre of the ceiling is suspended a French chandelier of silvered bronze in Louis XVI. style, two sidelights of similar design flanking the entrance to the reception room adjoining. The wall paper is of flocked pattern, with a gilt background, while the windows are partly of stained glass of rich and quiet tone, giving a subdued effect. Entering the reception room, we observe the finely decorated moresque ceiling and the parqueted floors. This room is 16x18 in size. It is trimmed in quartered oak, and contains a bronzed chandelier of rare design, with sidelights to match. Four pretty circular landscapes appear in the stained glass in the window, which fronts on the avenue. Adjoining is the library and music room, 16 x20, the ceiling of which is frescoed in the French Renaissance. A noticeable feature in this room is the Damascus steel chandeliers of bluish color with bronze trimmings of a copper hue. The floors in this room are also parqueted, while the woodwork is of finely carved and polished mahogany. There are two stained glass windows, one containing a landscape and river view, the other representing birds, some warbling on branches and others on the wing. These three rooms are all connected with each other by massive mahogany and oak sliding doors. They command a view from one end to the other and are 58 feet in length throughout, thus giving accommodation for receptions and dancing, probably unsurpassed in any other apartment house. Beyond the library and music room, and still on the Madison avenue front, are three bedrooms, one 15x16, another somewhat similar, and a third sleeping room, 15x22, from the latter of which a full view is obtained of the Villard houses and the Fifth Avenue Cathedral. The ceiling of this room is richly decorated, while the woodwork is in quartered oak. It contains an alcove, which can be curtained off with portieres from the rest of the chamber, so as to make an excellent bachelor's quarters, for which it was partly intended. At the other end of the hall are servants' toilet and chambermaids' rooms, containing a chest of drawers of oak and plenty of closet room. Beyond is the kitchen, which is quite a feature in the thoughtfulness of its arrangement, the intention being to make it as comfortable as possible for the mistress of the culinary department and not subject her to the oppressive heat which all cooks have to endure. The kitchen is ingeniously divided into two compartments, one for cooking, the other for what may be termed breathing space. The former contains one of Mott's "Defiance" high closet ranges, a sink with three drain-boards, a store closet, dresser and electric bell, while the latter forms a retreat from the heat, in which the cook may do all her work. This retreat can be curtained off from the kitchen proper and it has also a small extension with a refrigerator and ice pitcher stand. The ceilings are decorated with plain striped borders of different colors, and the walls painted in light cool tints in oil. We now turned into the dining room, which is trimmed in quartered oak, and the size of which is 16x22. The ceiling is handsomely decorated in light colors, with the foreground of fruits, the cove being of a bronzed copper tint having a silky appearance. The sideboard is in richly carved oak, the doors being of beveled plate glass. A feature is the marble mantle with bric-a-brac mirror. There are also china closets, while a butler's pantry, with large and commodious cupboards all around, adjoins the room. The walls are ornamented with Lincrusta Walton of very pretty pattern. Further on is a gentleman's toilet room, with washstands containing French porcelain bowls ornamented with flowers, a bath and other conveniences. Beyond is a fourth bedroom, 12x16, the woodwork being of sycamore. We now come to the ladies' toilet room, which is in quartered oak, the ceilings being lightly decorated with pretty designs. The washbasins are of French porcelain, and are ornamented with flowers. Entering the principal bedroom, we are at once struck with the beautifully frescoed ceiling, which contains four cupids, one in each corner, representing the four seasons, spring with its blooming flowers, summer with its ripening fruits, autumn with its withering leaves and winter skating on the clouds. There is an alcove in the room arranged for a bed, and contains electric bells and speaking tubes communicating with the kitchen and maid's apartment, rubber attachments being used so that the servants can be summoned and spoken to without the person calling them rising from the bed. The wall paper is of rare design, the ceiling having a sky-blue background, with sprigs of flowers. A ladies' dressing room is separated from this bedroom, containing closet room in abundance, and in the wall of which is a fireproof jewel safe of iron, entered through an iron door, over which comes an oak door arranged in such a manner as to preclude a knowledge of there being any valuables hid away in the recess. Emerging we find the walls and staircases richly decorated in raised work and frescoing from top to bottom. Standing at the head of the stairs a picturesque view is presented, a bright flood of light being thrown from the skylight above on the beautifully decorated dome, the rich tinted frieze and the finely carved oak wainscoting and massive balustrade and railing. The top floor contains six washing and drying rooms, there being a separate set of rooms for each family, thus obviating the inconvenience and confusion of a "community of interests" in this important department of domestic government. Each washing room has three porcelain washtubs, hot and cold water and steam jets, and a drying closet heated by steam, containing six drying horses, thus enabling clothes to be dried in the space of twenty or thirty minutes. Plenty of fresh air and closet room is supplied. A large servant's bedroom, nicely papered and carpeted, and a trunk room for each family, is added to each suite, there being also two servants' toilet rooms on this floor. The suite of rooms on the first story and basement is slightly different from the arrangement in the floors above. The decorations are equally rich. A staircase leads from the library down to the dining room, the ceiling of which is ornamented with heavy relief work, richly gilt and frescoed in the Louis XIV. Renaissance, with four beautiful female heads, surrounded by fruits, representing the different seasons. The walls also are enriched with raised frescowork and gilding and a beautiful border of grapes. Adjoining is a butler's pantry with all conveniences, behind which is the kitchen, laundry and servant's toilet. There are seven wine rooms on the basement, one for each family in the building. The billiard room on the first floor, behind the library, is in the Elizabethan style, with ceiling and woodwork to match, the large mahogany sideboard being a feature. The principal bedroom in this suite is frescoed in the Persian style, and richly trimmed in mahogany. The washstand in the side closet has direct ventilation into a light shaft, so that no sewer gas can make its way there, and the same arrangement exists throughout the building.

The finest workmanship in the building appears in the vestibule and the main entrance hall. The former is approached through massive sliding doors, concealed from view in day time, the inner doors being of amaranthe, one of the richest of woods. The windows are of the most elaborate cathedral opaline-jewelled glass work. The cabinet work on the walls and ceiling is in quartered oak and the carving is exquisite. A bronze lamp of cut and bevelled glass of special design suspends from the ceiling, and two highly artistic sidelights of bronze, representing beautiful female figures, appear on the walls. Two rich stained glass windows appear on each side, containing peacocks with outstretched feathers. The floor is of Italian, French and Belgian marble, laid out in rich panels, with friezes and bands. This vestibule is undoubtedly the chef d'oeuvre of the interior. It is quite a small art exhibition in itself, the tout ensemble being highly effective. Two Caryatides flank the doors leading to the main entrance hall, which is richly frescoed in the Italian Renaissance. The treatment is of solid relief, with garlands of fruits. The wainscoting is in finely carved and polished oak. A splendid mantel, ten feet high and eight feet wide, with supporting columns, ornaments the hall, and reflects a chandelier of special design, which is suspended from the ceiling, having crystal pendants and rich jewels, the whole, when lit up, giving a brilliant effect. At the end of this hall is the elevator and the open staircase, which is richly carved, the wainscoting being elegantly paneled from the bottom to the top story.

Among the general arrangements in the building the principal feature is the almost superfluous precautions taken for safety in case of fire. The two escapes in the rear are much superior to the majority in use. One is completely caged in from roof to basement, so that it would be impossible to fall. The other is in the shape of a turret, and is entirely inclosed, having the appearance of a circular steeple, minus the tapering spire. The design is a happy idea of the architect. The escape is of corrugated iron, and has a spiral staircase running through the inside from the top to bottom, which is entered through doors from three different rooms on each floor, and which can be ascended or descended much in the same way as the tower of Notre Dame or the spire of Trinity Church. The bottom of this fire-escape communicates directly with the open air by means of a fireproof passageway leading to the outer area. The escapes are so constructed that should a fire break out in any one part of the building, egress would be safe and easy from the opposite part. There is in addition 120 feet of fire hose in a niche on each staircase, that is nearly 900 feet of hose in all, capable of being played on to the staircases or in any of the apartments at a moment's notice. The plumbing throughout the building is of a sanitary character and every possible precaution has been taken to prevent the possibility of sewer gas entering any of the rooms. There is no plumbing in any of the bedrooms, while the ladies' toilet rooms are separate from those of the gentlemen, which are located in a different part of the suite. The ventilation is perfect, while every room in the building is lighted direct from the street, the large frontage giving exceptional facilities for this purpose. Hardwood is used throughout, the only exception being the pine required in the drying room. The building is entirely heated by steam, while electrical apparatuses are supplied in abundance. The elevator, the interior of which is richly carved, is one of the finest specimens of artistic cabinet work. It has two compartments, one for the occupants and guests and another for the servants, the latter compartment being used for freight and having an exit or entrance from both the private hall or the staircase. On the first story there is a superbly fitted up drug store in finely carved hardwood, trimmed with frescoed ceilings and marble floors, and which is not surpassed in elegance by any in New York. Indeed the conveniences at the disposal of the occupants of this edifice are only allotted to the fortunate few. They are possible, with rare exceptions, in the apartment house alone, for much more can be achieved by a combination of persons than by a single individual. This has been the secret of the success attending the really first class apartment houses in good locations. The "St. Catherine" is to be ready for occupation on February 1. The owner, Mr. John W. Ambrose, seems to have spared neither labor nor money in his endeavor to make it as perfect as possible in all its details, while the architect, Mr. Hugo Kafka, has been highly successful in the work he has accomplished.

Some Suggestions about the Elevated Roads

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

Some time ago you suggested that the elevated roads should erect elevators at various stations, especially those at a great height, and that in order to do so the companies should purchase or acquire the right in property situate opposite the stations, and place elevators in those houses communicating directly with the stations, which might be used by the occupants of the property as well as by the general public to ascend to the elevated railroad's platforms. I have not heard that the companies have so far done anything in this matter. That it would pay is beyond a doubt. There are thousands and tens of thousands of aged or infirm people who are anxious to use the "L" roads, but who are now forced to take the street cars, owing to their easier accessibility. There are large numbers of people also who are suffering from affections of the chest and heart, as well as other diseases, which practically precludes them from attempting to use the elevated roads. Then all women, sick or well, dread climbing the stairs to the stations. Here, then, is a source of revenue for the companies which, for the advantage of their exchequers and for the convenience of the public, they should not lose sight of.

And here I would make another suggestion, the importance of which will at once be seen. One of the principal officers of the Third Avenue Elevated Road states that that line during commission hours is taxed to its utmost resources, and that, should the tide of travel increase, the road will not be free from danger. Now, why not utilize the Second and Third avenues by building a single track in the centre of the present lines. This would enable express trains to run continuously, or almost so, between the City Hall to Harlem. The Second avenue central track could be used for transporting passengers up-town, and the Third avenue central track for bringing them down-town. This would solve a problem which is daily becoming more difficult. Should the Second avenue road admit of a double central track being constructed, so much the better, for it would increase the facilities. This plan would do away with the great crush after five in the evening, and early in the morning. Trains might stop at intervals of a mile or at the principal stations. Should the station stopped at be, say, Forty-second street and the next stoppage Sixty-seventh, persons living between the stations could get off at either station and take a slow train running on the present outside tracks. The only objections I know of to this plan would be, firstly, that the cars now left over-nights on the central tracks in different parts of the city would have to shift; and secondly, that in case of accidents, such as insufficiency of coal, collisions, or other unusual circumstances, there would be no shunting lines at the disposal of the road. But the first objection can be met by providing extra storage accommodations for the cars, and the second by the signal and telegraphic service on the roads. Should an accident occur, the express train next due could easily be signalled to stop and the injured cars could be shunted until an opportunity offered for their being removed. I don't propose to go into further details, but I think the suggestion worthy of some consideration by the proper parties. L. B.

Land Transfer Reform.

The Land Transfer Reform Association, of which Dwight H. Olmstead, Esq., is president, have prepared a draft of a bill "to facilitate the transfer of land" in this city. The object of the association appears to be to remodel the law of conveyancing for the State at large; but as their scheme is very radical, it is proposed to try the experiment first upon real estate in this city, where the inconveniences which they aim to remedy are most numerous and the facilities which they propose to afford might be supposed to be most welcome. So large a scheme and one which proposes to change so radically almost the entire practice of a large part of the legal profession requires, of course, very careful deliberation, because, while the objections are obvious, the advantages cannot be expected to be so obvious. Without expressing any opinion upon the subject as yet, we here call attention only to the main features of the plan and some of the changes which it will involve.

It is proposed, if we rightly understand the bill, that after the period of two years allowed for the preparation of records, etc., no transfer of any interest in lands (wills and leases not exceeding one year to tenants in actual possession being excepted) shall take effect except by an instrument without seal (unless it be a corporate or official act) and designating the number of the ward, the block and the lot number as the same appear on land maps and indices to be meantime prepared; and that no such transfer shall take effect (except by way of equitable contract between the parties) until actual registration of the instrument. The main object of this change seems to be to enable a public record to be kept of every lot in the city, so that each owner may receive a certificate stating his title and indicating the incumbrances; and this certificate is to be made prima facie evidence of all the facts stated in it and, unless contradicted by competent evidence, conclusive. The essential contrast in method between the present system and the new is that while now titles are searched by the name of the owner, they will then be searched by map and lot number.

In order to carry this system into effect, the act proposes to prohibit any other transfers than those made pursuant to it, and declares that no property can be brought under it except upon the report in writing of a counsellor-at-law that he has carefully examined the title, made full searches and certifying the result. This requirement appears to involve examination of the title to all lands upon the island, with full searches, within the period of two years. The Register is empowered to compel not only any owner applying to have his land brought under the act, but also any person interested in any land in which any dealing is about to be transacted, to produce to him all instruments, including wills, abstracts, searches and other papers affecting the land or the title thereto, and to compel any such person to come before him and give any explanation respecting the land or the instruments affecting the title. These provisions appear calculated to bring to light—so far as the execution of such a compulsory system may be complete—all the muniments of title and all defects of title now existing. Owners whose title is perhaps equitably complete, but is subject to apparent legal defect, or whose possession or enjoyment unmolested rests upon the fact that those who have an apparent claim may be unadvised of it, will lose what protection they enjoy under the remains of the old English doctrine of title, deed and discovery.

Other provisions of the act will have the effect of bringing to light all mortgages and other such liens which are unsatisfied of record, and to cause them to be certified as encumbrances on the title. The thousands and thousands of incumbrances of this kind which have been actually satisfied and paid, but which, through ignorance or negligence, remain uncanceled of record will thus be brought to attention, and those who appear on the record to be lienors, although not so in fact, will have a new presumption raised in their favor. Information as to titles will no longer be matter of private knowledge or private property, but the analysis of the records which will be made, and the compulsory production of private abstracts and other writings will sift and bring together all these points of controversy. Whether this is to be regarded as an advantage or disadvantage, it is evident that the introduction of such a system is a very different thing when attempted in an old and long settled community having long continued possessions, from what it would be when introduced, as was the Torrens act, in a comparatively new community with a clear field before it.

It is proposed also to confer upon the Register a power such as has never been conferred upon any Court before, nor, so far as we are aware, assumed even by the Legislature, viz., to prohibit the "dealing with any land within his county in any case in which it shall appear to him that an error has been made, by misdescription of such land or otherwise, in any certificate of title or other instrument, or for the prevention of any fraud or improper dealing." Under this provision we should be inclined to follow the example of the proverbial Pennsylvanian who is still voting for Andrew Jackson, and vote for Chancellor Kent or Chief Justice Oakley for Register. Any one making an adverse claim to land can file a caveat against its transfer. A caveat or a prohibition is to be got rid of by petition to the Supreme Court or a Justice thereof, or a caveat may be got rid of by consent of the caveator, duly acknowledged. The whole of the bill is worthy the careful attention of all who are concerned in conveyancing; for, whether it be adopted or not, it presents in a very detailed manner the possibilities of the subject.—Daily Register.

Real Estate Department.

The past has been another dull week. There is, however, every indication that the spring will be a comparatively busy season. There will be plenty of property in the market, and prices will probably rule somewhat lower than last spring and fall. Real property has held its own thus far, because of the insecurity of the stocks and bonds dealt in in Wall street.

Renting for the year will soon begin. In the dry-goods district, where the renting year commences February 1st, the season may be said to be over, and the result can hardly be said to be satisfactory to the landlords. Large stores on the ground floor are not in active demand, but there are plenty of applicants for cheap upper stories and lofts. Even in these depressed times there are more people desiring to enter business than there are to leave it because of losses and failures. There is a general impression that office property down town will not be so easy of rental as in former years, but the agent of the Williamsburg Fire Insurance building, corner of Liberty street and Broadway, says that they will net, after giving themselves the accommodations they desire, a fair profit on their investment, yet the lot and building is one of the costliest pieces of office property in New York. Cyrus W. Field says that he has had an active demand for his offices in the building fronting the Battery. Half the structure was rented the very first day for high figures. It is true of office buildings as of apartment houses, that those which give the finest accommodations rent the most readily. Large firms and corporations who require whole floors get full figures, but persons who require only a room are disposed to bicker about prices. The depression of the Stock, Cotton and other Exchanges has lessened the demand for down-town offices. Still several new Exchanges have been started during the last year, some of which have not secured permanent quarters. The Real Estate Exchange, for instance, having established itself in Liberty street, corner of Liberty place, will give value to the offices in the Bryant building and to those of the Mutual Life building, as soon as the latter are ready for occupancy.

The comparision between the number of Conveyances and Mortgages during the past week and the corresponding week of last year is as follows:

E. H. Ludlow & Co. announce a very important sale on Wednesday, February 6th, on which date they will offer the premises, No. 54 Wall street. This plot has a frontage of 50.4x117.6 on one side and 114.3 on the other, making in all some 5,700 square feet. This would be an admirable site for an office building. The sale is for a legal partition of the property and will be absolute. Investors looking up gilt-edge realty will of course attend this sale.

Next Wednesday, January 30th, Richard V. Harnett will sell, under order of executors, the building No. 177 Greenwich street. This is near the L. road station, and is very desirable investment property.

There will be other sales during February, and will probably include that of French's Hotel, on the opposite corner from the Sun building. An unfortunate family quarrel has kept this building untenanted for some time, but it will soon be utilized by being sold under a partition suit. It is said the Sun Publishing Company have had their eye upon this property for some time past. The plan was to sell the present site of the Sun to the Tribune Association, the latter corporation intending to complete the Tribune building by erecting another tall tower on the corner of Frankfort street. It is an open question, however, whether the Brooklyn Bridge trustees should not acquire all the land fronting on Chatham street, between Frankfort street and the present entrance to the bridge. In some way the space in that neighborhood must be enlarged for the vehicular and foot traffic of that region.

Mutual Life Insurance Company.

The annual statement of the Mutual Life Insurance Company appears elsewhere. Its figures are eloquent as to the splendid management of this giant corporation. Its assets amount to $101,148,248.23, and its surplus at the 4½ per cent. standard aggregates $12,000,000. The names of its directors are an assurance that its business is managed with integrity and sound judgment.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—There is very little information to convey on the market for Common Hards at the moment. Business, in fact, is almost entirely suspended, the small quantity of stock changing hands affording no fair indication of exact values, and, as a natural sequence, close figures cannot be given. Prices, in fact, are named mainly from those asked by holders, which, in a general way, may be placed at $7.00 for Jerseys and $8 for Long Islands, as covering the fresh receipts though these are not offering at the moment. As to old Hards, same is reported at $6.50 from held stock, but there is little or no recent receipt from any point of importance owing to the ice blockade. All our present quotations should, under the circumstances, be considered nominal, and due allowance made for such influences as are likely to arise to change the character of the market. As matters stand, the limited distribution may be attributed largely to the weather, which retards both consumption and deliveries, and we have of only two large loads discharging this week, while from yard or in odd lots have gone out. There is some trouble worse to come in various quarters, the city outlook appears to be no great or general improvement, public or and in many instances the retail stock to draw upon when an opportunity offers. Vessels for parcels are still going on board for export, mostly to South American ports. Pales are not very active, but now and then find some demand and command about former rates, according to quality. Extra have sold as high as $4.50 per M., but the average grade does not exceed $4, and the latter is finding the slowest sale.

GLASS.—Efforts to bring about a reconciliation between Western manufacturers and their workmen are still unsuccessful. The demand for American window-glass, however, is light and the position does not appear quite so firm. Imported stock is becoming more plenty, the arrivals out-balancing the demand, and with a little anxiety to realize manifested, the tone is soft with somewhat more liberal discounts occasionally allowed.

LATH.—It has simply been a nominally unchanged market. The latest cargo sale was at $2.50 per M. previous to our last (our types were very bullish and made it $2.50 per M.), and since that time nothing has come to hand to test the position. Receivers, however, seem to think there would be no necessity for shading the above figure, though a little doubtful about the outlet, owing to the uncertainties of delivery. The yard stock is said to be moderate.

LIME.—There is no wholesale market at the moment and in the absence of sales no regular market value, though the idea seems to be that only about former rates could be obtained.

LUMBER.—The general market, so far as it goes, is a steady one, but by no means active, and locally there is not much to interest the Trade. The fitful condition of the weather renders yard delivery a somewhat uncertain matter even when goods are waiting to go out on contract, and the general caution serves to retard new business. Most buyers are somewhat uncertain about making engagements, while sellers are considering the matter of credits, and evidently determined to steer closely. The slow distribution makes a natural reflex upon the wholesale market, and dealers are not much interested in either random or special ordering. Quite a little can may be found from foreign operators, and the supply of desirable shipping grades shows the effect of drafts made upon it, though not as yet seriously reduced. Dealers who cater to the [illegible] trade appear to have considerable faith in the prospect for both West India and South American orders at this point as well as additional business in the free on board trade at the South. The interior accounts as they come to hand endorse previous suggestions of a full log crop, and no important addition to values [illegible] now anticipated.

Eastern spruce does not appear to particularly favor either buyer or seller. Considerable difference of opinion may occasionally be heard on the market, but when [illegible] down to the basis of actual business, there is really very little variation from the [illegible] Where concessions are offered, if the [illegible] attractive, buyers can be found to negotiate and they do not object much to paying about old rates, but common or inferior stock has to take its chances, and, as a rule, goes [illegible] The [illegible] number of saws running is [illegible] and they have a fair amount of work before them but are open to engagement for additional bills. Most receivers continue to quote "about as before," or say from $13.00@13.50 up to $16.00 for random, according to cut, and thence upward to $17.00@17.50 for specials.

White Pine still sells a little slowly on home orders, buyers not having use for much at the best and taking what they require in small parcels on the hand to-mouth order. They find an ample quantity and assortment available and selections are easily made, with holders meeting them on about a line of former cost. Exporters, in the meantime, are making some fair purchases, and, with the amounts recently secured, are opening the door for a considerable amount of stock at slightly hardening rates if anything. We quote $18.50@22.00 for West India shipping boards; $28@30 for South American do.; $17@18 for box boards, and $18.50@19.00 for extra do.

Yellow Pine does not meet with much additional attention. After a labor of many weeks negotiations on two or three large bills have been closed at prices differing but little from those current when buyers and sellers first commenced figuring, and there is still a demand for specials equal to some five or six good fair cargoes in all, but in no case has the movement of buyers proven sufficiently urgent to give agents and receivers much advantage, and the cost of supplies while steady, is certainly no greater than for some time past. Still there is a point in favor of the selling interest in the fact that at some of the most important mills, both at Atlantic and Gulf points of delivery, the accumulation of orders on the f. o. b. trade noted for quite a time past, and to which some of the local sheets have fully woke up, will keep manufacturers more closely employed and tend to reduce competition. We quote as follows: Randoms, $20@22 per M; Specials, $21@23 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $24@25; Dry do., do., $25@26; Step Plank, $30@35 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $14@16 for rough, and $19@21 for dressed. Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports $13@15 for rough, and $18@20 for dressed.

Hardwoods do not appear to afford much "food for thought" at the moment. Most of the stock is poor and unattractive, with only a limited call for it, but anything choice will secure attention and command a good price. We quote at wholesale rates by car-load about as follows: Walnut, $65@110 per M; ash, $35@40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, $40@75 do.; whitewood 1½ and 2½ inch, $25@30 do., do., and do. inch, $28@38; hickory, $45@55 do.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

THE WEST.

The Northwestern Lumberman as follows:

The lumber business at large remains very quiet. It is always expected that at this season trade will be dull, but at many points it is more than dull now—it is pronounced dead. The snow in the East and the extremely cold weather, both in the East and the West, have by no means been promoters of trade. Such weather stopped building operations to a great extent, and that always means a decrease in the demand for lumber. Another reason for the present dullness of trade may be noted. Many of the retail yards throughout the country are as heavily stocked as they care to be just now. The owners of these yards bear in mind the tariff tinkering that is going on at Washington, and argue that if by any means the import duty be removed from Canadian lumber, prices might decline. We are of the opinion that if the duty were removed these gentlemen would be somewhat disappointed in the drop that prices would take; nevertheless, the idea that it would cut considerable of a figure is thoroughly rooted in their minds. Aside from this there is a feeling that the present year may not be an extraordinarily good one for business. Presidential year is considered by many as an "off" one. There is also a necessity for many of the retail yard dealers to go a little slow. Collections in some sections of the West are difficult to make, and the dealers wisely conclude that it will be better for them to carry moderate stocks than to stock heavily, and then run a chance of having a sheriff take possession of their premises.

At the yards the majority of dealers are still talking firmness of prices, and beyond question there is less disposition now to urge sales by cutting than there was last year. There are some concerns whose representatives take but little stock in the assumption that there is any more firmness than prevailed months ago. But as a general rule the opinion and purpose of all tends toward a holding of stocks until the revival of demand shall become pronounced and prices natural and healthy. There is now practically no sale for lumber sufficient to test the tone of values.

The freight war in expectancy between the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Western Trunk Line Association is still acting as a hindrance to trade. No doubt many are hesitating about ordering on this account. The great houses here that are connected with chains of yards in the West are waiting for cheaper rates. The extremely limited amount of movement noticeable is accountable from this latter cause.

Loggers everywhere are jubilant over the work they are doing. On some of the streams the roads have been improved by a few inches of snow. Extra forces, in some districts, have been put in, and the business is rushed in every direction.

The market for Hardwoods has experienced no change since our last writing, and the lack of an energetic demand leaves us in doubt as to what any coming changes may be. The requirement still shows the vacillating, uncertain character previously noted, showing that manufacturers have not yet determined upon their future course. They purchase, for the most part, as they need for immediate use, though some feel that the present is a favorable time for laying in a stock of good lumber at low figures, and from such parties come occasional good orders. Every one has an abundance of the lower grades, and sellers should still bear in mind that there is no call for poor lumber here, and that to forward consignments of such is to weaken a market already surfeited with the stuff. If it is sold it is only by offering extra inducements in the shape of low prices; and commission men, do as well as they may, have to meet such active competition that, in order to effect sales, they must often sacrifice values.

LUMBERMAN AND MANUFACTURER,
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The dullness of dead winter has brought no unpleasant efforts to sell lumber where no lumber is needed for consumption, in the frigid Northwest. The croakers have mostly gone into winter quarters and general confidence prevails that there will be an advance in lumber prices as soon as moderate weather begins. Collections are easier than last month, and all fears of a crash seem to have vanished. Many firms report very numerous inquiries for figures and but few sales. News from the woods continues favorable. No additions are being made to the forces except a few on the Chippewa. The log crop will undoubtedly be large enough to supply all demands, but not burden the trade or result in lower prices.

METALS.—COPPER—Ingot has found a fair jobbing demand from regular sources, with some slight variations on cost, as buyers generally bid a fraction less than valuation. As a rule, however, holders were unwilling to give way. We quote at 14c. for the ordinary brand up to 15c. for the best Lake. Manufactured is dull and unsettled all around. We quote as follows: Brazier's Copper, ordinary size, over 16 oz. per sq. foot, 26c. per lb.; do. do. do., 16 oz. and over 12 oz. per sq. foot, 28c. per lb.; do. do., 10 and 12 oz. per sq. foot, 30c. per lb.; do., do., lighter than 10 oz. per sq. foot, 32c. per lb.; circles less than 24 inches in diameter, 28c. per lb.; 24 inches in diameter and over, 30c. per lb.; segment and pattern sheets, 28c. per lb.; locomotive fire-box sheets, 26c. per lb.; Sheathing Copper, over 12 oz. per sq. foot, 24c. per lb., and Bolt Copper, 26c. per lb. IRON—Scotch Pig has not met with much additional demand, but an increase in the cost of ocean freight charges, almost simultaneously with fuller cost of those on primary markets, has naturally stimulated importers' views. We quote at $—@—, according to brand, etc. American Pig has been in somewhat better demand, but not beyond regular outlets or the capacity of furnace to supply, and all calls were met. Sellers had advantage enough to harden values somewhat and the close is firm, but no tendency to buoyancy shown, as would appear by some of the cock-and-bull stories of late published. We quote $20.00@21.50 per ton for No. 1 X foundry, $19.00@20.00 for No. 2 X do. do., and $17.50@19.00 for gray forge. Rails have not been much sought after, and the call of buyers was confined almost entirely to small orders. Nearly all the companies, however, have contracts on hand to keep them busy, and there is no special effort making to sell. The rates remain at $35.00@36.00 per ton. Old Rails, Scrap, etc., find a moderate and somewhat uncertain movement, but still holders retain sufficient control of the supply to sustain a pretty steady sort of position all around. We quote at $21.50@23.00 for tee rails, $25.00@26.00 for double heads, $22.50@23.50 for No. 1 wrought scrap ex ship, $24.00@24.50 for selected do., $18.00@19.00 for old car wheels, and $22.00@23.00 for crop ends. Manufactured iron from store secures more or less call from regular trade sources, both local and interior, but at somewhat irregular rates, with no very great amount of strength shown. The estimates for and contracts concluded, however, on architectural designs, etc., are fair and at good full rates in pretty much all cases. We quote Common Merchant Bar, ordinary sizes, at 2.2@2.25c from store, and Refined at 2.4@4c.; wrought beams at 3.5@3.6c. Fish plates quoted at 3.0@3.1c.; track bolts and nuts, 3¼@3⅝c.; railway spikes, 3@3½c; tank, 3@3½c.; angle, 2.5@2.7c.; best flange, 4¼@4½c.; and domestic sheet on the basis of 3¾@3⅞c. for common Nos. 10@16. Other descriptions at corresponding prices, with 1-10c. less on large lots from cars. LEAD—Domestic Pig at the recent recovery on price has remained quite steady, with the stock well in hand, and holders not anxious to realize. The demand, however, was not very active, and the business assumed much of a jobbing character. We quote at about 4¼@4⅜c. per lb., according to brand and the size of invoice handled. The manufactures of lead are steady and quoted: Bar, 6c.; Pipe, 6¾c.; and Sheet, 7¼c., less the usual discount to the trade; and Tin-lined pipe, 15c.; block tin Pipe, 45c., on same terms. TIN—Pig is really not much wanted for consumption, and with the speculative fever light the market was in rather dull condition. Prices also favored the buyer under an occasional attempt to realize and less favorable accounts from abroad but holders would not permit any serious depression. We quote at 18½@19 for Straits and Australian, 20 to 20¼ for English, and 20½@20⅝ for Banca. Tin plates have been in larger supply with some evidences of anxiety to realize among holders and cost generally reduced. This failed to inspire demand, however, and nothing was taken beyond immediate wants. We quote I. C. Charcoal, third class assortment, $5.35@5.40 for Allaway grade, and $6.10@6.20 for Melyn grade; for each additional X add $1.25 and $1.50 respectively; I. C. Coke, $4.75@4.80 for B. V. Grade; $4.90@5.00 for Derwent and A. B. grade; Charcoal terne, $4.82½@5.15 for Allaway and Dean grades, 14x20; $10.12@10.37½ for do. 20x28; Coke terne, $4.60@4.65 for Glais grade 14x20, and $9.60@9.65 for do. 20x28—all in round lots. Spelter goes out quietly but to a very fair extent, and the general tone of the market is quite healthy and uniform all around. We quote at 4½@5⅛c. for domestic and foreign, according to brand, quantity, &c. Sheet Zinc in average demand and about steady at 6@7c., according to amount handled, etc.

NAILS.—The actual distribution does not increase, and indeed there is some signs of a falling off in demand. Supplies, however, are comfortably under control, with few important additions owing to the reduced production and the market may be considered pretty firm throughout. The quotations range at $2.60@2.70 per keg for 10d to 60d, according to size of invoice.

PAINTS AND OILS.—Local demand and consumption continues moderate, but there is some little preparation for it, and demand increases on standard good. Interior accounts are also promising, and holders think well enough of their desirable stocks to strengthen on values. Linseed oil has sold well, and was firmly maintained on basis of 56@58c. for domestic, and 58@60c. for foreign. Spirits turpentine slow but about steady at the close at 31½@33c., according to size of invoice.

PITCH AND TAR.—A light uncertain trade reported, but the stock in good form, and holders firm in asking full rates for it. We quote pitch $2 25@2.30 per bbl., and tar $2 50@3.00 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.

MARKET QUOTATIONS.

There is a decidedly better feeling in the stock market; the tide seems to have turned for the present at least. The "soft" spots in the market seem to have hardened, and the liquidation has been completed in the weaker securities. If this better feeling continues, and men wise in the mysteries of the "street" think it will, it is an indication full of promise for the trade of the country. The boom of 1879 commenced in Wall street, as did the business depression in the summer of 1881. A change for the better in the same quarter now would mean an improved feeling in all departments of trade further along. The country is full of money, our industrial machinery is in admirable order for a large business, and should confidence be even partially restored matters will mend for the remainder of the year. Real estate would undoubtedly get the benefit of this improved feeling should it continue.

There is trouble with labor in France due to over-building. The French are ahead of any other nation in using corporations for improving realty in large cities. It was the French who invented Credit Mobiliers for constructing railways and canals, and they have also been first in the field in using corporate wealth to rebuild sections of cities and improve neighborhoods which had decayed or were surrounded by unfavorable conditions. But the corporations were lured on by their success into excessive building, which has turned out to be unprofitable; hence the stories which reach us by cable of the discontent among the laborers connected with the building trade. The crisis has proved so serious that it has been the subject of anxious conferences in the cabinet meetings and frequent debates in the Chamber of Deputies. So far corporations have not been used to build houses in American cities, but it is very evident, before many years are over, that companies will take the place of individuals in building not only blocks but whole sections of the various cities. A company would not be so much embarrassed by questions of title as individuals now are. We are now also provided with an Exchange in which the shares of such companies could be dealt in.

The tenement house cigar statute has been declared unconstitutional by the Court of Appeals, because its enactment conflicted with that provision of the State constitution which provided that "no private or local bills which may be passed by the Legislature shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title." How strange it is that Legislatures composed almost exclusively of lawyers should persist in passing statutes so carelessly framed as to be in direct violation of the fundamental law. It is possible that in this particular case the lawyers who drew up the bill and had it passed intended to cheat the working people who demanded the enactment of this law, but still the fact remains that the tendency of all class legislation is to tax the community for the benefit of the ruling profession. The landlords who compose the bulk of the British legislators never forget the landed interest, and the lawyers who swarm in our State and national capitals do all they can to promote litigation. A case in point is our criminal law. Under recent rulings every murderer can have two trials, one before a court and then another on appeal before all the judges of that particular court. Now it is proposed to give a murderer three trials, and a bill is actually before the Legislature authorizing the Court of Appeals to re-try every criminal convicted in a lower court of law. Is it any wonder that the people of Long Island propose to take the law into their own hands when our courts fail to mete out punishment to the very worst offenders, and all for the purpose of swelling the bills of the lawyers? As for the tenement house cigar statute it is just as well that it was declared unconstitutional; had it been enforced it would have driven from New York an industry that supports some forty thousand persons. It would be a serious matter to East Side property were there to be no cigars made in tenement houses.

Missing his bray recently we supposed the donkey who some time since ventilated his unwisdom on the silver question in the columns of the Times had been suppressed; but his ears stuck out again on Thursday last when he was permitted to make that paper a laughing stock by declaring that the only persons interested in the price of silver were the American mine owners. This fool in finance actually did not seem to be aware of the fact that the mass of mankind use silver money in all their dealings. It is the sole money metal of Asia and a great part of Africa, as well as of Central and South America. Even in gold unit countries it is the money of all retail trade. Anything affecting the price of silver is of the highest personal interest to the myriads of working people who crowd this planet. The apparent depreciation in the price of silver made by positive law in England, Germany, the United States and a few other nations has caused widespread suffering over all the nations of the earth. Yet the Times and Herald actually permit writers access to their columns who know absolutely nothing of this vitally important matter. Mr. George Jones ought to "fire" that fool out of his editorial rooms.

THE RECORD AND GUIDE recently quoted Mr. Sharpe, the well-known English railway attorney, as saying that the two additional tracks should never have been constructed on the New York Central roadbed. He alleged that at the time Commodore Vanderbilt was laying the two additional tracks, the New York Central was used only six hours out of the twenty-four in transacting its great business. This statement of Mr. Sharpe's was supposed to be unwarranted, but General Winslow, of the West Shore Road, in an interview with a reporter of the Commercial Advertiser, says: "The New York Central road earns, so far as can be ascertained, between New York and Buffalo, about $2[illegible],000,000. The whole of this traffic could easily be carried over the New York, West Shore & Buffalo Railway on account of the superiority of its alignment, grades, and equipment. In other words, the two tracks of the West Shore Railway, when the sidings and terminal facilities provided are fully completed, will have the capacity of transporting all the present traffic of the New York Central Road. Mr. Vanderbilt has four tracks between Albany and Buffalo for handling this traffic." This statement will not be disputed by any competent railway man, and hence the criminal folly of building another road between Albany and Buffalo. It can be demonstrated that the Central with the same tracks could do all the through and local business of the Erie and Lackawanna as well as the West Shore; nay, more, if the Erie Canal should dry up, its enormous business in heavy freights could be easily handled in addition to all the traffic above mentioned by the Central road. Hence the hundreds of millions represented by the Erie, the Lackawanna extension and the West Shore has been more than wasted, as they will remain a debt upon which interest will perpetually be paid by the business and traveling public.

Proposed Removal of the Stock Exchange.

The talk about removing the Stock Exchange to Union Square is of course merely talk, but it brings to light what may be a defect in the organization of that important institution. It is composed almost exclusively of brokers—of mere traders on commission—who have no interest in the properties they deal in and no stake in the community. The Real Estate Exchange, for instance, has a membership representing the realty interests of this city. Such a body would never seriously propose to remove away from the neighborhood it had rendered valuable when the change would involve an enormous loss to innocent property holders. A removal of the Stock Exchange up town would cause a disturbance in values as great as the burning down of a first class city. It would render useless bank and office buildings which represent literally hundreds of millions of dollars. Of course this will not be done, but a body of mere brokers have it in their power to always threaten such a catastrophe.

Has not the time come when the great banking institutions and the owners of securities should have an Exchange of their own? Why allow a set of irresponsible brokers to have all to say in matters so vital as the handling of the securities of a continent? If the owners of railways had a pecuniary stake in the Exchange, there would be a check upon the speculative tendencies of that institution.

Let the property holders who would be ruined were the Exchange to be removed, organize at once and start a new institution of the same kind, but with a more solid and substantial membership. The mere agitation of such a scheme would soon bring the unruly brokers to their senses.

At the same time, it is undoubtedly true that the present Exchange building is too small for the work it will have to do. That the space is so limited is, however, due to the brokers' lack of foresight. They should have had the sense to see how their business was growing, and taken time by the forelock by securing the whole block bounded by Wall, New and Broad streets and Exchange place.

Before the system of elevated roads was established, there was some sense in talking about removing business up town; now, how ever, it is absurd to suppose that any Exchange will be established above the City Hall Park. Business always concentrates; it never in any large capital scatters.

Middle Broadway.

Several buildings have lately been put up in Broadway, between Union and Madison squares, which are either worth notice or which it is impossible to avoid noticing. The architecture of these two public places is particularly discouraging, and this is the greater pity, because the buildings which front them are so well seen. In Union square the pretty Decker building, now some fifteen years or more old, which was for a long time the only oasis, has been secluded by the projection of the buildings on either side of it. Of the newer buildings, that occupied by the Century Company, on the north side of the square, is respectable, moderate, straightforward and massive looking, even if it be prosaic and without any felicity in general disposition or in detail, so that its magnitude at least does not make it an offence.

It is much better than a structure now approaching completion at the northeast corner of Seventeenth street and Broadway. Over a basement of large openings between piers, there comes a division of two stories with the brick piers turned into pilaster with terra cotta capitals, and the space between them subdivided by iron columns also running through the two stories, and of very lanky proportions, the filling being mostly glass. Then there is one low story with brick piers and terra cotta capitals, bearing stone lintels, and above this again a repetition of the two grouped stories below, with a brick frieze and a sheet metal cornice. The general division is not effective, giving the building the look of two buildings set one on top of the other, nothing is made of the corner, an obtuse angle which was susceptible of a very effective treatment, and the commonplace of the design is not redeemed by any grace of detail. Indeed, the work would be scarcely worth talking about at all, except for its conspicuousness.

The Sloane building, a large building that looks very well lighted, and is not otherwise noticeable except for a treatment of a frieze in granite over the basement, which suggests that the real construction is invisible, has been done for two or three years. But diagonally opposite it, at the northwest corner of Broadway and Nineteenth street, is a building not yet quite done, which is one of the most noticeable of recent structures. The purpose of the designer was evidently to make it noticed, and he has succeeded. Nobody will find it feasible to overlook his work. It occupies a plot about 60 feet on Broadway by 100 on the street, and is, in spots, eight stories high. It is made out of brick, brown stone and iron. A very tall two-story basement, or rather a story and a mezzanine floor, is divided by long pilasters into three bays on the Broadway front and seven on the long front. The main entrance, surmounted by a steep ugly pediment of the advanced Queen Anne kind we know so well, is in the centre of the Broadway front. The windows on Nineteenth street are raised some feet above the sidewalk, and the spaces below them filled with brick panels senselessly projected from the enclosing brickwork instead of being recessed. The same irrational behavior is repeated above the basement, where projecting masses of brickwork, of which the projection, of course, simply loads the wall instead of strengthening it, are built out under the windows, possibly because the architect imagines them to be beautiful. The ironwork in this basement, which is partly imbedded in the brickwork, is singularly inappropriate in design, and looks as if it had been put in as an afterthought to stiffen an old wall, instead of forming a part of the design of a new one. Above, the architecture of each front consists simply of an enormous trellis of brickwork, also a familiar beauty of Queen Anne, thrown over the whole wall up to the main cornice. Above the parapet story shoot up steep gables, three on the short front and on the long one three unconcealed gables, and two masked with broken pediments, the central gable on this long side being the tallest of all. These are relieved against a steep mansard roof.

There are many other things, but one of them is the chief feature of the building. There is a turret which surmounts the truncated angle, and after clearing the walls is roofed with an open cupola of copper. The idea of the feature is not at all bad, but the treatment is unfortunate. It is not at all clear what the object is for, and the treatment of the rest of the building does not suggest that it is merely monumental architecture. Moreover it has not been studied in relation to the roofs of the building, being either too important or not important enough, and upon the whole does not look at home in its place. In itself it is much the best thing in the building, and if the building "lived up to it," the building would be much more effective and show a much less painful effort to be effective than it is and does.

There is no effort visible about the new building at the southeast corner of Broadway and Twenty-second street, which gives a grateful sense of moderation and repose. It has an ample frontage of 100 feet on Broadway by 120, or thereabouts, on the street, the angle being truncated so as to contain an ample doorway. There is a stone basement of piers and flat arches, which seem a trifle shallow for their work and are supplemented with iron straps. Above are three stories of square-headed openings with mullions and quoined jambs of stone in a wall of red brick, and a parapet story in stone with the lintels enriched with carving, over a well designed cornice. The long front is relieved by two projections gabled above. In the centre of each front is an entrance through a large and deep round arch with the soffit coffered. The truncated angle has a like arch in the basement, and an effective oriel running through the two stories above. Over this again is a pair of square-headed openings and a pediment above. The detail is everywhere studied successfully, in scale as well as in form. It is Elizabethan, or more properly Jacobean in type, and might be criticised as more appropiate to a dwelling than to a commercial building. But we do not get a piece of architecture so skilful and circumspect as this among the new work often enough to quarrel with the pleasure it gives us, both for what we receive and for what we have escaped.

Our Prophetic Department.

INVESTOR—Are your views still pessimistic, Sir Oracle? Do you think the bears are through with their raids and that the business situation is any better than it was?

SIR ORACLE—Several weeks ago I ventured to say that good securities paid such large profits at existing prices that it was not wise to operate on the bear side. I also said that the better state of feeling would first show itself in Wall street; well, I think the change has come. I look for a higher range of values between this time and April. No boom exactly but unless disaster occurs those long of stocks will make the same profit as did those who have been "short" since the summer of 1881. Prices have been "bumping along the bottom" for some time and the depression has been unwarranted by the actual condition of railway properties.

INVESTOR—You surprise me. Do you really think that the railway business of the country is as good as it was last year?

SIR O.—Quite the contrary; I believe the returns for the next three months will show a falling off in railway receipts, that is, taking into consideration the additional mileage of the new roads. I do not believe that the smaller business will affect the dividends of the great trunk lines, but some of them will find it difficult to keep up the six, seven and eight per cent. they now pay.

INVESTOR—Yet in face of these depressing circumstances you think stocks may advance?

SIR O.—Yes, that is my distinct impression of the situation. It is the mission of Wall street to discount all bad as well as good news. The falling off in receipts this spring was anticipated by the bears in their attacks on the various properties since last November. The tactics of "the street" now will be to anticipate the better business which may come from abundant crops and better prices next fall.

INVESTOR—But what new factor is there to predicate any change in the situation. Is the business of the country any better? Has not the recent advance been openly a matter of manipulation?

SIR O.—No, there is no new factor, but the situation has assumed a new aspect in view of the great shrinkage brought about by the vigorous and well-directed attacks of the bears. One of the straws showing a better state of feeling is the improved demand for iron. There have been more tools and machines bought and ordered recently than in any similar period in 1883. I confess to sharing the superstition, as it has been called, that the price of iron tells the story of the industrial situation. An improvement in that prime necessity in the world's work betokens the advent of a more hopeful feeling in all departments of business. But as I have said several times lately, the anomaly cannot long continue of a return of only three per cent. in government bonds, two and a half to three per cent. for money on call, four and a half to five per cent. in choice real estate, and six, seven, eight and even ten per cent. in the best securities daily sold on the street. There must be an equalization of values, or rather in the return made for investments of capital. Governments must come down in price, or stocks must advance. The latter, it seems to me, is the most likely to happen.

INVESTOR—But is it not clear that the recent flurry in stock values is wholly due to Jay Gould, Wm. H. Vanderbilt and the capitalists so largely interested in the mass of securities dealt in on 'Change.

SIR O.—Undoubtedly, the leaders in the street are those who make the first attempts to put stocks up or down. In speculation, as in war, it is not the army which takes the initiative, it is the general. The great bear leaders, Keene, Cammack, Woerishoffer and their associates had to try and try again before they had made any decided impression upon prices, but they saw the drift of things long before the bulk of the speculative fraternity, and were enabled to reap great profits from their foresight. But they have brought values so low that the time has come for the bull leaders to make their power felt, and hence naturally Gould, Vanderbilt, Sage and their compatriots are testing the market on the other side.

INVESTOR—But then I supposed you held to the view that the forced adoption of the gold unit of value would keep on depressing prices until such time as silver was restored to its old place as a money metal, and bi-metallism replace mono-metallism as the policy of the financial world.

SIR O.—I still hold to that view, but I have always made the distinction between the effect of mono-metallism upon business property, manufactured articles, as well as raw products, and the creditor class, the owners of bonds and securities and all with fixed incomes. The greater purchasing power of gold will benefit government officials and all who are in receipt of salaries and incomes. Holders of stocks and bonds which have a permanent value, as well as all who lend money, will profit largely by the enhanced value of gold. Great Britain is likely to remain mono-metallic, in view of the enormous income-receiving class and the great government officials whose every interest is opposed to the cheapening of money. Thus in Mr. Geo. J. Goschen's speeches on the subject he points out the fact that while cotton, grain and nearly all other mercantile commodities, including land, has been reduced in value from fifteen to forty per cent. in England since 1873, consols and good railway shares and debentures have advanced in value during the same period. What has occurred in England will take place here. Good railway securities of all kinds are certain to advance permanently as soon as the disturbances made by new and parallel lines are out of the way. There will, I judge, be little more trouble from either the Northern Pacific or the West Shore securities. The Nickel Plate has been absorbed and the owners of well-located roads can now confidently look for a steady appreciation of the securities they hold. Of course, there may be some unexpected disasters. Banks may fail, large operators come to grief or our crops might be blighted next summer, but exceptional disasters out of the way the next five years will see a steady advance in good railway securities.

INVESTOR—What basis of value affords the keynote to the real price of stocks?

SIR O.—Calling government bonds 3 per cent. and good real estate mortgages 4½, I should say that 5 per cent. is all that a good, certain dividend paying security should be expected to realize at par. By the way, I have been amusing myself by getting up a table showing the value of some of the securities in the street if put on this 5 per cent. basis, and the annual percentage they yield at about the present market prices. Here, for instance, are some sixteen good stocks, taken at random, and you will see it gives the dividends, what the market price was on January 28 and what the price would be on a 5 per cent. par basis:

Delaware, Lackawanna & Western...	118	8 p. c.	6¾ p. c.	160
Northwest	116¼	7 "	6 "	140
Rock Island	117½	7 "	6 "	140
Michigan Central	92¼	6 "	6½ "	120
Chicago, Burlington & Quincy	122	8 "	6½ "	160
Delaware & Hudson	107	7 "	6½ "	140
Pullman Palace	112	8 "	7 "	160
New Jersey Central	87	6 "	7 "	120
New York Central	114¼	8 "	7 "	160
M. M., 6's	77½	6 "	7¾ "	120
Canada Southern	52¼	4 "	8 "	80
St Paul	89	7 "	8 "	140
M. O. P	89	7 "	8 "	140
Lake Shore	97½	8 "	8¼ "	160
Union Pacific	77¼	7 "	9 "	140
Western Union	73¼	7 "	10 "	140

INVESTOR—You don't mean to say that stocks are going to have all that advance.

SIR O.—No, but you see there is a strong bull argument if you compare the present with possible quotations. You see if the dividends should fall off 1 or 2 per cent. per annum, still there is a margin for a substantial rise in the value of stocks. But there will be frequent reactions and a great disaster may make this forecast seem premature.

INVESTOR—Last week THE RECORD AND GUIDE thought the change would not come until some sort of crisis had been reached. There was to be a "snap of the whip" giving the assurance of bedrock figures before the genuine bull movement was commenced.

SIR O.—Yes, but we partially had this state of things when the West Shore bonds went down from 70 to 50 and 0.7, from 80 to 17. An ordinary street panic cannot occur when money is abundant. When money can be loaned on time for three and a half to four per cent., and the banks are full of unemployed capital, there is no possibility of an old-fashioned crisis.

The acting Secretary of the Treasury reports officially to Congress that in all $77,754,000 in gold had been paid in to the United States Treasury in exchange for silver certificates. The assistant treasurer at New York was permitted to do this by an act of Congress passed September 18, 1880—$13,958,000 was so deposited in 1880, $15,835,000 in 1881, $28,125,000 in 1882 and $20,839,000 in 1883—in other words, there would be only $142,305,789, instead of the $221,059,789 in the United States Treasury, were it not for the issuance of the silver certificates which the editorial writers of the Herald, Times, Tribune and Financial Chronicle and others regard as a "paper inflation" of an extremely pernicious character. Although the facts in the above are part of an official document issued by the Treasury Department to Congress it was suppressed in all the New York papers save the Tribune, probably owing to an oversight of some night editor who did not realize the official contradiction he was giving to the repeated statements in the editorial colums of that journal. This accumulation of gold by using silver or its paper representatve to take its place is a common and well known fact in the monetary operations of bi-metallic nations, especially in France. The writers in our daily press persist in saying that the use of silver drives gold not only out of the Treasury but out of the country, the fact being that the discrimination against silver drives it out of the country, as is shown by the other fact that there are nearly two dollars of gold in the Treasury to one of silver, and that three-fifths of the precious metals, coin and bullion in the countryis in gold, although we produce far more silver than gold in our mining industries. But our city papers read all these facts backward.

Over the Ticker.

HERE we are again. The bear raids disturbed the electrical currents on this line for two months past, but the Ticker may be expected to go on more regularly hereafter.

HENRY HART'S interview, published in this paper [illegible] months ago, foretold what is now happening in [illegible] Mail. Our readers were notified that the property was in splendid condition, and that a dividend would be declared before [illegible], for The price of the stock was then 38. It has been 46 during the week and will go higher.

THE money is on the bull side for the next six weeks. [illegible] bulges; buy on reactions. There is a decided increase in outside orders in the various brokers' offices.

C., C., C. & I. is one of the stocks in which there is pleasure money. It earned enough to pay a handsome dividend this past January, but wisely spent it so as to add to the future business of the road. One million two hundred thousand dollars was expended on the Alton & Terre Haute, which has been put in magnificent condition. But the stockholders of the C., C., C. & I., to whom this money belonged, will profit not only by the increased business rendered possible by this improvement, but will get a slice of a melon some day representing the outlay.

THE C., C., C. & I. will, with the Nickel Plate and Terre Haute, form an important link in a trunk line connecting St. Louis with the northern and eastern railway systems.

WESTERN UNION is one of the soundest and strongest stocks in the market, all the bear talk to the contrary notwithstanding. Its business and revenues are steadily increasing. It is a good stock to deal in, as at present figures it more than carries itself.

LAKE ERIE & WESTERN will take a jump some day. This road did not spend its money in high-priced times, but waited until iron and locomotives were low before getting a new equipment. For five months ending November 30 it earned a surplus of $102,487.36, although during that time the gross earnings fell off $84,000. It earns enough to pay all its expenses, the interest on its first mortgage bonds and 7 per cent. on its income bonds.

JAY GOULD is confident of a favorable decision on the Manhattan suits. The secret of the rise in new Manhattan, as compared with the old stock, is that the former is all owned by Gould, Sage and Field, and when the injunction is removed they want to offer an inducement to holders of the old stock to change into the new, so as to get a recognition from the stockholders of the validity of the merger agreement.

WHEAT is weak and will go lower, but it is the speculators and not the farmers who will get hurt.

COTTON is also a sale. The visible supply is very large. Cotton goods are in over-supply all over the world, while depressed business checks the demand of the working classes, the great consumers of cotton fabrics.

For canes and umbrellas, the natural wood sticks are in favor, the top may be finished in numerous devices, snipes' heads, crabs, clams, or the quaint and attractive Kate Greenaway figures.

Home Decorative Notes.

—If the study of art be guided aright, with deference to the varying tastes and opinions, it will have a greater influence on personal character than any other study; it cannot fail to become elevating and refining, and it expands our minds with sympathetic thoughts and feelings, giving expression to our character through the beautiful examples on which we muse, admire and collect.

—Grotesque heads of gold and oxidized silver, with eyes of red and yellow enamel, form a pair of peppers.

—Table mats are made of fine linen lined with canton flannel, and the edge finished with lace.

—Fancy work of all kinds is increasing greatly in popularity, and great pleasure is realized in lending a hand to home industries; true there are many household articles which apparently do not possess one jot of usefulness, still when wrought by loving hands possess their merit and laudable appreciation. Some choice and new designs in embroidery are shown by Mrs. T. G. Farnham, of No. 10 West Fourteenth street, beautiful plush piano and table scarfs, with ribbon and relief embroidery, bureau sets of satin, linen and crepe lisse in outline work, and oddly shaped chairs and tables, with attractive styles of hangings and decorations.

—Photograph albums of plush or velvet are now very fashionable; they open out flat, and are lined with satin or silk of some bright color.

—Panels and circles of stained glass, which has the effect of nuggets of gold, are framed in wood for transparencies.

—Very pretty waste-paper and work-baskets can be made of macreme cord, the shell or plain close crocheted work is very pretty, after it is finished dip the basket in white melted glue and mould it over a jar of the desired size, light ribbons should be run through the spaces, the basket should be lined with silk or satin.

—A baby's hammock or cradle may be crocheted of Seine twine in ng open stitches, run through the spaces colored ribbons, and suspend wi om pine poles at the hook where it is held attach clusters of ribbons, is may be termed a portable cradle, as it can be folded up in a very onel space.

ang Modern society rarely seeks to form its own taste, preferring to choose com eady made from the upholsterer. A very fine assortment of hand-Inde furniture is now displayed by J. W. Crossley, of 740 Broadway; exce any bedroom sets of elaborate carving and finish, richly upholTh drawing r om furniture, in which corner seats, beautiful in variety lighte finish, play a conspicuous part: there are highly ornamental and a friez y designed parlor tables, with half shelves for bric-a-brac, many constr plush, the square tables of mahogany with brass feet are very diago

—A delicate tea-cloth is of white linen or satteen strewn with sprays of wild flowers executed in outline work.

—In delicate and fine decoration nothing as yet takes the place so long held by linen, a mass of sweet pear or apple blossoms wrought upon fine linen are lovely designs for a toilette cushion, either fringe the edge or finish with lace, and fasten at each corner bows of ribbon or soft velvety-colored pom-pons.

—Modern furniture reflects the love of comfort, and people are calling for that which combines purity of tone, choice material and suitability of style for the place in view. Most luxurious and fascinating are the delicately carved and richly upholstered chairs of the Carlisle and Rockaway designs, now exhibited by Herts Bros., of 806 Broadway. Pedestals, round and square, of Mexican onyx, with brass mountings, the double easels of plush, with tasteful drapery, are quite new, and plush cabinets of bright scarlet, with oddly shaped rolling shelves and circles of bevelled glass, are very attractive.

—Window shades have geometrical figures outlined upon them in colored etching silk.

—Card trays are in the form of a bigonia leaf covered with plush; at one side is placed a bunch of field flowers in porcelain.

—It is very easy to make a breakfast or dinner table look bright and cheerful, it is indeed a difficult taste to satisfy that cannot find abundance of color and decoration such as will meet the most fastidious demand; in the matter of table linen the styles are varied and most exquisite, the preference is for French damask of the finest finish, the most expensive are so finely twilled that they are as lustrous as satin, the square cloths for breakfast and luncheon come in different sizes with colored borders, and are accompanied by doilies, tray cloths and napkins, the colored cloths are much used, and may be of buff, pink or blue. At J. McCutcheon's, of No. 10 East Fourteenth street, may be found a choice and rare selection of table linen.

—Colored India silk forms a delicate drapery for vestibule doors.

—A pretty bannerette design on a brown or black satin is the honeysuckle, it is very effective either embroidered or painted.

—Pretty pictures adorn the home and refresh and stimulate the mind when it becomes tired and indifferent; etchings have within the past few years become very popular, and many of the examples of individual artists' work are as valuable as their paintings. Many valuable etchings and engravings were recently noticed at the rooms of T. Mulcahy, of 670 Sixth avenue. Two choice etchings, called "The Inlet" and "The Old Mill," are by the late A. F. Bellows. A very popular and new subject is "Far Away," by J. G. Brown. Among the colored photogravures equally suggestive of a good water color may be mentioned "Soir d'Antomne" and "War in the Desert," after Shreyer. Particularly new styles of frames were shown of antique oak with bronze decorations.

An Unexpected Commercial Rival.

According to the census of 1850 New York contained a population of 515,543, and Brooklyn 98,838. At the date of the last census, 1880, after an interval of thirty years, we find New York containing 1,206,299 inhabitants and Brooklyn 566,663. In other words, the population of Brooklyn in 1850, compared with that of New York, was as one to about five and a quarter, while in 1880 it had risen to nearly one against two. The same ratio of increase would make our former suburb the rival of the metropolis in population during the next thirty years, and soon afterward give it a very decided lead. In the figures of the last census something had been gained to Brooklyn through annexation; but this is true, also, of New York, so that the element of enlarged boundaries has not so much force in the calculation.

But if the ratio of increase in population has been much larger in Brooklyn than in New York since the year 1850, the relative gain in commerce has been even more startling. Thirty years ago the water front interests in Brooklyn were exceedingly light, while New York, with nearly as many miles of dock improvements as she possesses now, saw her wharves thronged with ships and an intense activity displayed along both rivers. At the present date, while we discover many signs of paralysis in large sections of the New York water front, the activity is mainly manifesting itself along the Brooklyn side of the East River and the bay, a section already rivaling New York in the extent of its improvements. We know how the Erie Canal and coast line traffic has been gradually transferred to Brooklyn, but we are now beginning to find the import trade sharing the same fate. As Custom House reports are only made for the port of New York, without reference to the locality where merchandise is discharged, it is impossible to obtain statistics which will illustrate this subject fully; but a judgment may be formed by observing the points where Custom House inspectors are assigned to duty. Mr. Samuel M. Blatchford, Assistant Surveyor of Customs, tells us that the import trade is drifting away from New York and going largely to Brooklyn. The cities on the west side of the Hudson River, or at least the corporations that have their termini in those cities, secure also a certain proportion, but Brooklyn is the chief aggressor against New York trade.

It may be thought to matter very little where freights are loaded or unloaded while the commerce which they represent passes through New York houses. From a commercial point of view alone the location of wharves would not concern us so nearly; but there is an economic question in this case which concerns us very much. Every additional mile of improved water front in Brooklyn adds enormously to the population of that city, and increases, by very many millions, the value of property. But this circumstance, notwithstanding the fact that the tax departments of the two cities are very distinct, would not be a cause for jealousy in New York were it not becoming so very evident that the gains of our rival represent our own material losses. While individuals in New York may share in the profits of Brooklyn commerce the increment in property goes mainly to the latter city, the New York water front suffering a relative if not an actual decline.

We must not deceive ourselves with the idea that Brooklyn is hopelessly insular, a pale planet receiving its light and heat from its central sun on the west side of the East River. There is even danger that its relatively rapid growth, in comparison with this city, may be continued. We must learn to study geography in New York. We regard South Brooklyn as a very remote and inaccessible point. In their vague conceptions of locality and direction many men will be surprised when told that Fort Hamilton is about on the line of longitude that passes through the depot of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Jersey City; that the distance from the western end of Long Island to Elizabeth, N. J., where the Pennsylvania and Reading railroads intersect, is not much greater than the distance from the west bank of the Hudson River to Newark, and that a tunnel under the Narrows would not be much longer than either one of the three tunnels already completed through Bergen Heights, and probably not very much more expensive. Facts like these are not much considered in New York, yet they are likely to prove very strong factors in solving the problems of future growth. The truth is, Brooklyn is in no respect dependent upon New York even for the right of way to any very desirable point with which she may wish to open communication, and, with the almost limitless area within reach, she can make the most of all her advantages.

We have a natural pride in the prosperity of Brooklyn, on this side of the East River, and no desire whatever to check her growth. Indeed, were we narrow enough to wish to cripple her resources, we should find no encouragement from nature in making the attempt. The southern water front of New York harbor, which includes, with South Brooklyn, portions also of the town of New Utrecht and the north shore of Staten Island, was created to be the seat of a great commerce, and only some natural upheaval can prevent the fulfillment of its destiny. But we should not be asked to make the conditions of its growth more favorable than they have been made by nature. Even the resources of our great population and vast capital may be turned to the advantage of rivals if our affairs are not wisely administered. Population within such a limited circle is always liable to movements for a redistribution; and we are permitting the growth of conditions through which capital may at any time cross the ferries in the persons of the capitalists. There is no security for the future supremacy of New York so long as we are pursuing plans which are driving the shipping from our water front. When the proprietors of ocean steamship lines decide that it is no longer profitable to sail their ships north of Bay Ridge and Tompkinsville they will leave New York, not as they once went to Jersey City to be coaxed back again, but they will go to stay.

We cannot afford to rest in fancied security. A careful study of the commercial situation throughout the harbor exposes a strong southward movement of capital and enterprise, and, without a system of connected wharves and warehouses, New York city cannot reasonably expect to maintain a leading position. Unnecessarily distant from the sea she is exceedingly limited in area. Her competitors share every advantage in the harbor, and within ten years conditions can be prepared which will make it unnecessary to the success of any line of steamers trading to the port of New York to approach her piers.

To confess the truth terminal machinery which compels the use of drays for the handling of heavy merchandise only in process of transportation through the city on the streets deserves only to be approached by lighters on the water.

Concerning Men and Things.

George Alfred Townsend has been tried for a libel upon "Josh Hart." "Josh" is a Jewish gentleman who has a history. He started a variety show which Harrigan and Hart made so profitable that the manager realized a fortune. Hart labored under the mistake of supposing it was his management and not the humorous talent of his employees which brought the money into his treasury. He found out his blunder, however, when Harrigan and Hart opened their own theatre. His management of the Standard Theatre cost him a pretty sum of money. His next important venture was in journalism, in which he had the co-operation of Lewis F. Post, a man of character and brains, together with a number of persons with plenty of ability but no character at all. "Josh" is said to be overbearing and rapacious with his employees and all the clever fellows have left his paper, which has lost ground lately through the establishment of the Morning Journal. It is difficult to see how George Alfred Townsend could injure the character of Mr. Hart. Townsend, by the way, is one of the few correspondents who retains his attractiveness as a writer while doing the work of three ordinary journalists. He has the distinction of making more money by his pen than any regular daily contributor to the press.

Marshal Tooker has again turned up as a manipulator of the press in the interest of certain theatrical managers. It was he who invented the ingenious yarn about "Deception's" being found in a forgotten pigeon-hole in Wallack's Theatre. It was expected that the mystery would pique public curiosity, but Lester Wallack has some scruples and would not work the "racket" in the way the wily Tooker planned. But the piece has, nevertheless, been successful with the public, who don't seem to care to know who its author is. "Deception" is really a plagiarism from the German, the adaptation being made by Dion Boucicault. Marshal Tooker is the conductor of the printing establishment which formerly belonged to the Herald, but he ought to be kept in the pay of a wide-awake manager for his admirable talents as an advertising agent.

It can no longer be said that there is no American drama. Bartley Campbell's "Separation" is an admirable comedy, not equal of course to the best work of the French and English dramatists, but the play has been wisely planned and deftly handled. Mr. Campbell and Bronson Howard can fairly claim to rank with the second-best foreign dramatic writers. More than three-fourths of the entertainments now offered at our various theatres were constructed by American playwrights. Bartley Campbell was right in saying that the time would come when the American playwright would have his country villa as well as the popular actor.

The seed sown in the establishment of a Real Estate Exchange in this city has it seems already proven fruitful. A number of the leading brokers of Chicago have organized a Real Estate and Rent Agents' Association, with the intention of dealing in realty on a plan similar to that proposed by our new Exchange. Daily meetings of half an hour will be held during the month of February, and although the movement is looked upon as novel, its success is believed to be assured. Elated by the immediate support secured for the project, the organizers celebrated its inauguration by a banquet at the Palmer House, which was attended by a number of gentlemen prominent in real estate circles to whom the plans of the association were explained. The result was a hearty endorsement of the movement and a large increase in the list of applicants for membership.

The friends of a certain professor in the New York College think he was rather harshly treated in an article on that institution in a recent number of The Record and Guide. We have no wish to do injustice to a gentleman we have never met, but it seems there was a mistake in saying that the fine new laboratory of the college was made use of only three hours a week. It seems that the curriculum of study prepared by the Board of Education, and to which all the professors must of course conform, provides for seven hours of laboratory work; four for the senior and three for the junior classes. This, with the explanatory lectures, takes up some nine hours of the professor's time. But the Board of Education, we are informed, are considering new regulations, making still further use of the laboratory for the benefit of the students. If they are wise they will strengthen the professorial force connected with the laboratory so as to utilize it not only for study hours but for work in the afternoon, similar to that in the Columbia College School of Mines, where students are permitted to use the laboratory during daylight. Our only interest in this matter is to turn the New York College into a great technical school to help the leading industries of New York. In doing so we have no wish to do injustice to any of the present professors.

A committee representing the principal firms engaged in the manufacture of glazed pipe or tile have petitioned the Board of Health to permit the use by builders of glazed pipe for drainage purposes instead of, as now, compelling them to use iron pipe. Our readers will remember that a bill to permit the use of glazed pipe was introduced into the Legislature a year ago and its passage strongly advocated, not only by the manufacturers, but by many prominent builders and plumbers. The result was the bill was sent to the Governor by an almost unanimous vote of both Houses, It was unfortunate that the bill did not pass until at the end of the session. as Governor Cleveland was compelled through stress of business to deny the subject proper consideration and, being laid over, the bill failed to become a law. Argument on the petition will be heard by the Board on Tuesday next.

It is believed that railway earnings will show a falling off for the next few months, but it will not follow that the securities of the roads will be of any less value. For the past two years and a-half the problem of all the great corporations has been how to decrease expenditures. Operating expenses have been steadily cut down, and hence many roads with smaller gross earnings than in previous years have larger net returns. The Lake Erie & Western, for instance, had much smaller gross earnings in 1883 than in 1881 and 1882, but its net earnings have materially increased. The poor corn and winter wheat crops account for the falling off, but the better management and stricter economy for the past year more than made up the difference. This road is potentially in an admirable condition. It is about to build 43 miles of track from Bloomington to Peoria, which will give it a share in the second greatest railroad pool in the country. This improvement will cost a million dollars, nearly all the bonds for which have been subscribed. The $830,000 of stock which the new road will represent will go into the Lake Erie & Western treasury. The Lake Shore would very gladly guarantee the first mortgage and income bonds of this company if the latter were willing, but the future of the road is so brilliant that its owners prefer for the present to retain their own property. There will be no construction company made use of to build the 43 miles of new road, that work will be done by the officers of the Lake Erie & Western. The excellent condition of this company is repeated in the recent history of many other railway corporations. Labor is willing to accept smaller returns, and steel rails, cars, locomotives and all materials have been reduced so greatly in price as to more than make up the difference in the business of this season compared with apparent of more prosperous times.

A correspondent wishes us to advocate the extension of the Fourth Avenue Elevated Road through the Central Park. He thinks that this can certainly be accomplished in the fulness of time, and he believes that if it done now it would be to the advantage of the present generation. But we decline to advocate any such measure. Even were it desirable it would be impossible to persuade the public that it was not a job for the benefit of the elevated roads, and that would be fatal to it. It is quite enough to have the elevated system running through streets near the park. There is not a journal or a public man in the city but would protest against steam cars whizzing over head in the city's great pleasure ground.

A well-known and reputable firm of up-town real estate brokers write to us complaining of the action of the directors of the Real Estate Exchange in purchasing the Liberty street property. We do not see that any good can come to make these complaints public. The directory includes among its members some of the oldest and best-trained brokers in this city. It will be time enough to call them to account at the annual meeting to be held next December. If, by that time, they can show that the money has been so invested as to pay all the running expenses of the Exchange, and furnish accommodations for auctioneers and dealers, we have no doubt that our correspondent would be among the first to offer resolutions thanking the directors for the good work they have done; but complaints just at present seem premature.

A reader of The Record and Guide, and a "retail dealer," suggests the construction of arcade buildings on the principal streets, such as are to be seen on the great thoroughfares in the European cities. He thinks parts of Broadway, Sixth avenue, Fourteenth and Twenty-third streets suitable for the purpose, and believes that the investment would yield a good return on the outlay.

The property holders in the neighborhood of the Bloomingdale lunatic asylum are very much opposed to the bill in the Assembly forbidding the laying out of streets on the property belonging to that institution. It comprises, it seems, at least eight complete blocks, and it would certainly inconvenience the public were there to be a legal prohibition to the opening of streets through this comparatively large parcel of land. The property holders would be quite willing to have this ground turned into a public park, if the institution is willing to make the land a present to the public, but they do not like the ground being indefinitely locked up and kept unimproved. The lunatic asylum people, doubtless, object to paying the costs for the assessments for the improvements needed, but why not sell a portion of this large tract of ground so as not to retard the improvement of the neighborhood?

Editor Record and Guide:

In The Real Estate Record of May 31, 1879, it is stated the Supreme Court has decided that when a contract of sale is not carried out by reason of default of the seller, a lien exists on the land purchased in favor of the vendee when a part of the purchase has been paid. You give no names or date, and we have looked in reports for said decision, and can find none. Can you favor me with names so we can find same? G. W. Ditchett.

Reply—The present law editor of The Record and Guide was not in charge in 1879, and we are unable to recall the particular decision then referred to. But in the case of V. K. Stevenson against Spratt and others, decided by the General Term of the New York Superior Court in 1874, Judge Monell, delivering the opinion of the Court, decided that Mr. Stevenson, the vendee for the advances made by him ($1,000) acquired a lien upon the land to the extent of the seller's interest; but that he had no lien for what it had cost him to search the title ($235.28). [Stevenson vs. Spratt, 35 N. Y. Superior Ct., Rep. 496.] This decision was based upon principle and precedent, and has not since been reversed or modified. And in 1881 the General Term of the New York Supreme Court, Fourth Department, explicitly declared the same doctrine, and ordered the premises to be sold unless the seller paid up within thirty days. The Renting Market.

All the brokers say that it is premature as yet to forecast the prices that may prevail during the renting season, which, for all save the dry-goods district, opens on the first of February. The statements in the Tribune of Thursday were those of a very confident broker, whose bull enthusiasm is not by any means shared by the other Pine street and Trinity building brokers.

The stock brokers are determined to enforce a reduction in office rents. All the talk about moving the Exchange up town is simply to coerce the landlords to make some concession in rents this spring. Undoubtedly the rentals charged for good accommodations are high and there will probably be some concession. There will, however, be plenty of accommodations in buildings without elevators or which are in other ways undesirable. Buildings with elevators are now demanded by all who think of hiring offices above the ground floor. There will be no lack of cheap offices down town at a distance from the leading exchanges and where the buildings are old fashioned.

The conservative brokers agree that on the whole there will be some concession in general rentals. First-class store property its own, as will also fair house property. High priced fancy residences will not do as well this year as last nor will low-priced flats. It is the very rich and the poor who have been most hurt by the shrinkage in business. There will probably be a good demand for medium houses suitable for the middle class.

E. S. Cruikshank & Co. report that they will not make any concessions for reason that they have never insisted upon the highest prices, but have is moderation upon the part of their clients. So far they have not oned property at any lower price than last year or the year before. ang increase in the number of exchanges during the past year and the com of branches for business conducted previously in other localities Ind course led to a demand for offices not only down town but in all parts e city. There is still a constant addition to the number of new enter- ises and, notwithstanding the weeding-out process which is going on, due to the business depression, swarms of new-comers fill the vacant places and even demand additional accommodations.

All accounts agree that the poorer tenement houses and flats must be rented lower this year than last. High priced flats more pretentious than substantial will not be in such great demand this year but suites of rooms in convenient, well built apartment houses will be in demand. To sum up—

There will be a struggle down town for lower rentals of offices near the exchanges.

There will be plenty of offices to rent cheap in buildings without elevators.

The principal reductions will be in high priced house property and poor tenement property.

Small and medium houses, renting from $1,000 to $3,000, will be in demand; $4,500 to $6,000 houses will drag.

Fancy store property will not be so high priced but upper stories and lofts for business purposes and small manufacturers will command fair rentals.

Good flats in substantial apartment houses will rent readily.

But on the whole the outlook is not as satisfactory for the landlords as it has been for three years past.

Realty at Albany.

ALBANY, January 31.

A bill has been introduced in both Houses amending the Ramapo Water Act of last year by adding new sections to the bill. These authorize the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund to enter into contracts for a supply of water for the extinguishment of fire and for sanitary purposes, from other sources than that provided in the bill of last year, with like authority to purchase the works after the expiration of a fixed number of years. This measure is understood to be in the interest of parties who have plans for the establishment of a reservoir, into which water can be pumped from the river and pipes laid to conduct it to all portions of the city, to be used for the cleaning of the streets and extinguishment of fires. It is said that some of the leading underwriters favor this plan as a means of procuring water for extinguishment of fires quicker and cheaper than by any other mode.

A bill has been reported in the Assembly to set apart Pier 21 and the bulkhead between that and Pier 22 for the accommodation of vessels engaged in the transportation of tropical fruits. The same bill was here last year.

The bill empowering the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund to set apart any plot of land belonging to the city not already appropriated for public use, for station houses and sub-station houses, and also for locations for houses for the use of the Fire Department has been reported. The immediate purposes of the bill is for station houses in the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth wards.

Mr. Binder, of New York, has introduced an important bill relative to the fees to be charged for searching titles for back taxes and Croton water rents in New York city. Its text is as follows:

SECTION 1. The fees or charges of official searchers for taxes, assessments and sales for unpaid taxes in the city and county of New York shall not, after the passage of this act, exceed the sum of two dollars for any search against or affecting any one piece of property or lot, and extending over a period of less than five years, and for a period more than five years not more than five dollars.

SEC. 2. The fees or charges of the searchers for Croton water rents against any one piece of property in said city shall be one dollar for any search extending over a period less than five years and two dollars and fifty cents for any period exceeding five years.

This reduces the searcher's fees one-half on each for the five years' search and more than that on the longer term, the fees now being five dollars for taxes and the same amount for assessments, when a period of five years are gone over, and from ten to fifteen dollars when search is made for more than that. The charge proposed makes the cost of searches on one lot for five years, for taxes, assessments and Croton water all combined, five dollars, instead of twelve under the present law.

The bill amending and revising the building laws for New York city has been introduced in the Assembly. It is the same as that introduced in the Senate by Mr. Daly. No action has been taken by the committee of either House on the measure.

The Senate Committee has favorably reported bills for two new parks. One is to be located at Coenties Slip, and the other at Corlears Hook, on the east side. The latter is similar to that which passed the Assembly last year, and the other a new measure. Both place it in the hands of the Board of Commissioners of Street Openings to decide what property shall be embraced in the parks.

The bill changing the name of Stuyvesant square to Cooper Park, in honor of Peter Cooper, has been favorably reported in the Senate.

Dwight H. Olmstead and ex-Assemblyman Deering appeared before the Senate Committee on Tuesday in opposition to the bill prohibiting the Board of Street Opening Commission from opening streets through the grounds of the Bloomingdale Asylum. They claimed that it would be a great injustice to the property-owners in that vicinity, who had been heavily assessed for other improvements in that section, and delay the building up of that section between Morningside Park and the asylum grounds, to enact the law prohibiting the cutting of streets through these grounds. The advocates of the bill assert that if the streets are cut through, one of them will go through the asylum buildings. The committee reported the bill favorably yesterday. The Senate ordered it to third reading to-day. It will pass that body early in the week. It has already passed the Assembly.

The Senate Committee to-day reported the bill to prohibit tunnelling under Washington square, or the erection of any railroad on or across it. This bill has passed the Assembly. Its purpose is to keep the Hudson River Tunnel from coming out in the park.

A bill is before the Senate to provide for the erection of or purchase of buildings by the city for municipal purposes, and the removal of the Hall of Records, now used by the Register of Deeds. It authorizes the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund to select and locate from time to time a site or sites upon which to erect building or buildings for municipal purposes, which shall include suitable space for the Register's office and for such other departments as said Commissioners may deem requisite for the transaction of the official business of the city and county. Authority is given to locate such buildings in any park in the city except Central Park, or on any land owned by the city, or they may purchase land on which to erect such buildings.

When a site is selected, they may require the Commissioner of Public Works to prepare plans and specifications for the building, to be submitted to the Sinking Fund Commissioners for approval. When they decide to erect the buildings it shall be done under contract and under the supervision of the Commissioner of Public Works, the bids or proposals to be opened by the Sinking Fund Commissioners and the contract awarded by them.

The fourth section of the act gives the Sinking Fund Commissioners discretion to purchase a building or buildings actually erected at the date of purchase, and make such alterations necessary to adapt the building to the purposes of the city.

Power is given for the issue of bonds to carry out the provisions of the act, in erecting, purchasing or altering buildings. As soon as other quarters are provided for the Register the Hall of Records is to be torn down.

The Railroad Commission has not perfected either of the bills being prepared by the Commissioners to provide for the construction of street or horse railroads in cities and villages of the State. They expect to have the bills ready to present to the Legislature early next week.

The promoters of the plans to enlarge the powers of the underground railroad project for New York, so as to allow the construction of a four track railroad under Broadway, on the arcade plan, have arrived here, and are preparing for the introduction of their bill. They have the plans under which the London underground railroad was constructed under large monuments and buildings, without in the least disturbing either, to meet the objection heretofore raised, that the construction of the road will disturb the foundations of buildings on that thoroughfare. If, as the Commissioners to Locate Parks in the Annexed District state, the population of the city of New York doubles every seventeen years, some other roads for rapid transit besides the elevated roads will be needed as soon as they can be constructed. In the hours of the rush, morning and evening, the elevated lines are now taxed to their full capacity.

Searching the Records.

In New York an innocent purchaser is held by the Courts to be bound by the record of a deed in the Register's office, even if the Register should have forgotten to index the names of the parties, etc., which seems rough on the innocent purchaser, although the innocent owner of the property, under the deed not indexed, may well claim that his property may not rightfully be sold away from him, or mortgaged, to the injury of his title, simply because the County official made a mistake in his duty. Butin Kentucky, last December, it was decided, in the case of Elliott vs. Harris, that as it appeared "that the deed was recorded in 1854, and that the records of the county are large, covering a period of eighty years, that the appellant and predecessors had not resided in the county since 1861; that during the war the deed book and indexes thereto were so mutilated and torn that no reasonable amount of labor could have discovered the deed, and that every examination was made, except turning over the leaves one at a time, to find the deed without success. . . . No amount of diligence, in the eye of the law, could have discovered the deed, because the law does not require the appellant to do more than search for the deed in the usual way by the aid of the indexes and aid of the clerk, whose duty it is to index the deed books used by him in recording deeds. He was not bound to turn page by page to find a deed embraced by so cumbersome a record, and he had the right to be content after having made reasonable search and failed to find it. Public authority should provide for indexing the deed books whose indexes are lost or destroyed, and until this be done such books are not entitled to the legal force or validity of public records for the purposes of notice to all who may be affected by their contents."

So that anyone examining a title in that State need not go beyond the index in each book. What would that Kentucky Court have said to the 3,600 volumes of records in our New York Register's office? The proper safeguard to be adopted in our big city is to have a locality index, showing every conveyance as against the lot (just like taxes), and not against names, which may be misspelled, and may own or convey many different pieces of property. Our new Exchange will have it all right by-and-by, for its directors are awake to the duties and advantages of its position.

Real Estate Department.

Another dull week has passed, but some large transactions in real estate are, it is understood, being negotiated. The attendance at the Exchange during the week was quite small, but then outside of the foreclosure sales there was little that was attractive offerred. The lack of interest shown by the public is doubtless in part due to the insufficient advertising. Of all the auctioneers, only three or four make any effort to call the attention of investors to their sales. The throngs which attend Mr. Harnett's and Mr. Ludlow's stands is due to the wide publicity they give to the properties they offer. The outlook brightens. During this month there will be several important sales. One of them is the partition sale which will be held on February 6th, by E. H. Ludlow & Co., of the valuable brick and stone office building No. 54 Wall street near William street, and covering a plot about 50.4x115. Office property of this description is seldom offered at public sale, and being so well located, there will undoubtedly be a large attendance and spirited bidding at the sale. The latter will in some measure be a test of the prices now ruling in Wall street property, and in the immediate vicinity of the Exchange.

On the same day, Richard V. Harnett will sell two three-story and basement brick dwellings and one two-story brick house on the north side of One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street, Nos. 215, 217 and 219 East. These dwellings are medium sized and of the kind for which there has recently developed a strong demand.

On Tuesday, A. H. Muller & Son will sell, by order of executor, the four-story and basement marble front office building, No. 33 Nassau street, opposite the new structure of the Mutual Life Insurance Company. As values must have increased, owing to the erection of the last mentioned building, the offering should prove an attractive one.

Mr. Leon Tanenbaum, of No. 96 Spring street, is making a specialty of renting and selling property below Fourteenth street. He has lately made some important sales and leases, and offers for sale some desirable parcels. His advertisement will be found elsewhere.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the sale of two five-story double tenements, No. 190 Elizabeth street, which will take place on Thursday, Februarv 7, at the Exchange.

PROJECTED BUILDINGS.

The number of plans filed for January, 1884, compared with the same month in 1883 shows a heavy falling off, as will be seen by the annexed table. But then last year there was an exceptionally large number of plans filed during the first three months. It will be noticed that every section of the city shows a decrease in the building plans with the exception of the annexed district and the region just east of the Central Park. The year does not commence well for the building interest of New York.

Engineer Answered.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

SIR—"Engineer," in a letter published in your issue of January 26th, in reply to Mr. Clinton's letter, and relating to the granite piers of the Mutual Life building, quotes, as authorities, "Hodgkinson, Box and others 'Formulas for Iron Columns 12 to 15 diameters.'"

These formulas are deduced from experiments on iron columns in one piece, and are not applicable to masonry piers built of blocks.

If these formulas were applicable, then it follows that an iron column 12 to 15 diameters high, built of short lengths laid up in mortar, after the manner of masonry, would be as strong as one of equal sectional area cast in one piece, which is obviously incorrect.

In the absence of reliable tests of the strength of masonry piers of large ratio of length to diameter we are only justified in using them with liberal factors of safety.

CIVIL ENGINEER.

Building in 1883.

Early in the month of January THE RECORD AND GUIDE published a table of the number and classes of new buildings for which plans were filed in 1883, and their estimated cost. We are now enabled to publish the official figures relating to the same subject, as contained in the report of the Inspector of Buildings recently handed to the Fire Commissioners. The comparison with the business of 1882 will be found more favorable than had been anticipated.

Contractors' Notes.

Estimates for preparing for and building a crib-work bulkhead at foot of 73d street, East River, including the proper grading of its approach, will be received by the Commissioners of Docks, at Nos. 117 and 119 Duane street, until 12 o'clock M. of Monday, February 11, 1884.

The question of the disposal of the sewage of large cities has for years been a perplexing problem. In London extensive works have long been in operation which transform the sewage of that city into a readily-handled fertilizer, which is eagerly sought by the market gardeners. A paragraph has for some time been going the rounds of the press giving figures showing a handsome profit on the cost of constructing a sewer which conducts the sewage of Pullman, Ill., to a farm a few miles distant owned by the city. Boston is now trying the experiment of depositing its sewage in deep tide water. The construction of the conduit and necessary pumping works has been $4,544,272, and the work is alluded to as a great engineering feat.

Special Notices.

W. A. Collins has a large amount of Staten Island property for sale and rent, including valuable water fronts and manufacturing sites. He reports a great demand on the island for dwelling houses that will rent from four to six hundred dollars annually. Mr. Collins, it may be said, has grown up in the real estate business on Staten Island and is thoroughly conversant with that interest in all parts of the same.

We refer our readers to the twenty-fourth annual statement of the Washington Life Insurance Company. This reliable institution reports an increase in the net assets for the year ending December 31st, 1883, of half a million more than the preceding year. The "questions of vital interest to insurers" published in addition to the statement, will be found interesting queries and suggestive reading.

From the announcement made in our advertising columns it will be seen that the Real Estate Chronicle has changed its day of publication from Saturday to Sunday morning, when it will be issued as a business paper. Its owners seem to think it will be profitable to fill this now vacant ground. Doubtless there are many who would like to see some of the earlier numbers. The Sunday papers are generally filled with trashy matter, and if people must have secular reading on the Sabbath, accurate business matter is preferable to sensational fictions; and, as the Chronicle intends to supply plenty of the former, there would seem to be every possibility of success in its new departure.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—In pretty much all general particulars the conditions of the market for Common Hards remain about the same as for some time advised. Demand is moderate, slow and uncertain, and while the new offerings reach only moderate proportions and come almost entirely from New Jersey or Long Island, they have thus far proven a fair balance to the outlet offered. The situation is to a very large extent dependent upon the weather, and the cold and storms have seriously interfered with operations this winter. Whenever it brightens up and moderates sufficiently to render out-door work at all safe contractors push matters, and this finds some reflection upon the jobbing and wholesale market, but not to a large extent by any means, as many of the largest jobs have a supply piled and draw upon that instead of becoming sources of additional demand against parcels in first hands. The dealers send out a little stock but have found deliveries difficult, and make none except as a matter of necessity. There is quite a little amount of held brick afloat since the close of the season, on which the price is more or less uncertain, but it looks as though holders would be willing to part with their stocks whenever they could obtain bids calculated to fairly let them out without positive loss or possibly afford a small margin for profit. Sellers' ideas of bottom prices are $7 for Jerseys, $8 for Long Islands, and $8.50 for Haverstraws. Pales move slowly at within the range of $4 for ordinary to $4.50 for choice lots.

CEMENT.—No change of a radical character can be noted, though, if anything, the tendency is to speak quite cheerfully over the market as compared with some of the views expressed at the turn into the new year. Immediate local consumption has not afforded much aid, owing to the slow and uncertain progress of building operations, but shipping orders afforded quite a fair outlet and at full rates in nearly all cases. Foreign goods, especially, have benefited, and while the monthly arrivals have been rather full, about all seem to have disappeared and none of the leading importers can now offer stock except to arrive. Prices, naturally, are held steadily all around. Recent advices from Havana, Cuba, report: Current classes continue abounding and fairly sought after at from $2¾@3 bbl.; Portland is also plentiful and in moderate demand, at from $5@5¼ do. Plaster, though scarce, also, is duller at from $3@3¼ bbl.

GLASS.—There is little or no change of decided character in the general conditions of the market, the buyer steadily gaining an advantage. The Western production has not been resumed, but the New Jersey manufacturers have finally caught up to, and overrun the demand for domestic, and, with an accumulating stock, values very easily change to a weaker tone. The position is also influenced by full supply and easing off on the imported goods, of which the offering has been quite free.

HARDWARE.—The condition of business has been by no means active, but still, on the whole, a trifle fuller than a week or so ago, and dealers generally appear to feel confident that a little patient waiting will bring them a more satisfactory market. It is claimed that even if only enough be taken to fill out an ordinary assortment buyers will have to handle a considerable quantity of stock, and an increase of consumption must result in a duplication of orders. On most standard goods values are held with some degree of steadiness and about old valuations retained, but in a few instances irregularity develops. This has been especially marked on screws, and the leading companies fail to agree. The American Screw Company quote at discount 70 per cent. on flat-head iron screws; 65 per cent. on round-head do.; 70 per cent. on flat-head brass, and 60 per cent. on round-head do. Russell Erwin Company quote 75 per cent. flat-head iron, 70 per cent. round-head do.; 75 per cent. flat-head brass, and 65 per cent. round head do. On copper rivets and burrs the trade discount has been fixed at 45@50 per cent. from the recent carefully revised list LATH.—It is not in the natural order of things that there should be much of a wholesale market at this season. Supplies come forward slowly and irregularly, and after cargoes get here the delivery is uncertain. Receivers, however, look upon matters with a great deal of cheerfulness and confidence, and if all their expressed expectations are realized buyers are to have very little chance for some time to come. No stock is ready to come forward it is claimed, and especially the attractive qualities, and the assertion that dealers are lightly stocked and ready and willing to replenish is repeated. Early in the week a lot of 200 M sold at $2.75 per M to outside parties. Later there were no buyers above $2.50, but subsequently supplies dropped to a very low point, and at the close the last named figure was quoted as the bidding basis, and asking rates ranging as much higher as the confidence of receivers might dictate.

LUMBER.—Operators who have been so fortunate as to secure a portion of the trade done since the first of the year are in fairly cheerful mood, and their reports take form in accord therewith. Others, however, who have obtained few or none of the going local specials or f. o. b. orders assume a very dejected mood, and we find in some instances a disposition to deprecate the extent and importance of the business transacted by their more favored neighbors. Taking into consideration, however, the more or less gloomy feeling with which the year opened, the results of the first month's operations are by no means unpromising, and there is reasonable hope that the selling interest can at least hold its own, if it does not make a further gain as the weather becomes more open. Immediate local consumption has not been particularly important, and the same hesitancy about preparing for the future may still be noted, but a great many doubts will ultimately have to be settled in favor of some amount of stock, and create so much additional demand. There has, however, been a considerable quantity of stuff sold to be shipped from the accumulation at this point, which, in conjunction with orders taken for shipment direct from the mills, has afforded opportunity for a fair degree of work. Quite a portion of the business, and especially in Yellow Pine, came over from last year, to be sure, but it has made a sale for enough stuff to start a great many saws, and it is probably best to accept a hopeful view of the situation. The Northern and Western cut of logs is already full, and the general promises are that the harvest will be secured.

Eastern Spruce is lacking in stimulating elements, but the market has support enough to keep it steady for anything attractive and useful on our local market, so long as supplies do not greatly increase. Of that there does not appear to be much immediate danger, as the productive capacity of the mills at work is not very extensive, yet it would not take but a few additional cargoes to create uneasiness among receivers, which in nearly all cases becomes the forerunner of weakness. The yards have not yet distributed enough stock to make dealers feel in any great hurry about replenishing, but useful sizes are standard and at old cost would be handled fairly. Log cutting in the woods has been pretty liberal, but manufacturers claim to have nearly worked up old stocks and will want the new as soon as runs can be made. On the general range the old figures are named at $13.50@16.00 for random, and $16.00@17.00 and possibly $17 50 for special, according to quality.

White Pine has found moderate favor on local account, probably no positive increase, and dealers in some instances are disposed to complain and feel a little discouraged. It is almost certain, however, that in the natural order of things consumption must make some growth as spring approaches, and the offerings are not urged. This is especially the case for manufactured goods, builders' calls being a little more doubtful. In the meantime exports are fair and at good rates, with offerings more careful. We quote $18 50@22.00 for West India shipping boards; $28.00@30.00 for South American do.; $17.00@18.00 for box boards, and $18.50@19.00 for extra do.

Yellow Pine as a rule is steadily held and in some instances a tendency to talk pretty firm. We find, however, that the latter view is based largely on what has already been done and not so much upon present or prospective business. Indeed buyers do not appear to have scared in any way over the prominence given a few large contracts recently concluded, nor do they believe that the influence upon the delivery of supplies will be felt except occasionally at points where the orders are or will be in progress of execution. The South, in fact, is still well stocked, the facilities for moving supplies are ample and with manufacturers retaining much of the old competitive spirit anything in the way of positive buoyancy is held in check. Supplies here are fair and in most cases readily offered. We quote as follows: Randoms, $20@22 per M; Specials, $21@23 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $24@25; Dry do., do., $25@26; Step Plank, $30@35 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $14@16 for rough, and $19@21 for dressed. Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports $13@15 for rough, and $18@20 for dressed.

Hardwoods are firm enough on desirable stuff, with a good average demand prevailing and no very liberal quantity calculated to meet buyers' views at present within reach. Nice lots of maple and good cherry and ash all appear to have receiv[illegible]tle more attention of late. The through export movement has been very fair this winter. We quote at wholesale rates by car-load about as follows: Walnut, $65@110 per M; ash, $35 @40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, $40@75 do.; whitewood ⅛ and ⅝ inch, $25@30 do., do., and do. inch, $28@38; hickory, $45@55 do.

Shingles, while not over abundant, are not much wanted. Only small export orders come to hand and on home account nothing at all is wanted just now. We quote Cypress at $8 per M for 5x20 and $10 do. for 6x20 regularly assorted shipping; Pine shipping stock $2.50 for 18 inch, and Eastern saw grades at $2.50@4.50 for 16 inch, as to quality and to quantity. GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

THE WEST.

The Chicago Northwestern Lumberman as follows:

CHICAGO.

AT THE YARDS.—While business has been quite dull for the past week there is a slight improvement noticeable in the demand, and sales have been a trifle better than they were the preceding week, although as yet the improvement has not become altogether general, nor have the sales been large. With a very few exceptions the dealers report an increased demand from the country for estimates on bills, together with a few sales that denote the trade is not dead, and seem to promise a good business as soon as the weather grows milder.

While the lumber business is always slow at this season of the year, this has been particularly the case this year, and the volume of business thus far this year has been fully one-third less than for the same period last year. That the market has not become demoralized and gone to pieces under the dull trade is by some dealers attributed to the fact that mill men are carrying over so many logs. In former years it was the habit to run day and night to cut up all the logs they could get, but of late they have preferred to carry over a portion of their logs rather than cut everything and glut the market. Another element that tends to stiffen the market in spite of the low volume of business is the general belief that the balance of the winter will be a favorable one for dealers.

Loggers are still favored with the unusually excellent weather they have had for weeks past, and the natural consequence is a lively time in all the camps. There are but one or two places where any complaint is made, and that is simply a little scarcity of snow. The favorable winter will probably result in the putting in of somewhat larger stocks than had been anticipated. From no locality has there come any complaint of "soft" weather.

The Lumberman compiles the following table of visible supply of lumber on hand at principle wholesale markets, Jan. 1st:

Locality.	1884. Feet.	1883. Feet.
Mississippi Valley	1,195,595,632	989,049,980
Miscellaneous points	333,750,000	297,937,189
Total	3,592,910,487	3,122,370,946

The market for hardwoods still shows the spasmodic character previously noted, with few changes worthy of particular mention. Prices on upper grades are firm, but while our quotations on lower grades represent as nearly as possible the values on the average, such lumber is subject to all sorts of fluctuations. Consumers seem to have "got on" to the prevailing conditions, and when they want to place bills of log-run or culls, do considerable looking around.

The Lumberman's Gazette says:

To attempt to say anything important in regard to the lumber market on the Saginaw River at present would prove futile, as there is, literally speaking, nothing to say. The dearth of actual transactions is as decided as heretofore, and manufacturers are not looking for business of any account until the middle of February, at least. The very apparent and decided determination to not force the market in any manner is freely expressed; but the policy laid out, if we may believe all we hear, is to quietly await a demand which is very generally anticipated. Shipments by rail, which in the aggregate would seem considerable at less important points, receive very little consideration here. Whether the large amount of coarse stocks on the docks will result in too great anxiety on the part of owners and cause a deviation from the policy outlined is worthy of consideration, but manufacturers appear confident and little inclined to discuss that phase of the important question. Operations in the woods are being pushed with the greatest energy possible, and we still incline to the opinion that unless the weather interferes, the much talked of curtailment of the lumber cut will prove somewhat mythical. Men and teams are in more active demand than at the commencement of operations, and the full anticipated cut of logs heretofore reported will undoubtedly be at least met, if it is not considerably exceeded.

LUMBERMAN AND MANUFACTURER,
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The results of having too much low grade and not enough upper grade lumber is seen in the issuance of new price lists at Dubuque, Minneapolis, St. Paul and elsewhere, which shade down common dimension and boards from 50 cents to $1. There is no change in actual selling figures as lists have been generally shaded. Inquiries are more numerous and more respectable in size, many of the houses reporting plenty of winter amusement in figuring on bills for future delivery. News from all parts of the pinneries shows the most favorable conditions possible for securing a full cut of logs. Many still insist that there will be a greatly reduced cut of log as compared with last year, but it is feared generally that the crop will be larger than was intended. Reports from the Chippewa and Black River assert that there is as many logs banked on those streams as there was one year ago.

FOREIGN.

The Timber Trade's Journal says of the English market:

The year 1883 will be remarkable from the fact of there having been so strong a market for quality, not only in respect to wood, but to almost all other commodities as well. It is with timber, however, that we have only to do, and a most noticeable feature throughout has been the declining prices for common stuff with the apparent firmness for really first-class goods. The tendency of the present age seems to be to make cheapness the first consideration, and this necessitates the employment of only the lowest class material, so that when there is a demand arising for choice selected goods we find the market unequal to meet the wants of consumers, and prices naturally advance.

At the present time there are plenty of firms ready to snap up any choice goods that come under their notice, irrespective of price, while turning their backs on goods not coming under this denomination. First-class joinery timber is undoubtedly scarce, while for common wood there is absolutely no sale except at further sacrifices. Any of the public sales are sufficient to prove this without looking further.

The Montreal Journal of Commerce says:

The usual dullness of this season of the year prevails, with little if any inclination to purchase for future requirements. Buyers' and sellers' views are much apart. With the very limited demand and high prices there is no inducement to purchasers at the figures at which manufacturers are holding, as stocks are generally full. Reports from the country are that, owing to snow drifts, it is almost impossible to haul logs and that the stock at the streams and mills is only one-tenth of the output at this time last winter, but if the two next months prove more favorable the average may be reached, more especially in hardwood and basswood. Operations in the pine limits are more favorable.

NAILS.—Holders generally continue confident over the situation and express a determination to offer stock carefully in order to prevent any advantage going to buyers. The demand is a little uncertain, but between home and shipping calls takes off quite a fair quantity of stock and buyers bid promptly. There is some talk of extending the time for the resumption of work. Quoted at $2.60@$2.70 per keg for 10d to 60d, according to quantity.

PAINTS AND OILS.—The outward movement of paints, colors, etc., continues to increase somewhat, and jobbers appear to be gradually stocking up. This steadies prices and makes holders less anxious to operate, but does not reduce the offering, and no difficulty is experienced in filling orders. Linseed Oil meeting with a continued good demand at steady rates in pretty much all cases. Quoted at 56@58c. for domestic, and 58@60c. for foreign. Spirits Turpentine in only fair demand, but held steady at 34½@36c. per gallon, according to size of invoice.

PITCH AND TAR.—Nothing new. About the usual demand from regular sources, with stock enough to meet it and old prices ruling. We quote pitch $2.25@$2.30 per bbl., and tar $2.50@3.00 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.

MORTGAGES.

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given, and the amount. The general dates used as headings are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date.

Questions of Vital Interest to Insurers.

Do the policies of any other Company in a plain statement, or by implication, provide for the application of dividends to prevent policies from lapsing, if premiums are not paid when due?

THEY DO NOT.

Do the laws of any State, or the policies of any other Company, provide for the application of dividends to prevent policies from lapsing if premiums are not paid when due? THEY DO NOT.

Do the policies of any other Company, or the laws of any State compel a Company to receive a premium overdue upon a policy, without a medical re-examination, as long as any dividend remains to its credit? THEY DO NOT.

Do the policies of any other Company, or the laws of any State, compel a Company to pay the full amount of the policy after payment of one year's premium, should the second year's premium be overdue and unpaid at the time of death, although there may be dividends standing to the credit of the policy? THEY DO NOT.

No intelligent man will question this fact: The non-forfeitable dividend protection in the policies issued by is not furnished in the policies of any other Company, nor by the laws of any State; therefore gives the most insurance for the money, and its policies are the cheapest and the best.

J. T. LINDSEY, Business Manager.

FEBRUARY 9, 1884.

A bill has been introduced into the Legislature which deserves the careful study of New York real estate owners. Its aim is to restrict the erection of very high buildings on narrow streets. Clearly some such law should be passed, and at once. There should be some relation between the width of the streets and the height of the houses. No owner of property has a moral, and should not have a legal, right to erect a structure which deprives neighboring property of light and air. By all means let a wise enactment of this kind be put upon the statute books.

The Suburban Rapid Transit Company really seems to be at work. In addition to building a bridge over Harlem River at Second avenue, it has taken title to four lots on One Hundred and Thirty-seventh and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth streets and Willis avenue, presumably for a depot. As a director of that company explained to a representative of this paper, whenever the elevated road litigation was ended that then the work in the annexed district would be commenced and vigorously pressed. The price of Manhattan would seem to show that some insiders believe the trouble between the Metropolitan and the Manhattan companies is nearly at an end. Should this comprehensive system of local steam roads be undertaken simultaneously with the creation of the parks in the annexed district we may expect to see a lively real estate movement on the other side of the Harlem River.

The Land Transfer Reform Association has forwarded a petition to Albany, authorizing the Governor to appoint five lawyers as commissioners "to prepare and report to the Legislature a bill to facilitate and lessen the expense of transfers in lands and real property in this State." The same association has prepared two bills respecting this matter, which it probably hopes the commissioners will adopt. It is to be hoped these commissioners will be appointed, but this matter will never be pressed in a proper manner until the real estate interest is thoroughly organized in its favor. The nucleus of such an organization would naturally be the new Real Estate Exchange. It will never be a marked success as a business enterprise until conveyances of real property can be made as promptly and cheaply as is personal property. The present wasteful and cumbersome system has, however, many vested interests in its favor, and the reform will not be effected without a stubborn fight.

The bill which passed the State Senate prohibiting the opening of streets through the Bloomingdale Lunatic Asylum grounds, between One Hundred and Fourteenth street and One Hundred and Twentieth street, should be promptly vetoed by Governor Cleveland if it gets through the Legislature. It is unjust to property holders west of Morningside Park to permanently put a stop to improvements which are needful to the settlement of the neighborhood. If the asylum cannot afford to pay the necessary assessments for street openings, why not sell the very valuable ground they own and replace the lots by acres? If they wish to make a public park, with pathways across, then let the city pay for the improvements, but if New York is to grow it will not do to prohibit street improvements which are needed. By the way, the grounds of the Lunatic Asylum would form a magnificent site for a great Episcopal cathedral, one worthy of that rich, numerous and powerful denomination. A cathedral erected at this point would not only overlook a magnificent stretch of country, but would be literally "a church set upon a hill." It would command views of Morningside and Central Parks, of Long Island Sound, the two rivers, and the valley of the Harlem. The Trinity Church corporation should look into this matter.

From the evidence given before the Board of Health at the hearing of the Drain Pipe Manufacturers last Tuesday, it came to light that the present system of iron drains, adopted and sanctioned by that department, are not only defective but a source of danger to the public health. Mr. Powers, the Superintendent of Drains of the Brooklyn Board of Health, stated that he would not have iron drains in his own house, a remark which, coming from one of the most experienced plumbers in the State, ought to impress upon the New York Board the necessity of obtaining more light on this subject before insisting upon the continuance of the present regulations in regard to drainage. If there was anything which must have shook the faith of the Board in the iron drains now in use it was the frank statement of the Brooklyn superintendent. The president himself seemed a little surprised that the evidence was so strong in condemnation of the present system, to judge from the manner in which he questioned that gentleman. It is not our object to speak favorably of either the vitrified pipe or iron system of drainage, but one thing is clear, that the latter has not established the position held for it by the rules of the New York Board of Health. It would be well for the latter to confer with the Brooklyn department, so that full light shall be shed upon a question so important to the health of our citizens, and they will be wanting in their duty to the public should they show any apathy in this matter. Besides, if it be true that vitrified pipes can be introduced with safety, there is no reason why the Health Department should place its ban upon an industry which gives employment to thousands of people.

Some time since a count was made of the number of vehicles which passed up and down Broadway in twenty-four hours and it was found to average more than seventy-five hundred per diem, and the number is steadily increasing. The section between the Astor House and Maiden lane is literally impassable during prolonged periods, when the crowd of vehicles is greatest. Wise municipal and police arrangements would mitigate this engorged condition of lower Broadway, but these are lacking. Great trucks carrying stones, huge pipes, lumber and safes are restricted in London and other capitals to certain hours of the day when travel is infrequent. There is no such legislation in New York, where it is most needed. Then in certain streets in London where the crowd is greatest carts are permitted to go in only one direction. For instance, Murray and Warren streets, under London rule, would see all the horses proceeding in one direction—down the one street and up the other. This would be a great relief. Then omnibusses should be excluded from lower Broadway. The present condition of our streets is intolerable. Broadway must have a sub-street, or a comprehensive system of a cable road must be put into operation which will carry freight as well as passengers. A well built elevated road on our river front, with tracks for freight cars, would do much to remove carts, drays and express wagons from the principal streets of the city.

New Work in Wall Street.

Owners of land in the neighborhood of the Stock Exchange do not seem to be much affected by the threats of indignant brokers to ruin them by removing the Exchange to the City Hall Park, or even, as some wild spirits will have it, to Union square. A new eight-story building is nearing completion next door to the Exchange. Around the corner in Wall street, between Nassau and William, is a big and very costly edifice, running through to Pine, and large enough to accommodate, or as they will have it, to incommode, a large number of brokers, and, if need be, a colony of lawyers, in addition to the two banks for the use of which it has, we believe, been primarily built.

Architecturally this building consists of two fronts, each about 70 feet in width, that on Pine street of red brick and gray granite, very plainly treated, that on Wall of granite of different tints, much of it polished, and with an unusual amount of rich carving. The fronts are similar in general disposition, being divided by pilasters and entablatures vertically into three stages and laterally into a wide central bay and a narrow bay on each side. The Wall street front has seven stories under the main cornice, and a parapet story now building above that line.

The Pine street front does not call for much remark. It looks like what it is—the back of a building. The basement is of granite; the entrance, a large round arch, with voussoirs alternately rough and smooth continued into the courses of the wall. The square openings are divided by a peculiar mullion, which is a most confusing and objectionable feature. It is not a mullion nor a pier, nor yet a corbel, but combines all three, protruding from bottom to top like a corbel, though without any sort of reason, and having a moulded capital like a pier, and performing in an awkward way the function of a mullion. The pilasters which mark the two stories next above the basement have moulded capitals in granite, and the pilasters above them carved capitals in the same material. The color is unfortunate, the granite making the brick look very raw and the brick making the granite look very white. Bluestone would have been far better for appearance. In design the merit of this front is the clearness of the division into parts which are not disproportionate to each other; its defect, the excessive scale of all the detail and the strain after novelty in some of it. Upon the whole this front is a disagreeable object, owing most of its disagreeableness to its glaring color.

The Wall street front has the same general motive, carried out in conspicuous disregard of expense. The main doorway, which we may presume to be a peculiarly striking and ostentatious feature, is as yet hidden behind its hoardings. All that is visible of the basement is in polished granite, the polish, by darkening the material, giving an emphasis to the structural features. Unfortunately, above the basement the granite is polished only in those parts which are subordinate, and a mere filling of tracery between the important constructional members, horizontal and vertical, which are much lighter in color. The result is a sense of incongruity and confusion. Above the basement are two-story pilasters forming the next division. The place of the capitals on the outer piers is taken on the intermediate piers by large stones with heavily carved medallions, and between these in the central division is an oddly arranged mezzanine floor lighted from square-headed openings divided by the dropsical mullions already noted, which are here executed in polished granite, and are of much absurdity. A strong entablature completes this division of the building. The next is composed of the three stories, the pilasters all running through and crowned with carved capitals. The mullions are polished granite pilasters with moulded caps and bases, except in the uppermost story, where the bulging mullion reappears. A parapet story above the cornice is now building. As before, the clearness of the division is the main merit of the design. It was a mistake, however, to crown the lower piers with capitals, thus setting one big pilaster on top of the other. If these lower piers had been simply masses of wall the uppermost would have gained much in effect and the general effect of the front would have gained more. The free use of polished granite is the main peculiarity of the design, and is highly unsuitable to the outside of a commercial building. It would have been more effective here if it had been consistently employed to accent the parts of constructional importance, instead of being used at random so that strong parts and weak parts are emphasized indiscriminately. The detail is knowingly enough designed, but is excessive in scale and thus becomes coarse in effect. We do not know who the architect is but we should conjecture that he was the author of Mr. Sloane's warehouse in upper Broadway, from the use of polished granite in the two buildings, and with more confidence that he was the author of the granite house in Fifth avenue, opposite the park, from the corbel-pilasters which appear in that edifice, and which no architect would be led by anything but misguided paternal fondness to reproduce. The present edifice is more aggressive than either of the others, and recalls the remark of Dryden about Elkunah Settle that "his style is rough-hewn and boisterous."

A much modester work is the brick office building, fifty feet wide and eight stories high, next the Stock Exchange in Broad street. It has a brown stone basement of three low arches between which the piers project as buttresses, and being produced upward in brick work, divide the front into three bays. The buttresses continue through three stories, where segmental arches are turned between them, and the openings fill the bays thus formed. Above are three more stories under the cornice with coupled openings, slightly varied in treatment and aligned over those below, with three dormers, the central one the largest, above the cornice. There is nothing swaggering about the front, which has an unpretentiousness quite refreshing after the Mills building, just opposite, or the front we have just been considering. The basement is very good in itself, but is inadequate as a base to an eight-story building. The chief fault of the design, however, is the cutting the front in two in the middle by the arches over the fourth story, and the abrupt change of motive at that point. If the brown stone basement had been continued through another story, and four stories had been included under the arches, instead of three, with a more enriched story under the cornice, the building would have had a beginning, a middle and an end in proportion to each other, whereas now it has an inadequate beginning and two middles of nearly equal size and value. The detail throughout is quiet, scholarly and respectable.

Mr. James McHenry wants the American railway companies to adopt the English system of handing over all the profits to the stockholders and issuing new obligations for extensions and betterments of the road. Doubtless it would be wise to adopt some such system so far as our trunk lines are concerned. But the United States is not England and Scotland. The latter is a densely-settled country, with its railway system practically complete. The former is thinly settled, and its roads are built generally, not for the benefit of shareholders but to develop and populate new districts. Wealthy men, towns and counties subscribe for stocks and bonds to get a road, without expecting a profit. Sometimes these roads pay a return for the investment, but they generally go through bankruptcy and have to be reorganized. This will doubtless be the fate of the Northern Pacific, the Denver & Rio Grande, the Texas Pacific and all the newly-built roads in thinly-settled countries. Mr. McHenry also claimed that there was such a thing as "ghost trains," that is, freight and passengers carried which did not appear in the books of the company, but the returns for which were pocketed by the directors and managers of the road. Of course the leading railway people were indignant at this grave accusation, and they asserted that a wholesale fraud of this kind would not be possible. There is a way, however, by which the railroad managers exploit their several roads and for which they should be called to account. They are the owners of parlor-car stocks, of fast freight lines, of stock-yards and other properties essential to a railroad, which organizations are parasitic, reaping profits which properly belong to the stockholders of the several companies. That is one of the secrets of the enormous wealth of the leading railway men of the country.

Three Per Cent. Rentals.

Prof. Felix Adler must be credited with good intentions in wishing to reduce rents for the very poor to three per cent. upon the capital invested.

To question a philanthropic object is always an ungracious task, for, after all, the heart prompts to actions which the head cannot always approve. Suppose a million of dollars were raised to build improved tenement houses which would be rented for a smaller sum than the less desirable apartments furnished by the ordinary capitalist. Is it not obvious that the final effect would be the withdrawal of capital from a non-productive field and its employment in enterprises that would yield a better return? The Adler tenement houses would come into direct competition with the owners of other tenement property. These last would become impoverished, or rather they would be forced to reduce their rents to a lower figure than those of the improved model houses. A certain class of landlords would thus be deprived of means, and other would-be landlords discouraged from building homes for the poor. This would result in a few years in limiting the number of tenement houses and making the remaining accommodations scarcer and dearer than ever.

All plans looking to helping the poor have this grave defect—that they injure the self-respect of the latter, for they no longer rely upon themselves. It is clearly the duty of the State or community to see that every one of its members is decently housed, and that the surroundings to all habitations should be wholesome. That is a matter of general regulation and should apply to all citizens, for the millionaire may have his house so built as to be unwholesome, and all centres of contagion should be suppressed, whether on Fifth avenue or at the Five Points. But no class should be picked out for special help. What the community should try and guarantee to every able-bodied man and woman is a good day's work at remunerative wages. When this is done the question of rentals will take care of itself. Then if we educate the so-called lower classes, not only in the "three 'R's,'" but in technical schools and inculcate besides a sense of decency and cleanliness, there will be no need of special provision by rich people to build model lodging houses which interfere with the legitimate profits of invested capital.

Herbert Spencer has pointed out in more than one of his works, that any interference with the ordinary operations of trade, even with the best of motives, generally ends disastrously. It is the business of shrewd capitalists to cater to the actual wants and necessities of all classes of the community. Make it an object for them to supply homes for the poor and they will accomplish their work in a far more practical way than can philanthropic capitalists who are willing to make a present of half their just profits to tenants. The problem to be solved is not unnaturally cheap rentals for a few of the poor, but how so to increase the wage fund that every workingman can make a decent living for himself and family.

The manufacturers of insurance maps have, in the transaction of their business, made a discovery which will disquiet some real estate owners. It seems that the maps of our city surveyors are often inaccurate. Blocks which should measure 800 feet are sometimes less or more than that amount, and literally thousands of houses overlap the lots actually owned by the persons who take title. A leading Pine street broker is authority for the statement that there is one block on New York island every house of which occupies a portion of a neighboring lot. The political engineers and draughtsmen who have from time to time been employed by our city departments have been careless in their measurements, and many an innocent holder of real estate is unaware of the fact that his house occupies ground of right belonging to his neighbor. There ought to be some provision by law to set this matter right; that is, where it can be shown that the city maps have been followed claims for damage should not be allowed for innocent trespass on the part of an owner or builder.

Over the Ticker.

THE bull movement rather petered out last week, but the bovines say they are only resting to get up wind for a renewed upward surge of prices.

THEN the bears are not very lively, and fear to put out lines of shorts. Hence their support is not to be looked for when the time comes to cover.

THERE are, however, powerful influences at work favoring higher prices, and a determined effort will be made to advance the market upon many important specialties.

A DEAL in Pacific Mail is on the cards, also on all the Vanderbilts, on Manhattan and the Grangers.

THE advance in Lackawanna was due to the arrangements just made to charter vessels on Lake Erie to convey coal to the cities on the lake region, and supply the West with that fuel. This will add largely to the overtaxed tonnage of the road.

YES; it looks as if gold will begin to leave our shores early this spring. This, with the contraction of the bank currency, will make money as tight further along as it is now easy. A famine is apt to follow a feast.

THE bulls would do well to make hay while the sun shines, for should money be in demand by April the bears will be encouraged to sell the market again.

SO all the pool troubles are settled. The railroad managers have agreed to make all they can out of the little business now offering.

Our Prophetic Department.

INQUIRER—Suppose, Sir Oracle, that we have a conversation on desultory topics. Do you still regard the business outlook as hopeful?

SIR ORACLE—Some weeks ago, you remember, I thought the time had come for a change for the better, and I, moreover, said that the first indications would be the stock and iron market. Well, the flurry in stocks has come and prices have advanced along the whole line, and now comes the welcome news that Thomas, who has led all the great reductions in iron and steel, has advanced his prices 50c. a ton for pig iron. Then the tone and feeling in the dry-goods market is much better than it has been. I am beginning to look for quite a fair business this spring.

INQUIRER—But our agricultural products are not going forward to Europe. Exchange is very near the gold-exporting point, and manufacturers everywhere are either reducing wages or shortening time. Surely these are not the conditions which lead to an improved state of business.

SIR O.—Oh! I do not look for any "boom," or even a very profitable trade, but simply for an improvement upon the depression which has prevailed for over a year. It may take some little time before the better feeling in the stock market shows itself in the general trade of the country. Notwithstanding the falling off in the eastward shipments of wheat and corn, you will notice that, contrary to expectation, the business of the Northwest and St. Paul roads is larger this year than last. A fact not to be lost sight of, is that the farmers have sold their wheat, that the stocks at the grain elevators and the large visible supply is in the hands of the speculators. What is called the in-bound business on the railways is flourishing, because the farmers are buying. There are an immense number of new settlers in the Northwest, whose household wants can only be supplied from the East. Hence, the improved receipts of all the Western roads. I look for a further advance in the stock market, with a serious break further on.

INQUIRER—What effect will Congressional action have on trade? What do you think of the Morrison bill?

SIR O.—The new tariff reform bill is a sensible and judicious measure, but I doubt if it will pass. With some symptoms of improving trade business men would complain of any tariff tinkering. They only look to the immediate future, and dread even the wisest changes which may reduce the price of articles they have already on hand. The present tariff came into existence last March, and neither party will risk the experiment of making changes, in view of the presidential election next fall.

INQUIRER—Who are the most likely candidates for the Republican nomination for the presidency?

SIR O.—Chester A. Arthur, of New York, or Robert Lincoln, of Illinois, with the chances in favor of the former.

INQUIRER—I can understand the force of Arthur's position, but why Lincoln?

SIR O.—Because he is the son of his father and has wit enough to keep his mouth shut. All our favorite presidential candidates have been reticent men. Your brilliant, demonstrative persons are distrusted by the American people when presented to them as a possible chief magistrate. Draw up a list of all who aspired to the presidency and compare it to those who secured that coveted honor, and you will find that the able and brilliant men will be in the former list, and the safe and secretive ones in the latter.

INQUIRER—Who will be the Democratic candidate?

SIR O.—I give that conundrum up. But he will be a Western man, a lawyer and a revenue reformer. Either Carlisle or Morrison would make good candidates.

INQUIRER—What are the chances for city reform at Albany?

SIR O.—Very poor. Rosevelt's amendments will pass the Assembly only to be beaten in the Senate, which is under the control of the Republican and Tammany machines. The Mayor of New York, with real authority and responsibility, would interfere with the patronage of all the wire-pullers of the several factions. There will be no charter reform that will amount to anything this year.

INQUIRER—I see the wheat market has had something of a "bulge" within the past week; was it justified by any new development in the breadstuff market?

SIR O.—The rise of pork from $11 to $17 per barrel would naturally enhance the value of all other food, but it seems to me that the times are not propitious for a decided advance in grain. The visible supply is very much larger than it was this time last year both in Europe and America. The consumption is not any greater in Europe, because of the impoverishment during the past year of the working people. Then the rain in California insures a large wheat crop there. The winter wheat east of the Rocky Mountains promises well, and our grain year is drawing to a close with large stocks on hand. There may be a blight of wheat in May or June, but it seems to me that before the former month there will not be much chance for speculation on the bull side.

INQUIRER—Why should not cotton be somewhat higher? A well-known operator says the requirements will be 6,100,000 bales for the commercial world, while, judging by the receipts, the supply will not be more than 5,800,000. Stocks in the United States are 210,000 bales less than in 1883, when the crop was 5,500,000, and the price in August was 13 cents.

SIR O.—The world is poorer than it was in 1882; the consumption less, and the stock of cotton goods on hand very much greater. I am not a bull in any of these products, the values of which are being squeezed out by the pressure of the gold unit of value. Bad news in June or July may put up August cotton, but the consumptive demand will, I judge, be less this year than last.

The Real Estate Exchange.

The following facts about the Real Estate Exchange may prove interesting:

1st. Title has been taken to the property on Liberty street, corner of Liberty place. Rentals commenced on February 1st, and the present return is about $27,000 per annum after paying taxes. This will continue while the alterations are being made, after which it is estimated that the rentals will bring in between $33,000 and $35,000 per annum. But, of course, this does not include the returns expected from the auction room, which ought to increase the revenue from the whole site some $8,000 additional, as well as give the Exchange rooms for its executive offices.

2d. The standing committees are all at work. The one on the Exchange and Auction Room is organizing the Information Bureau. A plan has been adopted for keeping an accurate record of all sales of real estate running back for many years. Maps will be provided, showing the condition of all city improvements already made or in contemplation by the city authorities. Everything about real estate in this city will in time be found on the maps and in the books kept by the Exchange. The maps of the Health Department will also be utilized, showing the sanitary condition of every district in New York. Property holders, who are now so often unexpectedly assessed, will hereafter, by keeping en rapport with the Exchange, be kept informed, and so save interest on delinquent assessments.

3d. A General Committee on Legislation, composed of leading subscribers to the Exchange, has been appointed. This body will be composed mainly of real estate owners. The names will not be announced until the committee is organized. It is expected that this committee will keep informed of what takes place at Albany and the City Hall, so as to guard the interests of city taxpayers. It will also be expected to do what it can to effect a reform in the laws relating to the transfers of real estate, so as to get rid of the long delay and the wholly unnecessary expense in the purchase and sale of real property.

4th. An architect has been appointed to effect the necessary alterations in the Marquand building, so as to furnish an auction room much superior to the one in the Trinity building. It will be a room over thirty feet in height and will be well lighted on three sides. Work will be commenced on May 1st, when the building No. 65 Liberty street will be torn down to give an entrance to the auction room, and to make the front conform to the rest of the Marquand building.

From the above it will be foreseen that matters are progressing as well as can be expected at the newly organized Exchange. On the recent call for 40 per cent. of the stock there are very few defaults, there have probably been some fifty transfers of stock, but in every case wealthier and more influential purchasers have taken the place of the original subscribers.

Certain persons, representing wealthy bankers, are negotiating for the purchase of the vacant ground on lower Broadway, opposite Bowling Green and adjoining the Field building. It is rumored that this site may be chosen for the Stock Exchange. Many members of this institution say the accommodations of the present Exchange are insufficient, and that it is impossible to purchase adjoining property at any reasonable figure. Then it is further claimed that the office rents in the neighborhood of the present Exchange are altogether too high. Lower Broadway is plentifully supplied with first-class office accommodations, and there are many buildings which could be further utilized to provide accommodations for brokers. The plot adjoining the Field building has a front of 160 feet, and runs back on one side 200 feet to Greenwich street, but the average depth is fully 180 feet. This would afford ground enough to make an imposing structure, which the present Stock Exchange certainly is not. Architecturally the Broad street building is not worthy the great organization which occupies it. The real estate brokers, in casting about for a site of their proposed Exchange, at one time seriously contemplated purchasing half the vacant ground adjoining the Field building, but the judgment of the majority of the committee was against erecting a building at so great a distance from the present real estate centre. There are several other institutions which will require large buildings in time. The Mining and Petroleum Exchanges are now to be consolidated, when they will have over two thousand members. They have a fund of nearly $300,000 already and could easily raise a million, hence they will be tempted to erect a building within a short time, as their present quarters are entirely inadequate.

Home Decorative Notes.

—It is exceedingly gratifying to note on the part of the American people that everything of an artistic nature that contains merit need not necessarily be imported, and that we have learned that articles of equal beauty and the same artistic value may be made in our own country, if native talent was aided more by our wealthy citizens, the encouragement thus received would go a long way towards assisting those who are striving to build up a reputation among us.

—Hammock pillow covers of pongee are very effective when powdered with sprays of cyclamen or thistles.

—A delicate panel for a thermometer is made of gray satin, with a cluster of trailing arbutus painted or embroidered in one corner; for a creamy back-ground dark purple and yellow pansies are very effective, fasten on the thermometer with very narrow satin ribbon.

—A very effective and simple covering for a sofa pillow is of canary-colored Surah silk; at each of the four corners are sewn tiny, flat black velvet buttons; only a small square of the silk should remain in the centre of the cushion.

—The antique craze still rages, and each one aspires to be a possessor of some one choice piece of ancient furniture; many quaint pieces of solid mahogany, including tables claw-footed sofas upholstered in tapestry, and chairs of the Colonial period, which are quite suggestive of comfort, are offered by Sanderson & Co. of 930 Broadway.

—Very pretty cane and umbrella cases are made of leather, and painted with pond lilies, fleur de lis and graceful grasses.

—Small pine cones are quite effective for decorating the round white straw work baskets.

—A very effective change is made in the wild rose design if some two or three of the roses are represented with the petals nearly blown off the stem, showing the calyx and stamens in fine relief with only two or three petals attached, while all the others are scattered on the ground of the fabric as if blown away by the wind.

—A pretty light hanging for a fancy table is made of fine ecru linen thread, crocheted in some fancy pattern, run satin ribbon through the spaces and finish the edge with a heavy tied silk fringe.

—A very showy design for chair cushions of olive-green felt is a bunch of yellow lilies, outlined with filling silk, and a spider's web wrought of fine gold cord.

—The Queen Anne darned work is very effective and so quick of execution that it still continues in high favor. For this style of embroidery the very fine French crewels or etching silk may be used. A charming chair back is a square of peacock blue or crushed strawberry pongee, with the pear design, with the fruit and leaves in darned stitch and outlined with a contrasting shade. Most exquisite and varied styles of this work may be found.

—At the rooms of J. B. Shepherd, 927 Broadway, there is no lack of hand-wrought decorative subjects, embroidered fabrics of every variety, plush table and piano covers of rare and elegant designs, toilet sets, of which the most delicate textiles are chosen, in which are included the India silks and pine-apple cloth; most exquisite and original designs for carriage robes were also noticed.

—An exceedingly pretty piece of embroidery for a sofa pillow is made by taking strips of blue satin and embroidering them with pink moss rose buds and the maiden-hair fern, alternate with these strips, plush or velvet bands of a contrasting color.

—Handsome cushions of plush add to the beauty and comfort of the antique Boston rockers now so much in vogue, if fastened on by means of bright ribbons, the effect is enhanced materially.

—For either gas or kerosene the glaring white shade is much relieved by fancy shades, a novel and quite inexpensive one can be made of black lace with gold dots, finish with a full frill of lace, and fasten about the edge of the shade with a bow of gold and bright ribbon combined.

—Looking-glass forms a happy medium for hand painting, frames for photographs are made of it, and an extremsly graceful and favorite design is the Michelmas daisy, the purple and whitewood violets are also extremely delicate, many very beautiful specimens of this style of work was recently noticed at the Woman's Exchange, No. 4 East Twentieth street.

—Glycerine may be found serviceable for removing coffee and other spots from white or bright colored materials.

—Fashion now decrees that the scarf of velvet or plush should fall from the centre of the table.

—A panel for a calendar is covered with lavendar satin and painted with a bunch of lilacs, at the left corner, running diagonally, are traced the following words: "Come what may, time and the hour runs through the roughest day."

—The bent wood furniture is growing rapidly in favor, it is very light, indestructible and capable of being worked up in many graceful designs; numerous and varied styles of this furniture may be found at 814 Broadway.

—For portfolio card and letter cases, the pressed leather with colored fruits and flowers and applied silver ornaments is much used.

—The gracefully-shaped vases, urns and plaques of Benares ware, with quaint India carving, are much admired for cabinet pieces.

The Harlem River Improvement.

It is not to be presumed that anything more serious than delay can result from an appeal in the litigated cases affecting the projected Harlem River improvements, on which a decision was recently rendered by Judge Lawrence. It is not a supposable case that there are any peculiar rights attaching to riparian ownership along that river which can prevent the ordinary operations of the laws of eminent domain, and though legal gentlemen, intent on the pursuit of fees, may be willing to maintain a case as long as it can be made productive, it is hardly likely that in such a cause they ever dream of victory. The Harlem River will be improved as fast as the legal formulas can be settled and appropriations for the work secured, and we are at liberty to forecast the effect on the commercial movements of the port.

Had the obstructions been removed from Hell Gate, and the Harlem River converted into a ship channel twenty-five years ago, the results by this time would have been very great. A supplementary port would have sprung into existence, and the East River might now have presented a solid line of dock improvements all the way from the Battery to the mouth of the Bronx River, always supposing that, in the possession of the right of eminent domain, the city of New York is not predestined to strangle its own commerce. But now these improvements will come at a rather belated era. They will be undertaken in the face of a strong movement in the other direction, a movement, too, encouraged by every physical advantage. The best accommodations for commerce to be found in the port of New York are beginning to be seen south of Governor's Island; and as every advance in that direction is at once an advance nearer to the sea, and nearer to several of the great lines of transportation that serve the commerce of the port, it is evident that any movement northward will be made in the face of strong and effective rivalry. To what extent this rivalry will affect the future of property valuations is a question of much interest to investors.

It is believed by many that a large proportion of the European shipping will eventually pass through Long Island Sound. It is possible that a few ships trading to Europe may be diverted to that route, but that any large number will leave the old beaten track is not considered probable by those who have most carefully observed the present tendency. First, the difference of a few hours in the length of a trip between New York and Liverpool, or any other European port, is regarded as a matter of no consequence. We have strong sympathy and admiration for these ocean racers that make fast records, but in selecting one of two routes for a seven or eight days' voyage we would hardly stop to inquire whether we could reach our destination at ten o'clock in the morning or five o'clock in the afternoon. Second, it is not thought by any means certain that a route through the Sound could be made the quickest route. Over a distance of about thirty miles eastward from the mouth of the Harlem River the channel, considering the amount of traffic which it already bears, is narrow, tortuous, and so subject to fogs as to be frequently dangerous. On this portion of the route there would certainly be no opportunity for an ocean racer to show his paces; and even the widest part of the channel, covered with sailing craft, is not wide enough for a race course. It is believed to be very doubtful indeed, taking one trip with another, if the Sound route could be most quickly made; and when we consider the chances for collisions, and the occasional destruction of a ship, events which, it must be remembered, too frequently happen even in mid-ocean, and with alarming frequency in the broad English channel, the prospects for the selection of the interior route past Montauk Point are not considered flattering. A third reason that renders the choice of a route through the Sound improbable is more strictly commercial. While sharing equally, but without any point of superiority over other portions of the harbor, the ability to reach the traffic of the Erie Canal, the neighborhood of the Harlem River remains in every other respect the most inaccessible section of our vast water front system. Only one of the great trunk line railroads, the New York Central road, approaches this water way, and though the construction of the projected bridge across the Hudson River above the Highlands, at Cornwall, may open a way for the trains of the West Shore and Erie roads, it is not quite certain that the managers of those roads will ever think it worth while to build the sixty and more miles of additional and vastly expensive track that would be necessary to reach New York. In its commercial isolation, therefore, with only a glimmer of possible benefits to result from a future extension of these two roads, the neighborhood of the Harlem River must contend against sections of the harbor easily accessible from all points and already pretty well equipped with terminal machinery. It is not from the north, east, and west alone that commerce seeks the port of New York, it comes up from the South by railway and the coastwise trade, soon, probably, to be vastly increased by the completion of the Panama Canal and the extension of our commerce with South America, must always seek an entrance through the Narrows. This will prove a powerful factor in maintaining the southward tendency of harbor improvements, and, looking into the future, it is easier to conceive of a day when the steamers trading to Europe will find their accommodations in the Lower Bay, on the south shore of Staten Island and the west shore of Long Island, than in the vicinity of the Harlem River. A line drawn directly east from the Great Kills, on Staten Island, passes several miles out to sea to the southward of Coney Island, and offers a sufficiently direct route to Europe.

Nevertheless, the improvement of the Harlem River cannot fail of producing very happy results on the future development of New York. It may not send the Produce, Cotton, and Stock Exchanges to Fordham, as some of our more enthusiastic paragraphists seem ready to suggest, but it will utilize a large section of territory which has too long been permitted to run to waste. For all manufacturing work that needs ready facilities in the handling of goods and material, it will offer unsurpassed advantages, and it is a possibility on account of these improvements that the industrial interests of the city may one day be concentrated mainly in the upper wards. It is easy, indeed, to foresee a development of enterprise in the neighborhood of the Harlem River which will lead to a large increase of population, and extend the boundaries of the city still many miles to the northward of the present lines.

It will be interesting to watch the events of the next few years and to see the effects of the rivalry between the two extremities of our harbor. A new factor promises to enter into the contest from the direction of New Jersey. Senator McPherson is said to be about to make a modest request for a Congressional appropriation of $7,000,000 for the improvement of the navigable waters of his State, and as the Federal Government has never done much for New Jersey the Senator is entitled to something. The projected work, it is to be presumed, is an extension of the improvements begun under the charge of General Newton several years ago at the head of Staten Island Sound, opposite Elizabeth, extending thence southward to Perth Amboy and the Lower Bay. This section is the hope of our sister State, and the water at present is in many places too shoal for the service of a first-class commerce. Another answer to the Harlem River gun comes, as usual, from South Brooklyn. At the mouth of Gowanus Bay, on the southern side, opposite the Erie Basin, preparations are being made, it is said, to construct still another improvement covering a large space, thus narrowing to a still shorter line the gap that separates our enterprising rival from Bay Ridge. Realty at Albany.

ALBANY, February 7.

A little progress has been made this week in connection with bills affecting realty and public interests in New York city. The Roosevelt bill, placing the sole responsibility of appointment of heads of departments in the Mayor, by abolishing the requirement that these appointments shall be submitted to the Board of Aldermen for confirmation, has been advanced to third reading in the Assembly, and will pass that body. There is doubt about the Senate. The bill as passed does not apply to the present Mayor, but to his successor to be elected next fall.

Senator Gibbs, the only Republican in the Senate from New York, introduced a series of bills to-day providing a radical change in heads of departments. There are five of these measures. They provide for the election, at the general election next fall, of a Comptroller, Corporation Counsel, Commissioner of Public Works, and Commissioner of Parks, each for the term of three years, to take office in January next. It abolishes the Board of Park Commissioners and confers the duties on the one commissioner so elected. It terminates the term of the present Comptroller with this year. He also has another bill to elect on a ticket at large a President of the Board of Aldermen, who is charged with all the duties of the president of that board, as the presiding officer, member of Board of Apportionment and other duties, and is also a Lieutenant-Mayor, succeeding him the same as a Vice-President does a President of the United States. The bill relative to the Corporation Counsel wipes out the Attorney for Collection of Arrears of Personal Taxes and also the Corporation Attorney, who attends to collection of fines for violation of corporation ordinances, requiring the force in the Corporation Counsel's office to perform those duties. Mr. Gibbs hardly expects to pass all of these five bills, but will specially press three—the election of the Comptroller, the Corporation Counsel, and a President of the Board of Aldermen.

Assemblyman Lewis, of New York, presented a bill to-day requiring the searches which are now made by the Loan Commissioners in the examination of titles of real estate in the city of New York, to be made by the Register without extra cost. The Loan Commissioners loan money belonging to the United States Deposit Fund on bond and mortgage. These are recorded in the Register's office. There appears to be no reasonable excuse for the requirement or expense of a separate search to be made by the Loan Commissioners when there is a record of the mortgages in the Register's office. The bill will make the position of Loan Commissioner less lucrative and take away his perquisites or fee on each piece of real estate transferred, but it reduces the cost of examining titles and transactions in real estate. It is therefore of benefit to property holders and dealers in realty.

Engineer John Lockwood on Tuesday night appeared before the Assembly Committee on the bill amending the Ramapo Water Act, so as to enable him to carry out his plans for the introduction of salt water for the extinguishment of fires. He had drawings of his plans to exhibit to the committee, which appeared to meet with their favor, but the bill was laid over until next week to obtain the views of the city officials.

Mr. Howe, of New York, has introduced a bill to restrict the height of flats erected in New York. It provides that the height of all dwelling houses and of all houses used and intended to be used for more than one family, hereafter to be erected in New York city, shall be regulated in proportion to the width of the street or avenue upon which they front. The height, measured from the side wall line and taken in all cases through the centre of the facade, including cornices, attics and mansard, shall not exceed 75 feet upon all streets not over 60 feet wide, and 80 feet high in streets and avenues over 60 feet wide. That is a person who buys a lot on a 70-foot street can build and claim to own five feet nearer the sky than a person who buys on a 60-foot street.

The Senate has passed the bill for laying out a park at Coenties slip. It authorizes the Board of Street Openings to locate and lay out a public park of such dimensions as they may determine on land in the First Ward, known as Coenties slip. When said Board shall have determined the location and dimensions of the park, they shall prepare and file maps in the office of the Register of Deeds, in the Department of Public Works and Department of Parks, and on filing the same the land included in the boundaries shall become a public park. The Department of Parks is charged with the duty of the regulation and management of the said park.

The bill to prevent the construction of a railroad on, over or tunneling under Washington square has passed the Senate and now goes to the Governor.

The act prohibiting the opening of streets through the grounds of the Bloomingdale Asylum has also passed the Senate. It was amended so as to confine the prohibition to streets from One Hundred and Fourteenth to One Hundred and Twentieth.

The act changing the name of Stuyvesant square to Cooper Park has also passed the Senate.

The Senate Committee on Cities has fixed next Tuesday afternoon as the time to hear what the advocates and opponents of the proposed changes of the building laws of New York, embraced in the bill presented by Senator Daly, have to say on the subject. All builders who are interested are expected to make their objections known then, if they have any.

The same committee will on Thursday next hear arguments for and against the bill to lay out the parks in the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards, as recommended by the Commission to Locate Parks in its recent report.

The bill which passed the Assembly two weeks ago, to set apart Pier 31 and the bulkhead between that and Pier 30 on the East River, for vessels engaged in the tropical fruit trade, has been reported adversely and killed in the Senate.

Three or four years ago there was an act passed creating a commission to review the assessments for street and Boulevard improvements on uptown property, and to adjust those assessments. Two members of that commission, Edward Cooper and George H. Andrews, have resigned during the past year. Senator Gibbs has introduced a bill amending the act by naming Thomas E. Smith and Joseph Garry in the place of the two who have resigned. No other change is made.

The commissioners recently appointed under the Rapid Transit act of 1875, by the Mayor, at the request of the National Cable Company, which has control of the Hallidie Cable motive power patents used in Chicago and San Francisco for propelling street cars, are desirous of having additional time in which to decide upon what streets in New York to recommend the application of that cable system as the motive power. The law of 1875 only gives the commissioners appointed under it ninety days to lay out routes and report. Those connected with the Cable Company have sent a bill here amending that act so as to give the commissioners six months. The bill has been up twice in the Senate and meets with the united opposition of all the Senators from New York city. It has been advanced to third reading, but beyond that its advocates have not been able to push it. The same measure was before the Assembly to-day, when a strong opposition was also developed; it was finally laid one side. The existing street railroads, the present elevated and the incorporated underground companies appear to be afraid that the commissioners will interfere with them in some way, and all of these interests combined have helped to stir up this opposition. The time in which the commission has to act under the law as it now stands being about up, so much time having been occupied in its visit to Chicago, the commission has accepted and reported two routes up town for the application of the cable system, one on One Hundred and Fifty fifth street, extending from the Hudson River Railroad to Eighth avenue, and one on the Kingsbridge road, between One Hundred and Sixty-second street and Spuyten Duyvil. It is probable that other routes will be decided upon before their time expires, even though routes are selected which they will not use. The opposition to their bill extending the time does not enable them to perfect their plans as to routes for applying the cable power, and it is probable that another commission may be appointed in the near future to lay down additional routes.

The bill to make the improvement on Fourth avenue in front of the Seventh Regiment Armory, asked for by that regiment, makes slow progress. The improvement would close the opening over the railroad tracks, and extend one block the distance in which there is no opening to let out the foul air in the tunnel; that particular opening is the first one in the deep cut, there being no other for several blocks north. Railroad authorities state that the closing of that opening will greatly add to the discomfort of people riding on the cars through the Fourth avenue tunnel in the summer. There being so many trains passing there the inconvenience and effect of the close air on passengers will be too great to run the risk merely to furnish a place for the officers of the Seventh Regiment to mount their horses four or five times each year, without being disturbed by the trains below them. The residents of Yonkers and the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth wards, especially those of the latter, who patronize the trains in the side cuts of the tunnel, object to closing that air hole. The bill has been reported, but the opposition from causes enumerated are so great that it makes no headway.

Mr. Oliver has introduced a bill appropriating $1,000 for improvement of the park at Five Points, known as Paradise Park, to be used in setting out trees, furnishing benches and removal of railing.

The Health Department and Vitrified Drains.

The Board of Health on Tuesday last heard an application of the Vitrified Drain Pipe Manufacturers to amend the rules of the Board so as to enable vitrified drains to be laid in buildings throughout the city. Among those present or represented were Messrs. Stewart & Co., G. W. Rader & Co., John Cooper, Henry Bieg, the Salamander Works, Otis & Gorsline, of Rochester, and Messrs. M. D. Valentine & Bros., Charles Annis & Sons and C. W. Boynton, of Woodbridge, N. Y., the latter represented by Geo. T. Walker, attorney, Mr. J. J. Powers, Superintendent of Drains of the Brooklyn Board of Health, and the latter's counsel, Mr. Geo. F. Elliott, attended on behalf of the Health Board in the sister city, and Dr. Kramer, representing the Sanitary Health Society. The drain pipe manufacturers were introduced by Mr. Walker, who was followed by Mr. J. M. Heatherton, editor of the Plumbers' Trade Journal, who argued in favor of the vitrified pipe, stating that if the Board of Health enforced certain conditions and made a thorough inspection, vitrified pipes would be preferable to the iron pipes now used. At the request of the president, Mr. Powers gave the results of a test made by the Brooklyn Board of Health between the vitrified and iron pipes, from which it appeared, after a severe test, that out of eight joints in a vitrified pipe only one showed a leakage, whereas there was a leakage in every joint of the iron drain. Mr. Powers, whose wide knowledge and experience in plumbing has constituted him an authority on this matter throughout the State, was closely questioned by the president and several gentlemen present, when it was elicited that the present system of iron drains was not by any means satisfactory, and that there was scarcely a single block in New York where they would not be found defective, to the great danger of the health of the people. Mr. Powers was pointedly asked, "Would you use iron pipes in your own house?" and he replied, "I would not." Dr. Kramer criticised Mr. Heatherton, and urged upon the Board to seriously consider the matter before coming to any decision. He represented the same interest as the Board—the people, and he was anxious that the best system of drainage should exist, no matter what that might be. Mr. Stewart said that should the Board consider it necessary for the drain pipe makers to manufacture their material thicker and perfect, they were willing to comply with any rules laid down by the Board and subject their material to the most vigorous inspection before approval.

The principal point under the consideration of the Board was whether Portland cement formed a perfect joint in the case of vitrified pipes. The manufacturers strenuously assert that it does, and they are willing to submit to any test which the Board will make to prove the correctness of their statement. They say that iron rusts and corrodes and that it cannot be made of uniform thickness, objections which cannot be raised against the vitrified pipe. They state that the life of an iron pipe, so far as its safety from the escape of sewer gas is concerned, is but four to ten years, whereas the vitrified pipe, properly jointed with the best Porland cement, would last practically for a thousand years. The president, after hearing the evidence, stated that the matter had once before been considered by the Board, which had come to the conclusion to adopt the present system. The Board would now reconsider the matter and make its decision known shortly. Doctors Johnson and Smith were specially appointed to report on the matter. Mr. Powers stated that he had been requested by the Brooklyn Board of Health to endeavor to obtain conjoint action with the New York Health Department. The former intended to carry out their experiments to their full extent and thought that the two bodies should conduct their tests together, so as to enable them to come to a satisfactory conclusion on a matter of such vital importance to the public health.

Concerning Men and Things.

Monsiegnor Capel gained his reputation by his personal magnetism and hearty, genial manners in the drawing room. He is not, however, an orator of either the first or second order. True, he speaks heartily and fluently, and his logic is unimpeachable, but he is neither witty nor pathetic, fanciful nor imaginative; in short he cannot compare with Father Burke, who was a really eloquent divine. Monsiegnor Capel's ability as a speaker was fairly tested in the Nineteenth Century Club, where he had an audience composed of the very creme de la creme of New York fashionable society. He was given an hour to defend his faith and a half an hour at the close to answer his critics. These were the Rev. Mr. Pullman, a Universalist clergyman, Rabbi Gottlell, of the Jewish faith, and T. B. Wakeman, on behalf of the Positivists or Agnostics. These three were allowed twenty minutes each. The Rabbi rather bore off the honors of the evening, but the other gentlemen were almost equally felicitous in expounding their views. The Monsiegnor, however, got the best of it in the newspapers, as he had wisely prepared a synopsis of his report, which was used by the lazy and inefficient city editors of the daily press, who rarely can see anything important outside of a police court. The debate was extremely interesting and would have been eagerly read if given in full. Yet only three papers noticed it at all.

"I never," said a well-known architect, "enter an elevator at the top of a building without fear and trembling, for I know that, in all probability, at the bottom of the shaft there is a steam boiler, an Irishman and a bottle of whiskey." It is now proposed to apply electricity to the running of elevators, which would dispense with the boiler and the bottle of whiskey, but might involve an Irishman. Elevators have become so great a necessity in all large cities that it is desirable that some means should be found to render them as nearly safe as anything human can be. In this case the machinery for creating the electricity can be located in a building that will furnish power for the whole block.

A valuable source of art inspiration was suggested by Mr. B. Braman the retiring President of the New York Microscopical Society, in his address at the sixth annual reception of the latter, on Friday evening week. He said that your microscopist is the practical seeker after the true, the beautiful, the good; that conscience is the human microscope, to apply to the striæ and papillæ of human action and feeling; that among feelings sympathy is universal, and but seldom is there to be found so little of it in an individual as to make him an object for microscopical investigation. And he continued that artists should use the microscope in study so as to draw and paint the better from knowing more intimately nature's methods of coloring and shading, as the sculptor understands anatomy; and that many novel designs are placed by the microscope at the command of the artist, especially when the particular members and features of objects are studied; thus the pattern of the wall paper of my lady's bower should, be fashioned after the wing of a butterfly; that of the dining-room after the heart of an oyster (which Mr. F. W. Devoe exhibited actually showing its pulsations), or the transparent web of a frog's foot, with the blood corpuscles in motion clearly indicating the network of arteries and veins (put before our eyes by Mr. J. L. Wall); the library should be decorated with a micro-photograph of the Lord's Prayer, such as shown by W. C. Hubbard, Esq., with its 268 letters occupying a space of one one-hundredth of an inch square; the sick-room should have on its wall paper enlarged copies of the beautiful wheel-shaped crystals of the kinate of quirria, to reconcile the patient with his medicine; while the bedroom should have insect scales, arranged in the form of a vase of flowers (by Mr. G. S. Woolman), or an enlarged bill of a mosquito. We will not dilate further on this opening for the artistic fancy, but look for additional suggestions from Mr. C. Van Brunt, the incoming President, who showed an excellent specimen of the Tingis hyalina, with its leaf-like thorax and wing-covers, and which might look well ornamenting a nursery.

The Cable Roads.

The Rapid Transit Commissioners have decided to recommend not only longitudinal but transverse cable roads which, taken together, will form a complete system of intermural travel. The system they recommend was substantially the same as was outlined editorially in The Record and Guide three weeks ago. One elevated road is to be constructed on the Hudson River front with a branch in Tenth avenue, and such other connections as will make all the west side and the northern portion of the island available for city travel. The transverse roads recommended are as follows:

Across town through Liberty street and Maiden lane, and back by way of Maiden lane and Cortlandt street.

Across town through Chambers street, New Chambers street and James slip, and back through New Chambers and Duane streets, with a branch up Madison street from New Chambers to Grand street and to the East River.

Across town through Watts street to Sullivan street, through private property to the intersection of Thompson and Broome streets, through Broome street to Mangin, to Broome slip and to the East River.

Across town through Barrow, West Fourth and East Fourth streets.

Across town through West Fourteenth street to Eighth avenue, to Greenwich avenue, to West Thirteenth street, to East Thirteenth street, to Second avenue, to St. George's place, to First avenue, to East Thirteenth street, and to the East River.

Across town through Twenty-second street.

Across town through Thirty-fourth street.

Across town through Forty-second street, with a branch through First avenue to Thirty-fourth street and to the East River.

Of course there will be powerful influences to oppose the adoption of this very complete system. The company may ask too many privileges, but they are sure to be opposed by the existing horse-car interests which so far have managed to secure the influence of the daily press on their side. Every general railway law authorizing the construction of horse-car lines has been denounced as a job, but the growth of the city will force the adoption of some such system as that proposed by the Rapid Transit Commission.

Agents on Spring Rents Uptown.

J. G. & S. D. Folsom & Co. think that rents will be about the same this spring as they were last year. There would probably not be any advance in house property down town. Rents would hold their own. Business property on the line of Broadway did not rent as well in some instances as in 1883. They could rent tenements and private houses down town easily, as they were very scarce in desirable locations. They did not think that the business of the past year would justify any advance in the rent of stores, excepting in a few instances.

W. H. Roome's Son thinks rents will be about the same as last year, except on long leases expiring May 1st next, on which there would of course be an advance proportionate to the increased rentable value of the property since the commencement of the lease.

In the office of J. Romaine Brown there had been a good deal of enquiry during the past week or two. Flats up to fifty dollars per month would rent easily, though above that figure they would not rent so readily. There would be no difficulty about renting private houses on the west side up to Fifty-ninth street, as they were in good demand. They did not think rents would be either higher or lower this year. They would simply hold their own. There would be a fractional increase in business property in some instances, though on the whole they would be about the same as last year. Store property in the dry-goods district did not rent so well this year. Lofts were lower, and one case was mentioned where there was a reduction of about 7 per cent.

Leonard J. Carpenter finds no difficulty in renting house property in his neighborhood. People were looking for private houses more than formerly. Rents would hold their own from Forty-second street downwards, though no advance might be expected to take place except in rare instances. Business property on lower Broadway had not done so well this year, though in many cases rents were renewed at old figures.

S. F. Jayne & Co. think that on the whole rents will be pretty much the same this year as they were last. Old leases which expire May 1, next, will be higher, but those dating only a year or two back will not be higher, or at all events they will be much higher. Stores on the west side avenues will be fractionally higher in some instances, though not sufficient to make the advance felt by the tenants. This was a presidential year, and quite apart from the general aspect of business, it was usually the experience that presidential elections were not favorable to an advance in rents. Next year, should business improve, a rise in values as well as in rents might reasonably be looked for.

Real estate agents in Harlem say very confidently that there will be no advance in rents in Harlem this spring. Flat and tenement house building had been quite overdone, and there were a large number untenanted. There would probably be a reduction here and there in that kind of property. Private dwellings will, no doubt, hold their own, and, in case of old expiring leases, show an advance. There was a better demand for three-story and basement houses. Dwellings all the way from $750 to $1,000 a year, and flats and tenements from $12 to $25, or thereabouts, would hold their own. There were more small private houses required in Harlem, and for the present less flats. Agents on the east and west side, above Forty-second street, and in all parts of the city also express the opinion that rents will not be advanced this year.

The Buckling of Piers.

To the Editor of The Record and Guide:

In answer to the note of "Civil Engineer," printed in your issue of February 2, it is sufficient to point out that the relation between the buckling strain and the crushing strain in a pier is a constant relation, and is not affected by the material, mode of construction or absolute strength of the pier.

Engineer.

George H. Scott, Secretary of the Real Estate Exchange, wishes it to be known that the Board of Directors have not extended the time for the payment of the 40 per cent., and neither do they intend to do so, as only 30 out of 500 subscribers are delinquent and these are persons who evidently have forgotten to attend to the matter. Any of these, by applying at the office of the Board, can have the amount they had subscribed returned, as there are numerous applications for shares at par.

Where land is placed in the hands of a broker for sale the owner has himself a right to find a purchaser and sell the land without paying a commission, according to the opinion of the Supreme Court of Indiana, in the case of Stuart et al. vs. Murray, decided on the 9th instant. The Court said that the reservation of such right by express agreement is not necessary; that it exists in the absence of an express agreement on the part of the owner that the broker alone shall have the right to sell the land.

Why More than One Broker?

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

For many years I have felt that in selling real estate, as well as anything else which can be done by one for another in a representative capacity, as an agent or attorney, there should be a special employment for such duties as may be required to negotiate a sale.

In no other business transaction does a man go round the list of business men in the same line and ask them all to try to do a certain thing for him, and, as it now seems to be in real estate, the one who does it first to be paid. For it is not uncommon to find that the same piece of property has been given to a very large number of agents, all of whom try to make a sale, which, in my judgment, does the real estate no particular good, nor is it pleasant or elevating for the broker.

Now it seems to me that it would be possible to give the property for sale the same chance to be presented to applicants and yet have only one broker employed to sell it, and he may make such arrangements with other brokers for their assistance as he may see fit.

I would like to have the question agitated, so as to have the views of experienced brokers, as well as owners, on the subject, will you, therefore, present the question to your readers and invite their views thereupon?

CYRILLE CARREAU.

REMARKS.—The confusion which prevails at present in the employment of brokers will be done away with as soon as the Real Estate Exchange is in working order. One of the objects of the Exchange is to correct the evils complained of by our correspondent.—Editor RECORD AND GUIDE.

Real Estate Department.

The official record of transfers for January are unexpectedly favorable as compared with the corresponding month last year. There is an increase in the number of Conveyances, while the consideration is $3,000,000 more than last year. Of course the annexed district shows a much better business, the Mortgages also are less than last year, and here is the table:

CONVEYANCES.

	1883. Jan.	1884. Jan.

The official list of Conveyances this week compare very favorably with the corresponding week of last year. Nearly five million and a half was invested, against less than three million last year. Then the Mortgage indebtedness is much less this year. The business in the annexed district is growing rapidly. Here is the table:

At the Exchange Salesroom during the week the attendance has been good, particularly on Thursday, the offering consisting entirely of improved property, which commanded fair prices. On Tuesday the five-story marble front office building, No. 33 Nassau street, which rents for $15,200, was offered by order of the executors of the Stuart estate and sold for $165,000 to Robert Stuart, a party in interest. On Wednesday the four-story brick office buildings, Nos. 54 Wall street, together having a frontage of fifty feet and four inches, were sold by court orders in partition. In order to ascertain whether the property would bring more if divided into two parcels than it would if sold in one, the easterly half was first offered and then the westerly half, with the understanding that the property would afterwards be offered as an entirety, and then the sale was to be decided by giving the property to the highest bidder, providing that the amount of such bid was larger than had been bid previously for both halves. The east half was knocked down for $100,000, and the west half for $110,000, to G. P. Wetmore. Then both parcels were put up together and finally knocked down and sold for $355,000 to E. Ellery Anderson and James A. Scrymser. The sale was confirmed, as the sum was $145,000 in excess of the prices bid for the parcels separately.

There is a decided improvement in the feeling of the real estate market. The transactions are more numerous, and there is no doubt but what the better influences that are at work in Wall street have had their effect upon real property. Mr. George H. Scott, the secretary of the Real Estate Exchange, is very confident of a good market this spring. Improvements are under way on the west side which will greatly help property in that quarter. Up-town apartment houses, he thinks, injure the price of land in their neighborhood. He thinks the law should interfere to prevent property holders from taking away the air and light from their neighbors by erecting unnecessarily tall buildings.

It is a noticeable fact that there are fewer foreclosure sales, as a comparison will show that there are not half so many as there were this time last year. The few forced sales of this kind are generally of unfinished houses erected by speculative builders. Another healthful sign is the small number of foreclosure suits compared with previous seasons. It appears that there is so much money lying idle that embarrassed property holders find little difficulty in getting means to meet their pressing engagements, and they thus avoid forcing the market with their holdings under legal pressure. The majority of recent sales were under partition suits to settle estates. Private offerings of property have been very few indeed; however the number of these are increasing, as will be seen by our advertising columns.

Among the notable sales last week was the building No. 54 Wall street. The front of the lot is 50.4, with an average depth of about 116 feet. It brought $355,000, or about $57.56 per square foot. The other notable sale was No. 33 Nassau street, between Cedar and Liberty, also occupied by a five-story marble building which rents for $15,200 per annum. The lot is 31.5 front x 97.9 x irreg. x 59 5. The price it brought was $165,000, or about $54 per square foot. The Real Estate Exchange purchase in Liberty street cost about $54 per square foot. The following gives a comparison of recent sales which will interest holders of down-town property:

The outlook for west side property, between Riverside and Central Parks, above Seventy-second street, is better than ever before. There are many desirable plots offered at reasonable prices, but none better located than the one on the northwest corner of the Grand Boulevard and Seventy-fifth street, offered for sale by Mr. W. H. Kelly, whose advertisement appears in this paper. This plot is upon the only block of the Grand Boulevard commanding an unobstructed view from Fifty-ninth to One Hundred and Fifth street. All the assessments, except one for paving Seventy-fifth street, are levied. The rent from the house and stable is $3,000 per year, more than double the amount of the taxes, and makes the place self-supporting. The increase in the value of the property will furnish the investor a very large profit upon the original cost.

Richard V. Harnett will sell at auction, on Tuesday, February 12th, the five-story basement and sub-cellar marble front building, No. 64 Reade street. The sale is by order of the Trinity Church corporation of Utica, and the property is particularly valuable for store purposes, being about 200 feet west of Broadway and in the centre of the business district. On the 12th inst. the same auctioneer will sell, peremptorily, the five-story double tenement and stores, No. 123 Essex street, corner of Rivington street.

E. H. Ludlow & Co. will sell, under order in partition, a number of desirable dwellings on the west side, including No. 145 West and Nos. 114 and 116 West Fortieth streets, all well-built four-story brick houses; No. 427 West Thirty-seventh street, a three-story and basement brick building, with frame building on rear, and No. 569 Seventh avenue, on which is a four-story brick building. Also No. 2101 Madison avenue, on the northeast corner of One Hundred and Thirty-second street, 19.11x80, with an excellently-constructed three story stone front dwelling, 19.11x43.3. As will be seen, each of the parcels mentioned are well located, and the sale should prove an attractive one to investors.

On Thursday next A. H. Muller & Son will offer, at executors' sale, a number of valuable parcels, consisting of the five story brick stores Nos. 192 and 194 Chambers street, the four-story brick stores Nos. 179 and 180 West street, and a similar building, No. 124 Warren street; also store buildings on No. 181 Front street, 29 Burling slip and No. 236 Front street, and the five-story office building Nos. 130 and 132 Water street. As all of the above-mentioned premises lie within the limits of the district devoted to business, and include sites not often disposed of under the hammer, we look for a large attendance on the date announced. This property has been in the Faile family for about fifty years.

John F. B. Smyth will on Friday, the 15th inst., dispose at public sale of the valuable four-story brick building, No. 471 Sixth avenue, 20x64.6. The sale will be positive and worthy the attention of operators and investors. Mr. Smyth will, on the same day, sell by order of the executor of Mary C. Ross, the four-story and basement stone front dwelling, 15.1x50x100, No. 333 Second avenue, and Nos. 234, 236 and 238 East Seventy-fourth street, each being four-story and basement stone front dwellings of a desirable class. The sale will also include a plot, 100x108, in the town of Westchester.

The Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited).

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

A number of the original subscribers to the stock having assigned their subscription receipts, and application having been made at the office of the corporation to transfer the same, the Board of Directors acting under the advice of counsel have passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, that when the shares of stock in the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited) have been fully paid for, the company will recognize as entitled to the certificates of stock subscribed for those persons who hold the receipts of the United States Trust Company, or the duly authorized agents of the corporation, for the various calls for payment for them duly and properly transferred to the person who holds the receipt for the final payment thereon."

The directors take this opportunity to acquaint the stockholders that the call of 40 per cent. on the capital stock of the company has been readily responded to, enabling them to take title to the premises known as the Marquand building, Nos. 59, 61 and 63 Liberty street, on the 1st inst., paying $150,000, which together with the amount previously paid ($20,000) and the mortgage ($180,000) makes the full amount of the purchase money ($350,000), and having entered into possession of the premises the company is now in receipt of rents from February 1st at an annual rental of $34,640. The purchase of the adjoining lot will be completed on the 1st of May next.

Plans for the alteration of the building have been prepared and approved by the Board.

Arrangements are in progress for a complete system of listing real estate, and affording information as to mortgages, leases, transfers, assessments, sewers, paving, gas and all other similar points. These, it is expected, will be thoroughly in order by the time the Exchange is ready to open, which it is expected to be by 1st of November next.

A Committee on Legislation has been appointed by the Board of Directors selected so as to represent all the different interests involved in real estate. GEORGE H. SCOTT, Secretary.

Park Commissioner John D. Crimmins has commenced the excavations for the erection of a number of private houses on Sixty-eighth street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues. He is endeavoring to secure the co-operation of all the property-owners on both sides of the street to restrict it solely to the erection of good private residences. Mr. Edward J. King is his colleague in this endeavor which, if successful, will result in creating a select neighborhood of this locality, similar to that of the Clark estate nearby. Should the property-owners all agree to the proposed restriction, Mr. Crimmins will build eight fine private dwellings in an advanced style of architecture, each 18.9x55 and extension, and Mr. King twelve or thirteen similar houses, 20.9x55. They will all be four-story brick, brown stone and terra cotta houses, and will be set back 5 feet on the front of the street. Messrs. D. & J. Mr. Wallace C. Andrews, president of the New York Steam Company, states that the corporation is about to erect an extensive structure for the generation of steam, covering their new purchase of real estate east of First avenue on the south side of Forty-ninth street. The company, he says, is a great success, and by supplying cheap steam in that district will greatly enhance the value of real estate in that part of New York for manufacturing purposes.

Editor Record and Guide:

I have been agent for the renting and collecting of rents for certain property for some years at a specified percentage on the sum collected; no further agreement was made except in several cases. Leases have been given to the tenants and signed by the owner. Some of these leases have several months to run yet, and one has over a year yet unexpired. All of them were made by me since I took charge. The owner, at this late day in the month, says, I am going to make a change on the 1st February, without assigning any reason or cause whatever. Now the question is, have I any claim in my favor for the renting of unexpired terms, to wit, on some from 1st February to 1st November next, and on others from 1st February to 1st May, 1885, and am I, in duty bound, to return to him the leases which I hold for the unexpired terms without receiving any remuneration?

Golgatha.

Reply—You are entitled to your commissions for renting, but not for collecting, for those unexpired terms. And while we recall no particular decision of court that holds that you have a lien on those leases and can keep them till you get your commissions, we think that you, as an agent or broker, have such a lien, and would be justified in retaining possession of them until you get your pay.

Law Editor.

The Supreme Court of Missouri held, in the recent case of Hutchinson vs. Jones, that where a lessee under a written lease sells his lease, and the lessor assents, and the assignee continues to pay the rent to the lessor, who receives it without objection, there is an accepted surrender, and the lessor cannot afterwards, upon the failure of the assignee, call upon the lessee to pay the rent.

M. & S. Sternberger are great believers in the future of New York realty, and especially business property. They say that the latter is becoming more difficult to purchase every day. They had made an offer for a piece of business property of what might be considered a very good figure, which the owner had refused. They knew of a case in which $35,000 had been asked for a small brick building and lot, but when the offer was subsequently made it was held for higher figures, until it could now be had for only $100,000 or more. They had a large number of friends in the dry-goods district, and found that a great many annually put their surplus earnings into real estate, considering it the best investment they could make. Mr Arnold, for instance, of the firm of Arnold, Constable & Co., had told them that he had for many years made it a practice to do this. Though it was quite true that it had been customary for many merchants to invest their earnings in railroad securities, they found that owing to such developments as the Transcontinental, West Shore and other stocks and bonds had shown, those of them who had made money during the past year had in many instances put it in realty. Stocks certainly did seem cheap at present figures, and offered a large return on the capital invested. But there was no telling to what figure even the best securities might depreciate, whereas there was always the assurance that realty was not subject to fluctuations of this kind. Business property in good locations was becoming scarcer day by day, and there were more willing to buy than there were to sell. People who invested in realty might get a smaller percentage on their outlay, but they had found that this was generally more than made up by the increasing value of the property. Rents were not better this year, in some cases they were not quite as good as last year, but people were used to a smaller return on their capital in choice property, for they knew that its value would appreciate year by year as desirable realty on the island became scarcer and scarcer. Had Generals Winslow and Jordan and the stockholders of the West Shore Road put their money in real estate instead of West Shore securities, they would have been in an infinitely better position than they are to-day. Mr. M. Sternberger had only recently returned from a lengthened stay in Europe, and after considering the position of realty in London, Paris and other European cities, he was more than ever convinced on his return here of the great future which must necessarily lay in store for New York real estate.

Special Notices.

All kinds of electric light fixtures and appliances are to be seen at Bergmann & Co's, Nos. 292 to 298 Avenue B. This firm was the first in the field in introducing the Edison light, with the endorsement of the great inventor himself. One of their specialties is a "three light combination electric light and gas bracket, which can be lighted either by gas or electricity, according as desired. Architects, builders and owners ought to call at the above establishment and arrange to introduce the electric light into the houses of the future. Owners would certainly increase the value of their property by doing so.

OFFICE RENTING.

The use of diagrams in renting offices has come to be universal. Many of the newer buildings have been rented almost entirely from them. To many persons a plan showing the arrangement of rooms, with sizes of each, conveys a better idea of their adaptibility for special requirements than an inspection of the premises themselves. The convenience also of seeing at one place all the offices offered to rent in a given locality must be recognized by every one. Mr. Ferdinand Fish, of No. 149 Broadway, corner of Liberty street, who probably rents more offices than anyone in the business, has adopted a system that is bound to be popular. He has, at large expense, prepared full scale plans of a dozen or more buildings on Broadway, between Wall and Chambers streets, and on other streets, showing all the offices to rent in each, which he sends gratis on application, together with lists published every two weeks during the season, giving descriptions and prices. By sending your address on a postal-card much time and trouble may be saved in the disagreeable task of "office hunting."

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—It continues to be very much of a weather market for Common Hards, not so much as regards supplies, but as it may affect consumption. Indeed it is calculated that the number of bricks in hand and available for use, should opportunity present, is sufficient to keep work going for some time without inciting new calls, and expectations in consequence are not based upon a sharp improvement in demand or tone. Still we find quite a number of the Trade who think they can see fair indications of increasing interest among buyers, and who feel that with anything like a mild, open spell an opportunity would be afforded to place quite a quantity of stock on new calls. The offering since our last has been made up principally from the few parcels remaining afloat, and such odd cargoes as could be worked forward from open points, and the sales were of almost too irregular character to afford an opportunity for positive valuation. Indeed about the only quotations that can be given are nominal in character and represent the asking rates about the same as last week, viz.: Haverstraw (nearly all gone) $8.50 per M, Long Island $8 00 do, and Jersey $7.00, though of the latter sales have been made at $6 62½ during the week. Both the Jersey and Long Island manufacturers continue the effort to get stock forward, and we are also informed by a leading maker of an intention to place Staten Island brick on sale during the coming week if possible. No Pales have of late been reported sold, but there is a demand for them for some extent, and $4.50 per M could probably be obtained on attractive lots of stock. Reports current of comparatively low rates ruling in Brooklyn. We learn upon investigation that dealers there have really been underselling the wholesale market, and that parcels on pier were parted with for less than it would cost to replace them. Most of the sales thus made, however, were from early purchases and afford the seller a margin.

GLASS.—After a lock-out of about six months the Western manufacturers and their employees have at last come to terms, and by the time this reaches our readers production will again be under way at a large number of the factories. The operative glass-blowers and their advocates are disposed to claim more or less of a victory in the ending of the strike, but stripped of all nonsensical sentiment the net result seems to be simply as follows: The manufacturers have spared six months wear and tear on their plant; have sold out every foot of glass on hand at a much greater price than could have been obtained under any other probable circumstances, including plenty of stock that had come to be considered almost dead, and commence operations without an old and unsatisfactory accumulation to trouble them; while the workmen seem to have simply lost hundreds of thousands of dollars in wages inflicted more or less suffering upon their dependent families and obeyed the behest of the "Unions," until absolute want compelled a cutting loose, and the acceptance of terms said to be in some respects less favorite than at first offered. Business does not greatly increase as yet, and the general tone of the market is rather easy with a further small shading aliowed on imported stock.

HARDWARE.—Trade still a little slow, but dealers think they see signs of improvement, and the general tone of the market inclines toward steadiness for standard goods at least. Several changes in lists have of late been made, but about the only one of interest to our readers is by the Stanley Rule and Level Company, showing the following discounts: Plumbs and Levels—Non-adjustable, 65 per cent.; Patent Adjustable, 65 do.; Nicholson's Patent, 20 do; Iron Frame, 2[illegible] do.; Machinists', 20 do. Pocket Levels, 65 do. Planes—Bailey's Adjustable Iron and Wood, 20 do.; the Stanley Adjustable Iron and Wood, 20 do; Leonard Bailey & Co's "Victor" Adjustable, 20 do. Planes—Reading 20 do; Rabbet, 20 do.; Bull-nose Rabbet, 20 do; Tonguing and Grooving, 20 do. Plane Irons, 20 do. Rules—Boxwood, Stanley's, 70 do; Ivory, Stanley's, 50 do.; Ivory, Stearns', 50 do.; Miscellaneous, Stanley's, 50 do. Try Squares, 55 do. Try Squares—Improved, Iron Handle, 20 do.; Adjustable, Iron Handle, 20 do.; Inlaid, 20 do.; Plumb and Level, 20 do; Try Square and Bevel Combination, 20 do.; Try and Miter Square, Winterbottom's, 20 do.

LATH.—It has been a quiet market again for want of supplies and the absence of offerings of parcels to arrive. The general indications, however, continue quite firm, and the rate remains where it has stood fully supported for some two or three weeks past at $2.50 per M. Two full cargoes were sold upon which that rate was established and odd lots since in commanded the same, and also some invoices from a canal boat load of Northern stock carried over yard accumulations are working down gradually, and many structures are said to be approaching a point that must add considerably to the consumption of lath.

LUMBER.—Taken all in all, dealers generally appear to retain a confident feeling to keep values up to about the former level, and there is at least no increase in the volume of complaints for the week under review. This is generally expected to be about the dullest season of the year on local account, and a light irregular distribution excites no special comment except where there is a disposition to seek unfavorable features and use them as a basis for grumbling and the chances are that within a very few weeks trade must in the natural course of events, pick up somewhat and afford a better opportunity to place stocks. Even with the comparatively small amounts taken, however, there is already noticeable a slight running down of stocks in yard, and this fortifies the position of dealers at a time when no important additions can be made. Shipping grades in particular have made a shrinkage, and especially those suited to the South American market, as the exports last month were very full. Sellers, however, after the experience of the past year, are unwilling to indulge in any very sanguine feelings, and the safest policy is thought to be in the acceptance of all fair bids from reliable sources, the more so that advices from most primary sources lead to the inference that the cost of fresh supplies next season will not be greatly increased.

Eastern Spruce has had a more or less unsettled market, but, so far as shown on the reports made, the fluctuations were not of an unusual character, nor does there appear to have been any permanent gain secured by either buyer or seller. For a short time during the past ten days or a fortnight a pretty full supply was available, including some cargoes from Maine, and quite a full number from the provinces and, though a portion went into yard on contract, there was a little stock left over to sell. It was not an altogether easy matter to find customers as some who really wanted stock were unable to secure delivery owing to ice in slips, etc., and others with better facilities for handling stood off. There is reason to believe that under the circumstances low figures were in a few instances accepted, but the majority of reports claim "about former rates," and with most of the supply now worked off the position is fairly steady again, on a general range of $13@16 for random, with 5c. to $1 or $1 50 to be added for specials, according to cut.

White Pine develops little change worthy of note. The movement of supplies has been about equal to the former average, the consumptive wants not greatly increasing and requiring only an ordinary assortment, but buyers really in need of stock bidding somewhat promptly at full former rates on desirable parcels. On foreign account business has been fair, and some dealers predict an early revival of demand to at least the full value of last month. We quote $18 50 @22 00 for West India shipping boards; $28 00@30.00 for South American do.; $17.00@18 00 for box boards, and $18.50@19.00 for extra do.

Yellow Pine really continues under neglect. There has been a few fair sales made of late, but they amount to little in comparison with the quantity of stock available if wanted and the low terms still ruling. The reduction in the number of competing sellers through the award recently made of a few large local contracts and quite liberal amounts to be cut for f. o. b. orders, does not appear to create scarcity beyond certain points, and buyers by simply letting it become known that they are on the market generally secure close and careful attention and find no addition to cost attempted. An ordinary random would have a hard time of it on the market at the moment. We quote as follows: Randoms, $20@22 per M; Specials, $21@.3 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $24@25; Dry do., do., $25@26; Step Plank, $30@45 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $14@16 for rough, and $1?@21 for dressed. Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports, $13@15 for rough, and $18@20 for dressed.

Hardwoods have been delivered with a little more freedom of late, but mainly on old contracts, as the demand is at the moment somewhat limited. Desirable stock, however, remains well in hand, and owners confident enough to insist upon full former figures in all cases Really good cherry and ash are wanted, but culls have no place on the market. There is said to have been fair trading in medium walnut for yard stock. We quote at wholesale rates by car-load about as follows: Walnut, $65@110 per M; ash, $35 @40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@3[illegible] do.; cherry, $40@75 do.; whitewood ½ and ⅝ inch. $25@30 do., do., and do. inch, $28@38; hickory, $45@55 do.

The chartering of vessels for lumber cargoes has not been very brisk of late. Among other smaller vessels we note a bark from St. John, N B, to Liverpool with deals, 52s. 6d; a bark from Pensacola to United Kingdom, sawed timber, at £5 10s, and two or three vessels from Southern ports to South America with lumber at $17 up to $19, according to voyage.

The exports of lumber from the port of New York during the month of January last, and since January 1, were as follows:

	Feet.
To West Indies	1.4 4,000
To South America	4,146,000
To East Indies	863, 00
To Europe	21.0 0
Total feet	6,484,0 0
Previously reported this year	nil
Total since Jan. 1, 1884, feet	6 484,0 0

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

THE WEST.

The Chicago Northwestern Lumberman as follows:

CHICAGO.

AT THE YARDS.—The slight indications of improvement in demand noticed last week have not developed into any very marked increase of movement as yet. At some yards orders are being received more frequently than during the first half of January.

It is not apparent that there is a great endeavor being made to sell lumber by offering to concede in price, though it is hinted that some concerns that intend to go out of business or remove their yards, or others that are hard pushed for money, are offering considerable reductions.

Dry stock is not in excessive supply, and a brisk run of trade for two or three weeks would break assortments, so that it would be difficult to fill orders for some descriptions of inch common and better, especially 12-inch, 12-foot common and cull boards and some kinds of strips. Two by four 12-foot, and 2x12 dimension, under 18-feet long, are in only ordinary supply, and such assortments could be easily rendered scarce. The only drawback to the hope that prices can be maintained, is the fact that several of the yards are going out of business this spring, and concessions may be made on such stocks. Yet, as usual, it is likely that the trade here will take care of most of such offerings, and thus prevent a slaughter of prices.

Nothing since the last issue of the Lumberman has occurred to interfere with logging. In some districts there has been an increase of snow, with the weather so mild that it has packed nicely and put the roads in better condition for long hauls than they were before. In some of the towns at the mouths of the rivers a thaw has shown itself, but we are unable to learn that in a single case it has affected unfavorably the work in the woods. It would take but a brief, sharp, general thaw, however, to leave the loggers on bare ground on some of the streams. But such a thaw, however soon it may come, would be no detriment to the lumber industry. The logs already secured, with the old ones left over, are sufficient to run the mills in some sections, and there is a surplus in others, while in a few there would be a deficiency. Yet all this is idle speculation. A great many logs will inevitably go in from this out, thaws or no thaws. As long as there is freezing weather nights, ice roads will be made by sprinkling. A shortage of logs for 1884 is not even among the possibilities.

A slight improvement in the volume of trade in hardwoods is reported by most of the dealers since our last report, but no consequent improvement in values. If prices were satisfactory with the volume of trade now existing, hardwood merchants would not be disposed to complain, for nothing of any great magnitude is expected at this season. The moderating of the temperature, and the removing of the embargo which the intense cold and subsequent heavy snows laid upon trade, would naturally have a favorable effect.

SOUTH AMERICA.

This week's mail steamer brings reports from Rio Janeiro as follows:

Pitch pine—There have been no arrivals and while there is considerable quantity afloat and loading for our port, the article is still quoted at 42$000—43$000 per dozen.

White pine—No arrivals, and the market is unchanged at about 12 reis per foot.

Spruce pine—No arrivals, and still quoted at about 35$000 per dozen.

Swedish pine—Is still quoted at 35$000—36$000 per dozen. None arrived.
